Navy Planes Aid Maryland Hunt For Lost Boy, 7

Boat Found, Body Sought in Creek

Kidnap Theory Scouted by Father, Coach at Annapolis.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., May 16.—As a full company of midshipmen from the Naval Academy scouted through woods, and naval planes and boats aided in the search, the hunt for the missing son of a Naval Academy athletic instructor tonight centered in water of a creek near his home.

Belief that Frank Sazama, 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sazama, missing since yesterday afternoon, may have drowned in Weems Creek was strengthened when a rowboat was found adrift there. Midshipmen and oystermen immediately set to grappling with their long-handled tongs.

Midshipmen Aid Hunt.

The midshipmen, 240 strong, were ordered out by Rear Admiral David Foote Sellers, superintendent of the academy, upon request of Capt. Giffen, director of athletics at the academy. They were utilized in combing the woods and fields surrounding Annapolis.

Piloting one of the Navy planes, was Lieut. (J. G.) Tom Hamilton, head coach of the Navy football team. Use of planes greatly expedited the search, as the waterfront around Annapolis is broken by many small bays and creeks, making a search on foot difficult.

Scouts Kidnaping Theory.

Descriptions of the boy were sent to Maryland State police and to police in Washington and Baltimore. Annapolis police aided in the search here.

The boy has been missing since 2:30 p. m. yesterday, when he left the West Annapolis School. His parents became alarmed last night and asked Sheriff Joseph A. Alton to assist in a search for him. Sazama also said he would notify the Deparament of Justice in Washington and seek aid of Federal officers.

Sazama said there was a possibility his son may have been kidnaped, but added he did not put much credence in such a theory.

Answering a request from the Maryland authorities for bloodhounds to aid in the search for missing 7-year-old Frank Samaza, the Lorton Reformatory replied that the dogs' usefulness had passed since they can not follow a trail which is more than five hours old.

Capital Shivers In Frigid Wave

The flowers that bloom in the spring carried on bravely yesterday as a cold wave embraced Washington and snow fell in the Blue Ridge Mountains, less than 100 miles away.

Yesterday's minimum temperature of 47 at 5 a. m., and the maximum was a mere 61 at 1 p. m. Teeth chattered and topcoats reappeared on Washington's streets. Workers on the Skyline drive in the mountains, laboring on amid the unseasonable snow, kept bonfires burning to warm themselves.

The Weather Bureau gave little encouragement to warm-climate enthusiasts. Today, officials predicted, will see little change in temperature. The cloudiness of yesterday will continue, with possibly chilling rains.

A high-pressure area over Hudson Bay is responsible for Washington's upturned collars, the forecaster said. Warmer weather probably will arrive tomorrow, together with a friendly sun.

Troth Reported Near For Charles, Juliana

Brussels, May 16 (AP).—Unconfirmed reports tonight said the engagement of Princess Juliana, heiress to the throne of the Netherlands, to Prince Charles of Sweden, was imminent.

Gene Raymond to Wed.

San Francisco, May 16 (AP).—Miss Helen Zeh, 18-year-old brunette stenographer, announced today that she and Gene Raymond, blond motion picture player, will be married June 2 in southern California. Miss Zeh said she met Raymond through friends about six months ago.

British Cabinet Shake-up Due To Oust Simon

'Friendship' With Reich Opposed; MacDonald May Get Post

By the Associated Press.

London, May 16.—The possibilities of a shake-up in the British cabinet were discussed avidly today, not only in Parliament lobbies, but in government offices.

A strong attack launched against Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, by Conservatives headed by Sir Austen Chamberlain and Winston Churchill has given rise to reports Premier Ramsay MacDonald may become foreign secretary, a post he formerly held, with Stanley Baldwin resuming the premiership.

MacDonald was granted a private audience with King George tonight, which was linked with the possibilities the King's honors list June 3 may create cabinet vacancies.

It was recalled that one of the rare times the King took an active role in politics was when MacDonald's Socialist government made way for the national coalition group. The legend has been kept alive that the King made Baldwin promise to retain MacDonald as premier. Baldwin now is lord president of the council.

A conflict over the cabinet centered about foreign policy, with opponents charging Simon had pro-German sympathies and had aroused the ire of Benito Mussolini, bringing about Il Duce's ringing speech two days ago in which he warned other powers to keep their hands off the Italo-Ethiopian dispute.

MacDonald, however, is supported for the foreign ministry because of indications he would take a firm hand toward the third Reich and Hitler.

Debate in Parliament next week on the program of national defense is expected to bring the issue to a head. Some government quarters expressed belief the cabinet should take advantage of the jubilee enthusiasm by reforming its membership immediately with younger men going before the country in the general election.

Arthur Henderson, former Labor foreign secretary, in a speech today to a national conference of women Socialists, predicted a general election earlier than many expect.

Senate Votes Wagner Bill To Aid Labor

Tydings Snowed Under in Move to Check Sway of Unions.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Wagner labor disputes bill, putting new claws in the Blue Eagle's collective bargaining guarantee, and setting up a permanent tribunal to administer the law, received overwhelming Senate approval late yesterday. The vote was 63 to 12.

Passage followed crushing defeat of an eleventh-hour effort by Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, to prohibit "coercion and intimidation" by labor unions, as well as employers.

Assailed as ruinous to the bill by Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, Senate labor leader and author of the measure, Tydings' modifying amendment was rejected 50 to 21.

Opposed by Industry.

The labor bargaining measure, bitterly opposed by industry as an instrument to enforce the closed shop, was sent at once to the House, sped by the same impulse that early this week broke a threatening legislative jam, and revived hopes of an early summer adjournment.

Only four Democrats joined eight Republicans in a dissenting ballot. They were Bailey, of North Carolina; Burke, of Nebraska; Byrd, of Virginia, and Tydings, of Maryland. Voting for the bill were 49 Democrats, 12 Republicans, 1 Farmer-Laborite and 1 Progressive.

Approval came despite the fact that the Administration never has formally indorsed the measure, although Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and spokesmen for the National Labor Relations Board had aided the German-born New Yorker in its drafting.

Board's Power Extended.

Giving a new lease on life to the National Labor Relations Board, the bill endows that agency with quasi-judicial powers in labor matters, and establishes this set-up as an independent branch in the executive functions of government.

This tribunal will transcend its present labor conciliatory powers, and have full authority to order elections for the purpose of selecting employe representatives in collective bargaining negotiations. These orders will be subject to court review.

The measure makes it "unfair" for employers:

1. To interfere with, or to coerce employes, in the exercise of collective bargaining through representatives of their own choosing.
2. To dominate or to interfere with the formation or administration of any labor organization or to contribute financially or aid in the support of it.
3. To encourage or discourage membership in any labor organization by discrimination.
4. To discriminate against any employe for filing charges or giving testimony under the proposed act.
5. To refuse to bargain collectively with representatives of their employes.

Labor President Jubilant.

Jubilant over Senate passage, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, said the decisive vote "insures its passage by the House of Representatives."

"It is a great achievement for labor," he said. "We will now concentrate on efforts toward bringing about adoption of the measure by the House, and its approval by the President."

Legislative representatives of the American Federation of Labor, popularly known as the "labor lobby," and headed by William C. Hushing, watched from the galleries as the measure clicked to passage.

The bill carries substantially the provisions of the disputes bill defeated last year. Even as rewritten, it still imposes a ban on employer-dominated company unions, and sanctions bargaining through representatives chosen by a majority in plant elections. Not a single

White House Acts to Save 2-Year NRA

By Felix Bruner.

The drive for two-year renewal of the NRA continued yesterday, with every indication that it was heading for a major clash between the House and the Senate.

Among yesterday's developments were:

President Roosevelt publicly approved for the first time the legislative proposals of Donald R. Richberg, chairman of the National Industrial Recovery Board, including Richberg's broad definition of interstate commerce.

The Democratic members of the House Ways and Means Committee held another three-hour closed session with NRA officials, to whose number was added Charles West, former Representative and now White House "liaison man."

Calls Richberg Arrogant.

Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, denounced Richberg as a "Mussolini" and referred to his criticism of the Senate before NRA employes as an "arrogant performance." Senator Borah followed with an attack on price fixing and alleged violation of interstate commerce provisions of the Constitution.

Arrangements for a gathering of business men in Washington next week to ask for a two-year extension of NRA were going forward.

Announcement that President Roosevelt had approved the Richberg proposal for extension of NRA, directly contrary to the resolution already adopted by the Senate, came after a brief visit of the entire NRA board to the White House.

Firm on Two-Year Extension.

Immediately afterward, Richberg, accompanied by W. Averill Harriman, NRA executive officer, and by West, rushed to the Capitol and went into conference with the Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee.

While this was going on the Senate passed by a vote of 63 to 12 the Wagner labor disputes bill, which will set up a labor board and which enacts provisions of Section 7(a) of the recovery act into a separate law.

The NRA program, unanimously adopted by the board and approved by the President, contains the following seven points:

1. Two-year extension, as opposed to the Senate resolution providing extension only until April 1, 1936.
2. A period of three to six months for revision of codes. The Senate resolution provides 30 days.
3. Jurisdiction to be limited to businesses engaged in interstate commerce and to those "substantially affecting" interstate commerce. The Senate resolution provides simply that businesses engaged in intrastate commerce shall not be affected.
4. Provision for voluntary codes with adequate authority to impose limited codes covering minimum wages, maximum hours, prohibition of child labor and section 7(a), guaranteeing the right of collective bargaining.
5. Definite authority and standards to prevent unfair competition and practices, especially those tending to monopoly, and the destruction of small enterprises.
6. Methods of code making and enforcement to be further defined with enforcement primarily through injunctions and cease and desist orders.
7. Provision to protect individual rights and small enterprises

Billion Work Fund Earmarked To Start Vast Program at Once

Roosevelt Is Expected to Approve Projects Immediately.

Thousands to Get Jobs in a Month

Half Billion for Roads Includes Cash to End Rail Crossings.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Immediate allocation of $1,091,802,200 of the $4,000,000,000 works fund for a large number of non-Federal public works projects of all kinds and in all parts of the country was recommended yesterday to President Roosevelt by his Advisory Allotment Board.

Since this board is representative of all relief and works agencies of the Administration, the President's approval of the allocation of this fund was held to be virtually certain, although he withheld formal approval when he met with the board for more than two hours yesterday.

Formal Presidential approval of these projects was expected to come within another day or two. Virtually all the projects included in the recommendation have been pending before PWA for some time and plans have been fully completed, paving the way for the awarding of contracts and the moving in of steam shovels and workmen within a month.

Division of Funds.

The major division of the proposed allocation was as follows:

To the Bureau of Public Roads, $500,000,000, including $200,000,000 to be spent on highway and street construction; $200,000,000 for elimination of grade crossings, and $100,000,000 for previously incurred obligations in highway construction under the Hayden-Cartwright highways act of 1934.

To the Corps of Engineers, $10,000,000 for initial construction work on the Passamaquoddy (Me.) tide-harnessing power project, and $102,186,500 for general projects, the latter including $25,000,000 for work on the Mississippi River between Minneapolis and the Missouri River, and $21,000,000 for work on the Missouri River between Sioux City and Kansas City.

For low-cost housing projects in all parts of the country, $249,860,000.

For the program of the Rural Resettlement Administration under Undersecretary of Agriculture Rexford G. Tugwell, $100,000,000.

In addition to these projects the allotment board recommended that a sum not in excess of $100,000,000 be advanced as the Federal Government's participation in the works program sponsored by the State of Wisconsin, embracing 140-odd projects and estimated to cost a total of $205,000,000.

To Solve Wisconsin Relief.

This allotment is to be conditional on Wisconsin raising the remainder of the money needed; arranging to repay to the Federal Government $30,000,000 of the $100,000,000 advanced and passing enabling legislation satisfactory to the Federal administrators. This is intended to cover all propects in Wisconsin and take care of the entire problem in that State.

The board also recommended allotment immediately of $7,500,000 of a proposed $25,245,000 to New York City for construction in connection with the Ward Island sewage treatment plant. The Federal Government is making 30 per cent of this sum an outright grant and the remaining 70 per cent a loan to be repaid on terms to be reached through negotiation.

Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, of New York City, is a member of the allotment board, representing the Conference of Mayors. He was smiling broadly as he left the meeting. In reply to a question as to whether New York "got any money," he shot back: "You bet we did."

The action of the allotment board in recommending approval of projects totaling $1,000,000,000, with the controversial Passmoquoddy power

AAA Financing Of Farm Rally Denied by Head

Did Not Discourage March, Davis Says in Letter to Robinson.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Without waiting for the Senate to act on the Hastings proposal for an investigation of the "farm march" on Washington, AAA Administrator Chester C. Davis yesterday addressed to Senator Joseph T. Robinson, the majority leader, a denial that his organization in any way had promoted the farm demonstration.

At the same time, Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace struck out at critics of the farm program in a radio address, and Senator Daniel O. Hastings (Republican), of Delaware, renewed his charges that the AAA was at the bottom of the farm movement.

Further developments included the presentation to The Washington Post of a statement signed by 22 Texas farmers protesting against "the false statements and insinuations made in the United States Senate and elsewhere about our visit to Washington."

Another statement came from Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, asserting that attacks on the farm meeting were an "insult to agriculture" and that charges the demonstration was "bought and paid for" were "preposterous."

"The AAA," according to Davis, "has not sponsored, nor financed, nor permitted its agents to sponsor, nor permitted county production control association funds to be used to finance, the farmers' visit to Washington.

"On the other hand, the Adjustment Administration has never denied the right of farmers to visit their Capital, has not attempted to discourage them from doing so, and upon their arrival in Washington

Senate Puts Inflation Bonus Up to the White House Today

Patman Bill Will Be Signed at 11 A. M. by Garner, and Roosevelt Is Expected to Veto Measure Before Monday.

The inflationary Patman bonus bill, authorizing the President to pay off the bonus with $2,200,000,000 in greenbacks yesterday was freed from the Senate and launched on its course toward the White House, and a veto.

The bill went immediately to the House for signature of Speaker Byrns. Vice President Garner will sign it at 11 o'clock this morning. Some time before Monday, when the Senate returns from a week-end adjournment, the President is expected to veto it.

The legislative mill began to grind out the bonus shortly after Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, bonus inflationist leader, obtained unanimous consent to withdraw his motion to reconsider the 55 to 33 vote by which the bill passed the Senate.

Early Emphasizes Veto.

At the same time, Thomas obtained Senate permission for Vice President Garner to sign the bill while the Senate is in recess, thus forestalling another tie-up in the bonus legislation. The Vice President, an exponent of the bill, who reputedly believes it would be a smart stroke politically if the Senate overrides a veto, was at the ball game when the bill left the Senate.

Earlier in the day, Stephen Early, secretary to the President, made it clear to reporters that Roosevelt does not share Garner's reported views.

"I will say, as definitely as I can, that the President is not interested in the bonus because of political reasons or political expediency," Early said. "He will veto the bill. "In his message, he will present as forceful an argument as he has at his command, and it is his earnest hope that Congress will support the veto."

Vote on Veto Wednesday.

Senator Thomas called a veterans' strategy conference in his office as soon as the bill left the Senate. It was decided to fix a definite date, probably Wednesday, for a Senate vote on a motion to override the awaited Presidential veto.

Meantime it was learned that a group of Patman supporters, comprising the House bonus steering committee, asked and was granted an audience to be held with the President before he takes veto action.

Should the President's veto be sustained by the Senate—and recent polls indicate he may be upheld by some 5 ballots—three different movements to force bonus legis-

Inflation Talk Gives Market 2-Million Day

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

New York, May 16.—The stock market got its much-sought 2,000,000-share day today. It came on a rising market and optimism flowed through the financial district.

Trading established a number of records. There were 880 issues out, the largest total this year. There were 128 new 1935 highs made, the largest number this year; there were 128 new 1935 highs made, the February 18, and volume approximated 2,420,000 shares, the best since July 26, 1934. The Dow-Jones industrial average climbed to 116.58 on an advance of 1.97 and a new high since November 9, 1931.

"Inflation-mindedness" and investment furnished the background.

Continued warnings of economic leaders that various legislation now pending in Washington will bring inflation shortly stirred inflation sentiment. In fact, many feel inflation already is here only not fully recognized. The White House statement that the President would send a Patman bonus bill veto in the strongest words possible had no effect.

Inflation leaders and stocks which will benefit by payment of the Patman bonus bill gave the best demonstration. Motor shares were an example. Chrysler made the best gain it has in months, rising more than 3 points. General Motors gained a point. While the motor business is excellent and some forecasts are that May sales will exceed those of April—even though there is a dimiputon of production—motor companies would profit enor-

U. S. Should Give Virgin Isles Back to Danes, Says Reynolds

By the Associated Press.

San Juan, Puerto Rico, May 16.—Senator Robert R. Reynolds, (Democrat), North Carolina, chairman of a senatorial sub-committee which will investigate administration of the Virgin Islands, said today the purchase of the islands from Denmark in 1917 was "one of the worst mistakes the United States ever made."

Denmark, he added, should "be paid" to take them back. Reynolds is leaving after a preliminary investigation into conditions in the island.

There were indications that Reynolds would resign from the committee, which is to take up hearings this fall, because of attacks on him by native leaders, but he refused to confirm this.

Although asserting the purchase of the Virgin Islands from Denmark in 1917 was "one of the greatest mistakes the United States ever made," Reynolds praised Puerto Rico highly.

"I would not trade one acre of Puerto Rico for all the Virgin Islands," he declared. (Puerto Rico was ceded to the United States by Spain after the Spanish-American War.)

Reynolds would not comment on the administration here of Gov. Paul M. Pearson except to say he had not had sufficient time to judge if the Virgin Islanders were friendly to the United States.

Four investigators of the committee and Jesse Canton, of the Department of Interior's staff, remained at St. Thomas to obtain evidence and information.

World Speed Marks Cracked By Ace in Marathon Flight

Tomlinson Breaks 3 National and 2 Universal Records in Early Laps of 3,100-Mile Hop Over Eastern Seaboard Course.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 16.—Near the end of a 3,100-mile closed course flight for new world speed and load records, D. W. Tomlinson, Transcontinental and Western Air pilot, turned tonight from his 621-mile triangular course between New York, Washington and Norfolk, Va., because of bad wather, but continued on the last lap of his 18-hour grind in a shuttle flight between New York and Washington.

Heavy rains at Norfolk caused official clockers to order him to make his last lap up and down the coast to complete the necessary mileage for record.

As he began the last of the five 621-mile laps, the former naval flier had set six new national records for speed, with and without load, and had cracked two world records hitherto held by France and Germany. A half-dozen additional international and American marks were within reach if he finished out his long flight.

Facing bad weather at Norfolk, one angle of the triangle between New York, Washington and Norfolk, Tomlinson clocked his big twin-motored Douglas airliner over Floyd Bennet Field at 8:56 p. m. (Eastern standard time) at the end of the fourth lap and headed back toward Washington on the last turn of his 18-hour grind.

At that time he had been in the air approximately 14 hours and 30 minutes, averaging around 171 miles an hour for the 2,485 miles.

The only two records of the nine world and nine national records which in any event will escape him, are the speed records for 1,000 and 2,000 kilometers without load. France holds the first, of 254 miles an hour, set in 1934; Germany the other, of 214.5 miles an hour, set in 1933.

Accompanied by Joseph E. Bartles, copilot, the former Navy ace and present TWA pilot took off from Floyd Bennett Field at 5:36 a. m. (Eastern standard time) on an 18-hour grind over a closed course between New York, Washington and Norfolk, Va.

At the end of the first lap—one

90-Vote Dry Lead to Force Official Tabulation in Georgia

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, May 16.—An official tabulation will be necessary to decide the outcome of the referendum in Georgia yesterday on repeal of the prohibition law, it was indicated late today as unofficial returns gave opponents of repeal a lead of 90 votes.

With all counties reporting, the unofficial result as tabulated by the Associated Press, was:

For repeal: 81,929.

Against repeal: 82,019.

At the same time, the vote for legalizing beer was 83,334 for, to 76,878 against.

The vote for wine was 81,800; 73,426 against.

The last county to report was Dawson, which is without telephone or telegraph service.

The majority for repeal, which at one time last night mounted to more than 8,100, dwindled throughout today as additional returns came in from the rural precincts.

The Legislature submitted to the people of Georgia in a referendum the question of repeal or retention of the State bone-dry prohibition law. It was this issue which apparently has resulted in a deadlock as far as the unofficial votes are concerned.

The official returns must be certified by the secretary of state to the Governor within three days. He will declare the result and issue a proclamation announcing it.

The beer referendum legalized that brew without any further action. In the case of wine, however, counties may hold local elections to decide whether to prohibit it.

Advisory Body Urges Changes In Social Plans

Business Council Seeks an Incentive to Industry to Provide Jobs.

By the Associated Press.

On the verge of a final vote on the Administration's social security program, the Senate Finance Committee last night was handed a demand for changes to give "an incentive to employers to provide steady work and prevent unemployment."

It came from the 50 industrial executives who make up the Administration's business advisory council.

Chairman Harrison of the committee predicted a final vote by his group today on the entire bill making provisions for old age pensions and retirement and other benefits, in addition to unemployment insurance.

Proposed by La Follette.

At a meeting yesterday the bill, already approved by the House, was amended to permit individual companies to build up their reserves for unemployment insurance instead of joining in a State-wide pool. The proposal was made by Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, to bring the measure more nearly into conformity with the law already in effect in his State. Without his amendment, he argued, the Wisconsin and other State laws now in effect would become invalid.

The State-wide unemployment reserve pool was recommended by President Roosevelt's commission on economic security.

The business advisory council said it had "every sympathy" with the objectives of the President's security plan, but that it agreed with a statement of the advisory council on economic security that the plan should give employers incentive for providing continuous employment.

Urge Grants to States.

The business men particularly urged that Federal participation in providing unemployment insurance be "along the line of granting aid to the States rather than the form of the bill now before Congress."

Instead of having employers contribute to insurance pools on the basis of the total number of employes, the council urged that such contributions be restricted to those employes who would be subject to benefits if unemployed. As the bill stands, it provides for a 3 per cent tax on pay rolls.

"Within ten years," said the report, "the plan would mean an expense to the Federal Government of $500,000,000 per year, and an equal cost to the States."

Grand Jury Frees Killer of Husband

Self-Defense Exonerates Mrs. Eleana Garea.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., May 16.—Mrs. Eleana Garea, who slew her husband with a pistol at their home in Youngstown, Ohio, Easter, was exonerated by the grand jury, according to advices received last night. She was charged with manslaughter.

Mrs. Garea said the reason she shot her husband as he slept was because of his brutal assault and threats to kill her. It was a case of "kill or be killed," she pleaded, and evidence sustained her.

The Gareas moved to Youngstown from this city three years ago. They had four children.

McGuire Again Heads Winchester Hospital

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, May 16.—Dr. H. H. McGuire has been reelected president of Winchester Memorial Hospital for another year along with other officers, including H. B. McCormac, vice president; Dr. J. A. Miller, secretary, and the board of directors, including Shirley Carter, chairman; W. E. Cooper, W. Nelson Page, William Beverley and H. B. McCormac.

Miss Mary Jane McCone has been named superintendent to succeed Miss Lillian F. Anderson, who is retiring. Miss Anderson's engagement was recently announced.

Miss Anderson reported that the hospital ended the last year with a deficit of $6,612. A total of $13,962 was charged to free work during the year.

Between You and Me

By Raymond Clapper

THE battle over NRA has dramatized significantly a problem which is vastly more fundamental than the recovery experiment itself. That is the problem created by the constitutional provision which restricts the Federal Government to interstate jurisdiction over commerce.

The Supreme Court has in numerous decisions stretched this authority far beyond what the founding fathers may have had in mind. Even so, there is not enough rubber in the Constitution, even under the hand of a willing court, to stretch it as far as appears to be necessary if NRA is to carry out its aims, or if other Federal experiments are to be continued. Politically, we have retained State lines. Economically, we have wiped them out. The Nation, economically, is an integrated unit. Even your village grocer is next door to a chain store managed from New York City.

Politically we still live in an unreal world of long ago, driving horses and buggies in the high-speed motor traffic of city streets, wearing bustles and Prince Albert coats in an age, as they say, of scanties and zipper garments. Largely because the British created a House of Commons as a compromise to appease masses who resented the high-handed attitude of the House of Lords, we in America, without the cause, copied the form and are to this day saddled with a bicameral system, extending from Congress down to the small two-branch city council in communities which scarcely have enough city fathers to fill the seats. Nebraska's attempt to break away from this tradition and adopt a unicameral Legislature has been considered a sensational development in the evolution of American Government, so rarely do we apply common sense to our political machinery.

Politics and government are laggard twins. If the present upheaval which has resulted from the clash of modern economic necessities with outworn State barriers does not jar the courts fnto finding some way of reconciling the conflict, it is reasonable to expect that constitutional changes will be attempted. Whether specific experiments of the New Deal are good or bad, they are in one respect a recognition of the fact that economic life has steamrollered State lines and they request an attempt to make governmental jurisdiction coextensive with the realities of modern-day activities.

And then, after you get a few such random thoughts together which attempt to get at the essence of what is going on, what happens? In comes the first announcement of a specific project to be undertaken through the new works program. And what is it? Why, it is a scheme to harness the tides! Old Passamaquoddy in person. They are going up to the Bay of Fundy and put the public works squeezer on the Old Man of the Sea. This has been a crackpot dream for years. Harness the tides and make electricity!

Hard-headed Ickes turned it down under the old PWA. But during the congressional campaign last year, Maine politicians put the heat on the White House and talked the Administration into reopening the matter for further study. Maine Democrats claimed that they had a promise the Administration would take hold of "Quoddy." Ickes never would admit he was for this. He merely was giving Maine a chance to restate its case. But it has turned out just as did Grand Coulee Dam. Ickes opposed that, too. Finally it was put through, anyway.

Now with Quoddy receiving $10,000,000 for the first year's work on a job that will require at least $30,000,000—and what was that about the works money going into projects that could be finished in approximately one year?—there is hope for the scheme to take the gold out of sea water.

• • • •

If this sounds carping, it is prompted by the fact that in his radio speech last night, Frank C. Walker, as the Administration spokesman for the works program, said:

"When the President sometime since discussed with you the works program, he said: 'Feel free to criticize. Tell me of instances where work can be done better, or where improper practices prevail. Neither you nor I want criticism conceived in a purely fault-finding or partisan spirit, but I am jealous of the right of every citizen to call to the attention of his government examples of how the public money can be more effectively spent for the benefit of the American people.'

"May we suggest that you follow the President's advice literally."

Leo R. Sack, American Minister to Costa Rica, is home on a visit. He left behind him a well-stocked cellar, but he does not miss that as much as he does Costa Rican coffee. He advises American coffee-lovers to try it. It costs more, but Minister Sack says, it is worth the difference.

As predicted, the movement to send more ambassadors to Washington is spreading. Massachusetts and Arizona were the first. Now the cities are taking up the idea. Buffalo has sent a former Representative, Charles Bennett Smith, to be its permanent ambassador at the public trough here. The city of Niagara Falls, N. Y., also is sending a representative to Washington. Other go-getting communities may be expected to follow suit. This business of marching on Washington is becoming serious.

• • • •

Inspired by the success of the farm march, a group of businessmen friendly to NRA are marching next week. Bonus advocates on the Pacific Coast are talking up another bonus march.

Gen. Coxey must read of these present-day marches with bitter recollection. When his army arrived in Washington during the nineties, the men were arrested for walking on the grass. Marchers nowadays are received and encouraged at the White House. Resistance is so low now that even Gen. Jubal Early, who brought his rebel army as far down the Seventh street pike as Rittenhouse street, might make it all the way today.

All roads lead to the zero milestone just behind the White House.

• • • •

Even those who don't come to Washington are taking a new tack in their petitions. Senators are receiving messages now which contain requests that they be read to the Senate. If the members undertake to read on the floor all of the messages they receive about the bonus, inflation, NRA and other matters, before long they will be reading in day and night relays.

Government and politics may cling to antiquated machinery, but the art of lobbying is on its toes, introducing every new trick of individual and mass appeal. It has developed much more rapidly than Washington's backbone. Hence lobbying's high batting average.

• • • •

The lobbyists are growing more arrogant daily.

For instance there is the group of business men who are coming to Washington next week to demand extension of NRA. They are headed by a Mr. Ward Cheney who issued a remarkable statement last night, defying attack of every kind. After declaring in substance that most of the opposition to NRA is political and "unprincipled" he warned that "we shall hold to strict accountability any person or agency that makes any statement impunging our motives."

You mean you will, Mr. Cheney, by the hair of your Cheney, chin, chin?

Russia, France Likely to Trade Army Secrets

The Situation Abroad:

In Moscow, a frank exchange of military secrets by the Soviet and France to strengthen their new alliance was predicted.

By the United Press.

Moscow, May 16.—A frank exchange of military secrets by communistic Russia and capitalistic France to strengthen their new armed alliance against all "imperialistic powers" was predicted tonight in reliable quarters.

Simultaneously, a pointed warning that France and Russia, cooperating closely, intend to keep their military forces at a level guaranteeing security was voiced by the officially controlled Soviet press.

The Russians coupled their barbed words with a strong appeal for peace.

At the same time it was announced at Prague that Czechoslovakia and Russia had signed a military alliance pact almost identical with the Franco-Russian armed assistance treaty, providing mutual aid against an aggressor nation.

Air Pact Concluded.

The Prague pact binds both nations to follow French action in the event of an attack on any of these three. It is for five years.

Czechoslovakia and Russia also concluded an air pact, foreseeing a new airline between Prague and Moscow over Rumania, avoiding Poland because of political differences between Poland and Czechoslovakia.

This swift move by Moscow to line up new allies among her neighbors against possible aggression, presumably from an anti-Communist Germany, was interpreted as meaning that Russia is prepared to proceed with her original plans for an Eastern European security pact, or a series of pacts amounting to the same thing if a general mutual aid treaty proves impossible.

Izvestia (The News) said that the alliance was not only approved by Moscow's officials but also by the masses.

It was learned from usually reliable sources that the good-will visit of French Foreign Minister Pierre Laval here, ending last night, will be followed by a frank exchange of military information.

Soviet Warning.

Izvestia hoped that a general Eastern pact of nonaggression could be formed, presumably with the participation of Poland and Germany, but added:

"Until there is a collcetive system of security including countries in which the military elements are superior to France and the Soviet Union, these two countries will keep their armed forces at a level guaranteeing safety.

"To decrease them now would only encourage the imperialists."

While not disputing the peaceful intentions of the Soviets, neutral observers are having difficulty distinguishing the difference between the present situation and that prevailing before the World War.

Czecho-Russian Pact Of Mutual Aid Signed

By the United Press.

Prague, Czechoslovakia, May 16. A Czecho-Russian pact of mutual armed assistance against an aggressor nation was signed here today.

Foreign Minister Edouard Benes acted for Czechoslovakia and the Soviet minister, Sergei Alexandrovski, signed for Russia. It is based on the same principles as the Franco-Russian alliance.

The Prague pact binds each to follow the French action in the event of attack, but provides, however, that if either Russia or Czechoslovakia is attacked, the other shall give assistance only if France joins in aid.

The pact is for five years, with one year's notice of abrogation provision.

Missing Man Declared Legally Dead by Court

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 16.—Missing since November 15, 1927, Oakley Adam Hopkins, a son of Jonathan O. Hopkins, of near Bristol, has been declared by the Harrison County court as legally dead.

The court's action was taken on petition of relatives of the missing man in order that his estate could be settled. He was last heard of when his father received a post card from him November 15, 1927, mailed at Manchester, England.

Stabilized Cash Goal of Britain, ChancellorSays

By the Associated Press.

London, May 16.—Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, declared tonight that stabilization is one of Britain's "ultimate objectives" in an address before a host of England's financial leaders at the annual banquet of the British Bankers Association.

In what was interpreted as the first official reply to a recent speech by Henry Morgenthau, jr., United States Secretary of the Treasury, Chamberlain said:

"I am not unaware of the constant stream of unofficial suggestions that we should take the lead in promoting some sort of stabilization here now.

"I fully realize all of the difficulties which arise from the constant fluctuation of exchange," declared Chamberlain, "but exchange rates can not be controlled without some reference to the economic factors • • •.

"And just as it is no use to try to anchor a ship if the anchorage is always shifting, so if seems to me it would be futile to attempt to bring about stabilization in that way until we can see some prospect of the stability of conditions after that stabilization has been effected.

"All I can say, therefore, is that stabilization is one of our ultimate objectives. We are now watching and shall continue to watch the situation with a view of taking action at any time it seems to us it is likely to bring about useful results."

The chancellor listed four main objectives necessary for the revival of overseas trade:

1. A rise in wholesale prices.
2. The lowering of excessive tariffs—with the removal of quotas, exchange controls and similar restrictive measures.
3. The return to a common international gold standard.
4. The resumption of international lending.

House Kills Demand For Perkins Report

By the Associated Press.

Informed by Secretary Perkins her annual report for the last fiscal year would be ready in about ten days, the House yesterday tabled a resolution by Representative Bacon (Republican), of New York, demanding she send the Labor Department accounting up "forthwith" and explain the delay.

Miss Perkins said the greatly added amount of material going into the report could not be assembled and checked sooner and that it would be completed soon.

Two Face Liquor Charges.

Smithsburg, Md., May 16.—Columbus and George Tracey have been cited to appear in court to answer charges of illegal possession of liquor after a raid on their place by Federal agents.

A. B. C. Won't Enter Distilling Business

Members of Board Agree Individually on Idea.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 16.—The Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control board definitely is not going into the distilling business, the board agreed today.

"Not only would such a move be unwise from a business point of view, but we would have to reverse the policies under which the board is operating," said Maj. S. Heth Tyler, chairman of the board, expressing a personal opinion.

While the board as a body has taken no official action on the matter, they agreed individually today that such a move would not be made.

State distilling narrowly missed being made mandatory at one point during the Virginia law's passage through the Legislature little more than a year ago.

Bill Delayed 8 Years Up 2 Months Too Late

By the Associated Press.

After a delay of eight years the House finds it has waited two months too long to act on the Brussels exposition bill.

In 1927 Belgium invited the United States to send an exhibit to her 1935 International Exposition. Preparing to accept the offer the House this week discovered the exposition opened two months ago. The measure went back to its pigeon-hole.

The Anatomy of a "Spread"

ECONOMISTS call the difference between what the producer gets and what the consumer pays the "spread."
What constitutes the "spread" between the dairyman's cow and the consumer's doorstep is as much the concern of the corporate milkman as the public he serves.
A breakdown of the difference between the producer's price and the consumer's price reveals the milkman's costs of doing business—to-wit: assembly, transportation, pasteurizing, processing, bottling, selling, delivery.
What is left, if anything, is the milkman's profit—the residue to which he must look for his own sustenance. If profit fails him for long he is through.
It is the one vitamin essential to his economic life.
In Washington this remainder is about 3 mills a quart.
How to preserve the milkman's useful service at a fair price to both dairyman and consumer is the sovereign test of corporate management.
Were a cut to be made in the price to the consumer, the consequence would be intolerably disturbing.
The farmer would have to take less, the milkman's profit would be wiped out and he with it, or wages would have to shrink.
None of these eventualities seem reasonably desirable in the public interest.

2 Great Fleets Playing at War Approach Test

Navy Has 'Blacks' and 'Whites' Spread Over Vast Pacific Area.

By the Associated Press.

With United States Fleet Mid-Pacific Maneuvers, May 16.—Two great fleets sent airplanes over wide areas of the North Pacific today from aircraft carriers, cruisers and battleships in a game of hide and seek.

It is the major phase of six weeks of maneuvers that puts two fleet commanders under a test of strategy more severe than any previous peace-time problem.

Vice Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn, commander of the "Black" force, has control of island outposts, with shore forces and seaplane patrols holding widespread points. Like a spider in his web, he is moving his main "Black" fleet of dreadnaughts, cruisers, aircraft squadrons, destroyers and submarines somewhere between the Aleutian Islands and Midway Island.

Admiral Harris Laning, commander of the powerful "White" fleet, has the problem of wresting this control from destroying expeditionary forces and seeking out the main "Black" battle force and of testing his tactical ability.

Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, commander of the United States fleet, who is chief umpire, has given the widest latitude to the two fleet commanders to meet conditions as they develop.

Every element of the fleet has been put to severe tests. The fleet Marine force, as an expeditionary unit, has had a landing test providing the Leathernecks with all they could wish for. Through coral reefs on one of the loneliest islands in the the midpacific this force has been landed.

Great flying squadrons of seaplanes under command of Rear Admiral Alfred W. Johnson likewise have had operations winning them new conquests.

Submarines have had problems of wider range than ever before. The newest fighting ships in the fleet—heavy cruisers, five of which are on their first maneuvers—have been put to severe weather and navigation tests in remote regions of the Far North.

Today all forces were shaping themselves at sea for the supreme test which occurs in all annual problems, a crucial high seas battle.

Annual Dinner Set By Legionnaires

District Group to Meet at Hanover, Pa., Wednesday.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., May 16.—District Commander Wilbur F. Brown will preside at the annual banquet of the twenty-second district, American Legion, at Hanover, Wednesday.

State Commander James E. Isherwood, of Waynesburg, will be the principal speaker. The district comprises York, Adams and Franklin counties.

Among other guests will be the Rev. Eugene Keller, Pottstown, Pa., State chaplain of the legion and a native of Hanover, and John F. McNulty, Salisbury, Md., commander of the department of Maryland.

Legion posts which are expected to participate include those of Waynesboro, Gettysburg, Chambersburg, Arendtsville, Littlestown, Dry Run, Greencastle, Mercersburg, St. Thomas, York, Spring Grove, Glen Rock, Stewartstown, Wrightsville, Red Lion, Dallastown and Hanover.

Plane Smashes Record in Flight Over Capital

Speed Records Crack Before Ex-Naval Ace

complete circuit of the course—he had set three new national speed marks for 1,000 kilometers with loads of 500 and 1,000 kilograms and without load.

When he finished his second lap, at increased speed, he had cracked two world records held by France for speed over 2,000 kilometers with loads of 500 and 1,000 kilograms. One thousand kilograms is 2,205 pounds—slightly over a ton.

In all, if he completes his full laps for 5,000 kilometers, Tomlinson will have shot at nine world and nine United States records for speed at 1,000, 2,000 and 5,000 kilometers, each divided in the categories of no load, load of 500 kilograms and load of 1,000 kilograms.

France at present holds four of the international load records for the three distances, Germany two and Spain one. No records have been established in the payload categories of the 5,000-kilometer class.

Tomlinson flew the airliner in which he set the recent transcontinental record of 11 hours 5 minutes between New York and Los Angeles.

He maintained today an altitude of 10,000 to 14,000 feet, being clocked at the pylons at Washington, Norfolk and New York by the National Aeronautic Association, which received sanction for the attempt from the official world airplane record authority, the Federation Aeronautique Internationale.

The time of Tomlinson's first lap gave him an average speed of 168.04 miles an hour, which he increased to 174.29 miles an hour at the end of the second lap. He had the choice of selecting his best lap for record in the 1,000-kilometer class, and the best two consecutive laps for the 2,000-kilometer records.

At the end of the third lap completed at 5:18 p. m. (Eastern standard time), Tomlinson was maintaining his total average speed of better than 171 miles an hour. For the third 621-mile lap he averaged 172.9 miles an hour, and had covered approximately 1,864 miles of the projected 3,100-mile flight. Upon completion of the third lap he had been in the air nearly 11 hours.

Spanish Flier Down in Africa On Daring Hop to Mexico City

Sandstorm Halts Pombo's Romantic Flight to Sweetheart.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Ifni, Spanish West Africa, May 16. Juan Ignacio Pombo, young Spanish flier off on a romantic dash across the South Atlantic from Spain to his sweetheart in Mexico City, paused here tonight, forced down by sandstorms sweeping out of the scorching Sahara Desert.

The 21-year-old youth, in his powerful plane, the Santander, reached this tiny Spanish colony on the West Coast of Africa at 6:20 p. m., after a hazardous, bumpy flight from Agadir, Morocco. He left Seville, Spain, shortly after dawn.

He paused at Agadir at 11:30 p. m. for lunch and to refuel his big ship—named after his home town in northern Spain, and headed down the coast for Villa Cisneros, in Rio de Oro, 650 miles south of here.

But sandstorms made the visibility poor and flying too hazardous, and young Pombo, desiring to reach Mexico City rather than die in a foolhardy attempt to rejoin his 19-year-old fiancee, "sat down" at Ifni for the night.

Clearing weather and a full moon might permit him to carry on if the storm abates, but his plans on landing were to remain at least until daylight.

Pombo hopes now to reach Dakar, in French Senegal, without stopping, although he may yet pause at Villa Cisneros on this 1,225-mile leg of his long-way-round transatlantic flight to the Mexican capital.

The young Spaniard left Santander amid the cheers of his fellow-townsmen last Monday in a flight designed to achieve two purposes—boom his home town with world publicity, and carry him back to his sweetheart.

His first stop was at Madrid, his second, Seville, whence he departed at 5:55 a. m. (1:55 a. m. Eastern daylight time) for the flight down the West African coast to Dakar prior to the long over-water hop to Natal, Brazil, 1,800 miles southwest over the Atlantic.

Pombo was confident of success. He plans to fly northward along the South African coast, with stops in the Guianas, Venezuela, Colombia, Panama, Central America—then Mexico City.

mously by an immediate cash outlay of $2,000,000,000 to the veterans.

Excellent investment demand continues. Europeans are turning to our markets. Most European buying is for investment and is going into the higher-priced stocks. The investment feeling also is represented in the bond market, where United States Government issues—which ordinarily would decline on inflation—continued firm. Much of this support for Treasury issues comes from the banks, Wall Street reported, which have enormous funds available for investment and are continuing to buy Government issues. Speculative bonds climbed with stocks, a natural development.

Meanwhile, the inflation feeling went into commodity markets and was especially noted on the Chicago Board of Trade, where grain prices advanced sharply.

In all the optimism, however, it is pointed out that the public still is wary of the market. The "little fellows" are not trading, and thus the bulk of speculative transactions is from the professionals.

The "Street" today talked about:

International Nickel's steady build-up of reserves, which indicates possibility that the preferred issue may be retired . . . possibility of extra dividends for Jewel Tea . . . sale of a stock exchange membership at $104,000, off $1,000 from the previous sale . . . indications Addressograph-Multigraph earnings may be around $1 a share, . . . excellent sales reported by Minneapolis Moline . . . New York, May 16 (AP)—John Boettiger, assistant to Will Hays, today said that Hays "had no comment to make" concerning a published report that he had signed another five-year contract as president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association of America, Inc.

The Motion Picture Daily said Hays had signed the contract.

London-Paris on $1.50 That's Glider's Record

By the United Press.

Paris, May 16.—Robert Kronfeld, Austria's glider ace, established a record for the cheapest London-Paris flight today when he made it with a fuel bill of less than $1.50.

He landed at Le Bourget airport, outside Paris, at 7:16 p. m., having left Croydon Airfield, outside London, at 3:05 p. m. He used a Drone glider for the 210-mile hop, equipped with a 5-horsepower motorcycle engine.

Kronfeld said he had tail winds, but encountered hail, snow and rain over the English Channel.

Troops to Escort Governor's Party

Waynesboro Unit Selected for Memorial Day Rites.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., May 16.—Troop F, 104th Cavalry, Pennsylvania National Guard, composed entirely of men from the Waynesboro community, will act as personal escort to Gov. George H. Earle and his party at the Memorial Day ceremonies on the Gettysburg Battlefield May 30.

Capt. Harris N. Summer, commander of the local division, received notification of the selection of his troop for duty yesterday from Maj. Gen. Edward C. Shannon.

Thirty-one of the 68 members of the troop will be selected for mounted escort duty. Capt. Summer will be in command and Lieut. Charles Shaeffer will be second in command.

Capitol Heights Tax Rate Stands

Motorcycle Patrolman Will Be Added to Curb Speeders.

Capitol Height's municipal tax rate will remain $1 on every $100, the town council announced yesterday.

The tax, as usual, will be levied on the land acreage and not on improvements. Capitol Heights is said to be the only town in the United States to use the single tax system.

Members of the town council also have decided to add a motorcycle patrolman to the local police force. The move was decided upon to curb speeders expected on Central avenue when the summer resorts open.

Th police committee is receiving bids for a motorcycle sidecar. Estimates will be submitted at a special council meeting Monday night.

Two men are being considered for patrolmen. In shifts, they will patrol the streets 24 hours a day. They will receive only fees as compensation.

The council also expects to have a "clean-up" week. A number of men will be employed to haul refuse. The step will be preparatory to establishing a weekly trash collection.

Flood Carries Farmer 300 Yards in Stream

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Glenville, W. Va., May 16.—Flood waters which almost cost the life of an 80-year-old farmer on Owens Run are falling rapidly in Gilmer County. The damage to property and crops is estimated at $25,000.

While aged Lon Collins was walking through the high water to tie his hay rake to a tree, the rake began to move and he jumped on it in an effort to save it. After he had been carried downstream about 300 yards he succeeded in making his way to shore.

project in the list, was forecast in The Post yesterday.

Following the two-hour meeting of the board at the White House, Frank C. Walker, director of the National Emergency Council, in charge of applications and information regarding the works program, announced briefly the action taken. Later in the evening a detailed list of the projects approved was given out.

Meanwhile Mr. Walker addressed the country in a radio broadcast explaining the purpose of the works program to transfer 3,500,000 persons on relief rolls to public works projects. He outlined what had been done and enumerated the seven points of President Roosevelt's yardstick that will gov[illegible]e works program.

The allotment bo[illegible]k no action on the rate of wa[illegible] which will be paid on these public works projects. Reports indicated that wage scales about 30 per cent below the prevailing wage rates was under discussion. Such wages would range between 29 and 35 cents an hour for unskilled common labor; between 50 and 60 cents an hour for semi-skilled labor and from 75 to 85 cents for skilled workers.

As the allotment board met, rumbles of dissatisfaction over such wage levels were heard on Capitol Hill. Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, who led the fight in the Senate to force payment of prevailing wages on the works, was loud in his denunciation of a level less than those rates.

Sees Wage Level Lowered.

He contended that the establishment of such rates would drag down the wage level of the entire country and that an effort should be made to induce the President to withhold his approval of the proposed rates. He contended that Mr. Roosevelt was committed to the maintenance of prevailing wage rates.

Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, as well as works progress administrator under the new program, reported that the trend of urban unemployment relief in terms both of people on relief rolls and expenditures moved downward between March and April, on the basis of preliminary reports from 145 cities.

These reports showed that the number of families and single persons on relief declined 1.4 per cent and expenditures decreased seven-tenths of 1 per cent. For the 145 cities the families and single persons on relief in April totaled 2,172,235, compared with 2,202,641 in March, while expenditures for their relief in April totaled $70,688,827, compared with $71,173,662 in March.

Washington had 22,921 families and single persons on relief in March and 22,344 in April. The cost of relief for these cases in April totaled $615,299, compared with $665,629 in March.

7,000 Farms Served By Power Station

Maryland Survey Shows Gain in Electricity Use.

More than 7,000 farms in Maryland are receiving central station electric service, and thousands of residents not classed by the Census Bureau as farmers are receiving service from these same lines, according to a survey just completed by the University of Maryland Extension Service.

The report, compiled with the aid of the Maryland Emergency Relief Administration, shows that in 1923 only 2 per cent of the farms were served.

During the next 10 years an additional 6,148 farms were connected. This made a total of 7,049 farms, or 16½ per cent of the State farms, receiving station service.

18 CCC Barracks To Be Constructed

Maryland and Virginia Projects Authorized.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., May 16.—Construction of 18 new camps for the Civilian Conservation Corps was authorized today at the Tihrd Corps headquarters here.

The new camps are part of the new CCC expansion program which calls for 104 new projects throughout the Third Corps Area. Among those to be built in Maryland are five in Garrett County and one for mosquito control in Worcester County.

Eleven of the new camps will be built on Government reservations as follows: Two each at Fort Monroe, Va.; Fort George C. Meade, and Fort Hoyle, Va., and one each at the Aberdeen Proving Ground at Fort Washington, Md.

6 Hurt in Collision Near New Market

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., May 16.—Six persons were injured, four of whom are at the City Hospital, when two automobiles crashed between New Market and Ridgeville last night.

Those at the hospital are Francis N. Rickerds, 43, Weverton, fractured leg and lacerations; Charles F. Miles, 35, Brunswick, concussion; William P. Carey, Knoxville, chest injury, and Ferdinand Salow, 22, Knoxville, bruises.

William L. Carey, Knoxville, was discharged after treatment at the hospital. James Bussard, Monrovia, suffered bruises and was taken home. The Careys, Salow, Rickerds and Miles were en route here and Bussard was driving in an opposite direction. Sergt. D. R. Peterson of the State Police, began an investigation.

AAA Financing Of Farm Rally Denied by Davis

Letter to Robinson Lashes Hastings Accusations as Preposterous.

welcomed them, and rendered to them assistance when we could give it."

The letter was written to Robinson in reply to a request from him for information with which to combat the Hastings charges, it was learned. Davis included a batch of telegrams and communications sent field agents in substantiation of his claim that the AAA did not foment the movement.

Asserting that the farmers "paid their own way," Davis said, "I wish to reiterate the farmers have as much right to express themselves, and if they want to, to come to their Capital to do it, as other people."

Thrust at Vandenberg.

Wallace did not allude to the farm march in his speech, contenting himself with an explanation of Administration farm policies and replies to his senatorial and other critics.

"If there is any political value in the current clamor about imports of food products," he said, "those who oppose the agricultural program are welcome to it."

This was regarded as an indirect reference to an attack on the New Deal foreign trade and farm program by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, who is mentioned as a potential Republican candidate for President. Vandenberg had charged that the amount of farm imports is reaching dangerous proportions.

"Frankly, I am unable to see how anyone with a sense of perspective can become alarmed about grain imports which are less than 2 per cent of the reduction in the grain crop attributable to the drought," Wallace said, "or meat imports which were less than half the imports of 1929."

Hastings Accuses Agents.

Wallace declared that establishment of the "ever-normal granary," which is provided in the pending AAA amendments, is "the next logical step" in the farm program. This project, he added, "can only gain popular support, however, as some of the current misrepresentations about food prices and 'floods' of imports dies down."

Senator Hastings, who had characterized President Roosevelt's speech to the farmers as that of "the small town bully," exhibted clippings to show that county agents in Texas organized the farm movement in their territory.

"Who else had the facilities for reaching into every county and organizing this march and was, at the same time, interested in getting legislation through Congress?" he demanded.

"Does anyone believe that there suddenly arose over the farmlands a desire to come to Washington and tell Congress about this AAA legislation, and that through some miracle all of these delegates from Texas, and South Carolina, and Georgia, and South Dakota, arrived here at the same time?"

May Drop Quiz.

In view of Davis' letter to Senator Robinson, it was uncertain whether Hastings will pursue his resolution, which calls on Wallace to produce all the information in his possession bearing on the farm demonstration. Hastings received a number of telegrams indorsing his stand.

"In our opinion it (the farm meeting) was arranged by AAA officials to vindicate their short-sighted policies in the eyes of the Nation," declared a telegram from the Cotton Industries Employes Association of Galveston, Tex.

The statement of the Texas farmers was given to The Washington Post by John F. Renfro, Angelina County; W. M. Pool, jr., Bailey County, and W. T. Roan, Hunt County. In part it stated:

"We came here of our own free will and accord to show our appreciation for what the New Deal has done for our country. We were not paid by any official of the Federal Government, or from any Federal funds.

"We consider it an insult to be accused of receiving any money from Government sources. Besides paying our own way or coming as delegates from our communities at the expense of our neighbors, we paid $800 out of our own pockets for the use of Constitution Hall, where our meeting was held, and we have paid our own way while in Washington."

Counsel Acts To Prove 'Copy' Of Jones' Will

Two Women Claim Bulk of Estate by Terms of 'Lost' Testament.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsville, Va., May 16.—Depositions have been taken to determine the contents of an alleged lost or destroyed will of W. J. Jones, Martinsville business man and large property owner. The Henry Circuit Court in July will be asked to probate a copy of the will.

The depositions were taken in an attempt to prove the will was properly executed and never revoked by Jones and that his property, valued at more than $50,000, should be disposed of according to the terms of the "lost" will.

The will is said to have contained certain bequests to relatives of the Martinsville man, with Mrs. Bessie G. Jones Shultz, of Greenville, Va., and Miss Dulcie Goode, of Martinsville, the largest beneficiaries.

Harris, Harvey & Brown, attorneys, of Danville, represent Mrs. Schultz and Miss Goode, while the heirs at law are represented by J. R. Smith, Taylor & Broaddus, of Martinsville, and John W. Carter, jr., of Danville.

Previous Will Declared Void.

The local circuit court at recent terms invalidated a deed purported to have been drawn up by Jones shortly before he died in 1931, conveying to J. Ben Davis, a relative, the valuable Jones Hotel property on Fayette and Jones streets. A last will and testment, conveying Davis the bulk of the estate, also was declared void.

The property was ordered sold and the proceeds thereof distributed among heirs determined by court.

Counsel for Mrs. Shultz and Miss Goode instituted proceedings to the sale decree. They claimed a prior will bequeathed the property to the two women.

Judge J. T. Clements ordered the sale postponed.

Byrd Disguise Thwarts Crowd At Boston Fete

Fake Mustache, Spectacles, Cap Enable Explorer to Rejoin Ship.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 16.—Disguised by a false mustache, dark spectacles, civilian garb and a cap, Admiral Richard E. Byrd slipped into Boston for a homecoming celebration that tonight had surpassed the one given him on his previous return from the Antarctic.

The official reception for the explorer began early today with docking of his two ships.

Admiral Byrd disclosed, however, he had come overland from New York last night donning the masquerade to reboard the freighter Jacob Ruppert, battered supply ship of the expedition, and rejoining the 110 men of his crew.

Deficit Is $60,000.

The second expedition to the South Pole was officially disbanded and Admiral Byrd greeted with ceremonials, public functions and eulogistic speech-making—began to lay plans to liquidate the $60,000 deficit of the enterprise.

None of the accouterments of a vast public welcome was lacking. A fireboat spewed cascades of water into the air as it paced the Ruppert and the barkentine Bear of Oakland, the other expedition ship, up the harbor and a 13-gun salute boomed out from the Charlestown Navy Yard, where the two vessels were berthed.

Steamboat and train whistles screamed a welcome, and to the din was added the howls and yelping of 67 of the expedition's sled dogs, who tugged excitedly at short chains on the upper decks of the Ruppert when noises of welcome began.

4 Children Hear Acclaim.

Cheers and handclapping rose from a throng of more than a thousand at the Navy Yard docks. Interspersed were the shouted greetings of friends and relatives of some of the 27 New England men who were members of the expedition, last at home in October, 1933, when the vessels set sail for the polar regions from Boston.

On historic Boston Common a crowd fo 5,000 gathered to add its welcome to the returning explorer and his crew. Of these many more were relatives of expedition members and four were Admiral Byrd's own children, for the first time in their lives watching their father acclaimed and hearing him eulogized.

His three daughters—Helen, 8; Catherine, 11, and Bolling, 12—identically clad in gray tweed suits, applauded with the rest of the crowd at mention of their father's name, while his son, Richard, 14, who most resembles the explorer, sat shyly quiet.

Officials Vie in Honors.

While he puffed at a pipe aboard the Ruppert and played with Bunkie, a husky dog born in Little America, Admiral Byrd said that after he had had some rest from the rigors of his adventure he would devote himself to liquidating the expedition's $60,000 deficit, probably through a series of lectures.

Remarking that he "was a tough fellow to be married to," the admiral said he planned "to stick around home; that's due to my family." He admitted he had not fully recovered from effects of his long, solitary vigil in the Antarctic wastes, but said that he merely needed some rest to recuperate fully.

"But I won't say that I won't make another expedition."

The official welcoming ceremonies included the admiral's reception by Gov. James F. Curley, accompanied by Mrs. Byrd, at the Navy Yard, a later welcome by the State in the hall of flags at the Statehouse and a luncheon given by Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield. Earlier the mayor had boarded the Jacob Ruppert and greeted the explorers as the vessel proceeded up the harbor.

National Park Service Approves $1,712 Job

Recommendation of a contract award for installation of lightning rods on the two pylons at the west end of Arlington Memorial Bridge and advertising of bids to air condition several rooms in the White House were announced yesterday by the National Park Service.

Estimates on the White House job will be opened tomorrow in the Navy Building. A private dining room and two bedrooms are to be equipped with air-conditioning units.

The lightning-rod contract will go to a Trenton (N. J.) company on a low bid of $1,712.40. Besides the two bridge pylons, each of which is surmounted by a stone eagle, protection will be provided for eight piers at the memorial entrance to Arlington Cemetery, four gate houses and pylons at the boundary channel bridge.

E. I. Kaufman Heads Jewish Relief Fund

E. I. Kaufmann, of Washington, has been named as one of 100 American Jewish leaders, who will head an appeal for funds to relieve the distressed conditions of Jews abroad. The selection of Mr. Kaufmann as an honorary vice president of the United Jewish Appeal, was announced by Felix M. Warburg, national chairman of the 1935 drive.

The goal for the campaign is $3,250,000. Oustanding personalities in the philanthropic, cultural and social welfare activities of the country are included in the list of honorary vice chairmen. The program of the appeal includes aid to the 500,000 Jews of Germany.

Smithsonian Receives Historic Telephone

The instrument used April 25 in the first telephone conversation around the earth was presented to the Smithsonian Institution yesterday by W. C. Langdon, historical librarian of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. Dr. Charles G. Abbott, secretary of the institution, accepted the instrument.

The historic call was from Walter S. Gifford, A. T. & T. president, in New York, to San Francisco, Java, Amsterdam, London and back to New York to Vice President Theodore Miller in the next room. It traveled 25,000 miles in a quarter of a second.

'Dismissed' by Death, Two Court Cases Ended

Death stalked through the District Supreme Court yesterday, and the name of Philip E. Magner was stricken from the criminal and civil court trial calendar.

Magner died of heart disease a few hours before he was to have gone on trial before Justice James M. Proctor on a charge of violating the gaming laws by running a numbers game. In addition, his wife, Mrs. Alberta B. Magner, had a suit for limited divorce pending.

Man Granted Writ In Fire-Call Case

Claims 10-Year Term for False Alarms Is Harsh.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts, in District Supreme Court, yesterday issued a writ of habeas corpus to test the legality of the imprisonment of Walter Monroe, colored, who in 1929 was sentenced to ten years in jail on ten charges of turning in false fire alarms.

Monroe charged that his sentence was cruel, harsh and inhuman. He said that when he was tried in Police court he did not know he was entitled to the aid of an attorney, nor that he was entitled to a jury trial. He was given a six-month sentence on each charge, with a fine of $100 on each. In lieu of the fine, he was ordered to serve an additional six months in each case.

Henry L. Johnson, representing Monroe, said his client had been deprived of his rights when he was tried in Police Court and sent "down the river" prior to an attempt to inquire into his mental condition. The habeas corpus calls upon Capt. M. M. Barnard, of the District penal institutions, to show cause by May 23 why the prisoner should not be released.

Patman Bonus Set On Its Way To Certain Veto

Byrns and Garner to Sign Today; Rejection Due First of Week.

lation this session are expected at the Capitol.

1. Senator Thomas said he may offer the Patman bill again and again on every important piece of Administration legislation.

2. Advocates of the Vinson bill, to provide outright $2,200,000,000 Treasury grant for bonus payment, are considering reviving that measure in the House.

3. Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), Missouri, plans to offer a rider on the Navy appropriations bill giving the President a choice of paying the bonus through a bond issue, through a currency issue or by an allotment from the $4,880,000,000 works fund.

Anticipating the Clark action, leaders yesterday made the Navy appropriations bill the Senate unfinished business before adjournment. That means the Navy bill may be passed and out of the way before the Senate acts on the veto. Clark may select another appropriation bill as a vehicle.

Garner Signs Today.

It is a matter of legislative routine that all bills passed by both houses must be signed by the Speaker and Vice President before they are sent to the President. Released from the Thomas motion, the Patman bill was immediately messaged to the House and at 5:15 p. m. Speaker Byrns attached his signature. But the bill can not leave the Capitol until Vice President Garner signs it today.

Following yesterday's conference on strategy, Senator Thomas would make no forecasts of his voting strength on a motion to override the President.

"All I can say is—we are in the best shape we hope to be in," the Oklahoman commented.

Much will depend on strength of the President's veto message, it was said. Indications by Early that it will be "forceful" led Senate leaders to renew forecasts of a sustaining vote on the veto. The House is expected to override it.

The veto message probably will go to the Capitol Monday and may be disposed of by the House the same day. Senator Thomas, however, will ask consent of the Senate not to vote on the measure until Wednesday or Thursday, he said.

Cumberland Tax Rate Increased to 95 Cents

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., May 16. — The mayor and city council yesterday fixed the tax rate at 95 cents, an increase of 3 cents over last year. The budget totals $487,165, of which $151,133.47 is for debt service.

The estimated income, aside from the amount realized from direct taxation, is $92,640. The heaviest appropriations are: Police, $70,000; fire department, $61,500; streets and alleys, $28,000; street lighting, $25,000; garbage removal, $21,000; street cleaning, $18,000; salaries, $17,000; health department, $14,000, and engineering department, $12,000.

Senate Passes Wagner's Bill By Vote, 63-12

amendment was attached in the Senate.

Although it is generally opposed by business, the President is not expected to veto the measure, if and when it passes the House. Even as the bill rolled to Senate passage, a new and strongly worded protest was entered by industry.

John E. Edgerton, president of the Southern States Industrial Council, called on the council's 10,000 constituents to oppose what he called the "wholly unjust, unnecessary, despicable Wagner labor relations bill."

Called "Wholly Un-American."

He said the bill is "deformed, vicious and wholly un-American"—something "born in Germany and introduced in the solely selfish interest of a small group of organized labor bullies who want to control the industry of this Nation, in the building of which they have contributed little but strife and class hatred."

Senate opposition was largely confined to speeches by Senator Daniel O. Hastings (Republican), Delaware, who said the bill is unconstitutional and strikes at freedom of minorities, and by Senator Tydings, who fought to amend the measure.

"It looks as if this is a bill to force every man in America to join a particular union, whether he wants to or not," shouted the Marylander.

Tydings asked that the words, "without coercion or intimidation by any person whatsoever," be added to the bill's collective bargaining section. As now written, he contended, the bill prohibits coercion by employers, but not by employes.

"If you don't accept this amendment, talk of freedom for labor is a farce," he told the Senate.

He was supported by Senator James Couzens (Republican), Michigan, who said it was "well known that other than employers" do attempt coercion.

Walsh Berates Amendment.

Insisting the amendment would weaken the measure, the bill's author, Senator Wagner, and Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat, of Massachusetts, roundly berated the proposal.

Wagner said the "big employers" would have "cheered" for the bill if the amendment was attached. He said the courts might rule that the threat to strike constitutes "coercion."

Walsh said the amendment would "make a police court" out of the National Labor Relations Board.

"The only human being in the world who can effectively coerce an employe is an employer," he said.

The vote on the Tydings amendment came only a few minutes before final passage and adjournment over the week-end. Only 7 other Democrats and 13 Republicans voted with the Marylander, while 42 Democrats, 6 Republicans, 1 Farmer-Laborite and 1 Progressive lined up against his amendment.

Loudoun Trims Its School Year With Funds Cut

County Board Decides on 8 Months, but With Salaries the Same.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., May 16.—The school term in Loudoun County for white schools was cut to eight months for the year 1935-36, and the colored schools will be continued at eight months, according to the decision of the county school board meeting here this morning. The salary schedule for teachers will be continued at the same monthly rate.

The reduction from a nine-month term, which has been in force in the county for years, was made by the board after it was found that State and county appropriations would not meet estimated expenditures for a nine-month session.

At the last meeting of the board of supervisors, the school board asked for an appropriation of $112,000. This would have necessitated a $1 levy. Much opposition to this increase was made by the taxpayers and a 90 cent rate was set. An appropriation of $85,000 was made to the schools.

This is an increase of $2,500 over last year, but for years the schools in Loudoun have been using Federal and surplus funds. These will not be available for the coming session. The State appropriation is $57,500 and the estimated expenditures for the eight months is $144,500.

The following teachers were appointed at the meeting:

Aldie, principal, Philip di Zerega; high school assistant, Catherine Phillips, seventh grade, and high school subjects, Nancy G. Rogers.

Arcola, Dorothy Rollins; Arlington, primary, Helen Martz; Blakeley Grove, Mabel Furr; Bluemont, intermediate grades, Mary E. Smith; Brooklyn, Helen Crouch; Emerick, primary, Anna Stoneburner; Hillsboro, principal, A. B. Hutton; Leesburg, high school assistant, John Diedrich; floater, elementary, Thelma Frye; Lincoln, high school assistants, Katharine Bridges, Margaret Ward and J. F. Potts; Lincoln graded school, primary, Mary R. Thomas; Little River, Mrs. Mary Megeath; Lovettsville, grades, Mrs. Dorothy Compher and Elizabeth Morgan; Lucketts, principal, George F. Hankla; high school assistant, Elsie G. Hume; primary, Helen Carruthers; Middleburg, principal, Lake Van Sickler; grades, Josephine Osborn; Mountville, Lucille Best; McGraw's Ridge, Mrs. Mae D. Poland; Pleasant Valley, Robert Myers; Round Hill, high school assistant, Elizabeth Bailey, Rachel Rogers and Frances Whitman; Sterling, Bessie Grubb and Clara Conrad; Taylorstown, Eliza George; Waterford, high school assistant, Louise Cloud.

Peach Is Named New Manager Of Horse Show

Culpeper Association Is Reorganized; Event Set for July 4-5.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., May 16.—At the reorganization meeting of the Culpeper Horse Show and Racing Association, R. S. Peach, of Upperville, was chosen manager of the Culpeper show, with J. Douglas Swan and T. Weedon Armstrong, of Culpeper, as assistant managers, and John S. Thornton, of Culpeper, secretary-treasurer.

Mr. Peach served as secretary-treasurer of the Upperville Horse Show for a number of years and is well known throughout Virginia as an exhibitor and manager.

The Culpeper and adjoining counties show will be held July 4 and 5.

The prize list for the thirty-first annual exhibition will be ready for distribution by June 1. The program will consist of 23 exhibition classes, four flat races and a steeplechase each day. The management has leased the Horse Show Grounds, also the hotel dance hall and concession stands for the two days.

The horse show committee for 1935 is composed of P. M. Browning, Chilton W. Yowell, Arthur D. Scott, M. R. Waugh, C. S. Bruce, Charles B. Payne and Clyde Johnson, of Culpeper; Morris Clark, of Orange; Arthur Miller, Robert Mercer Menefee and W. A. Laing, of Rappahannock; Joseph B. Fray, of Madison; North Fletcher and G. Elliott Doyle, of Fauquier County.

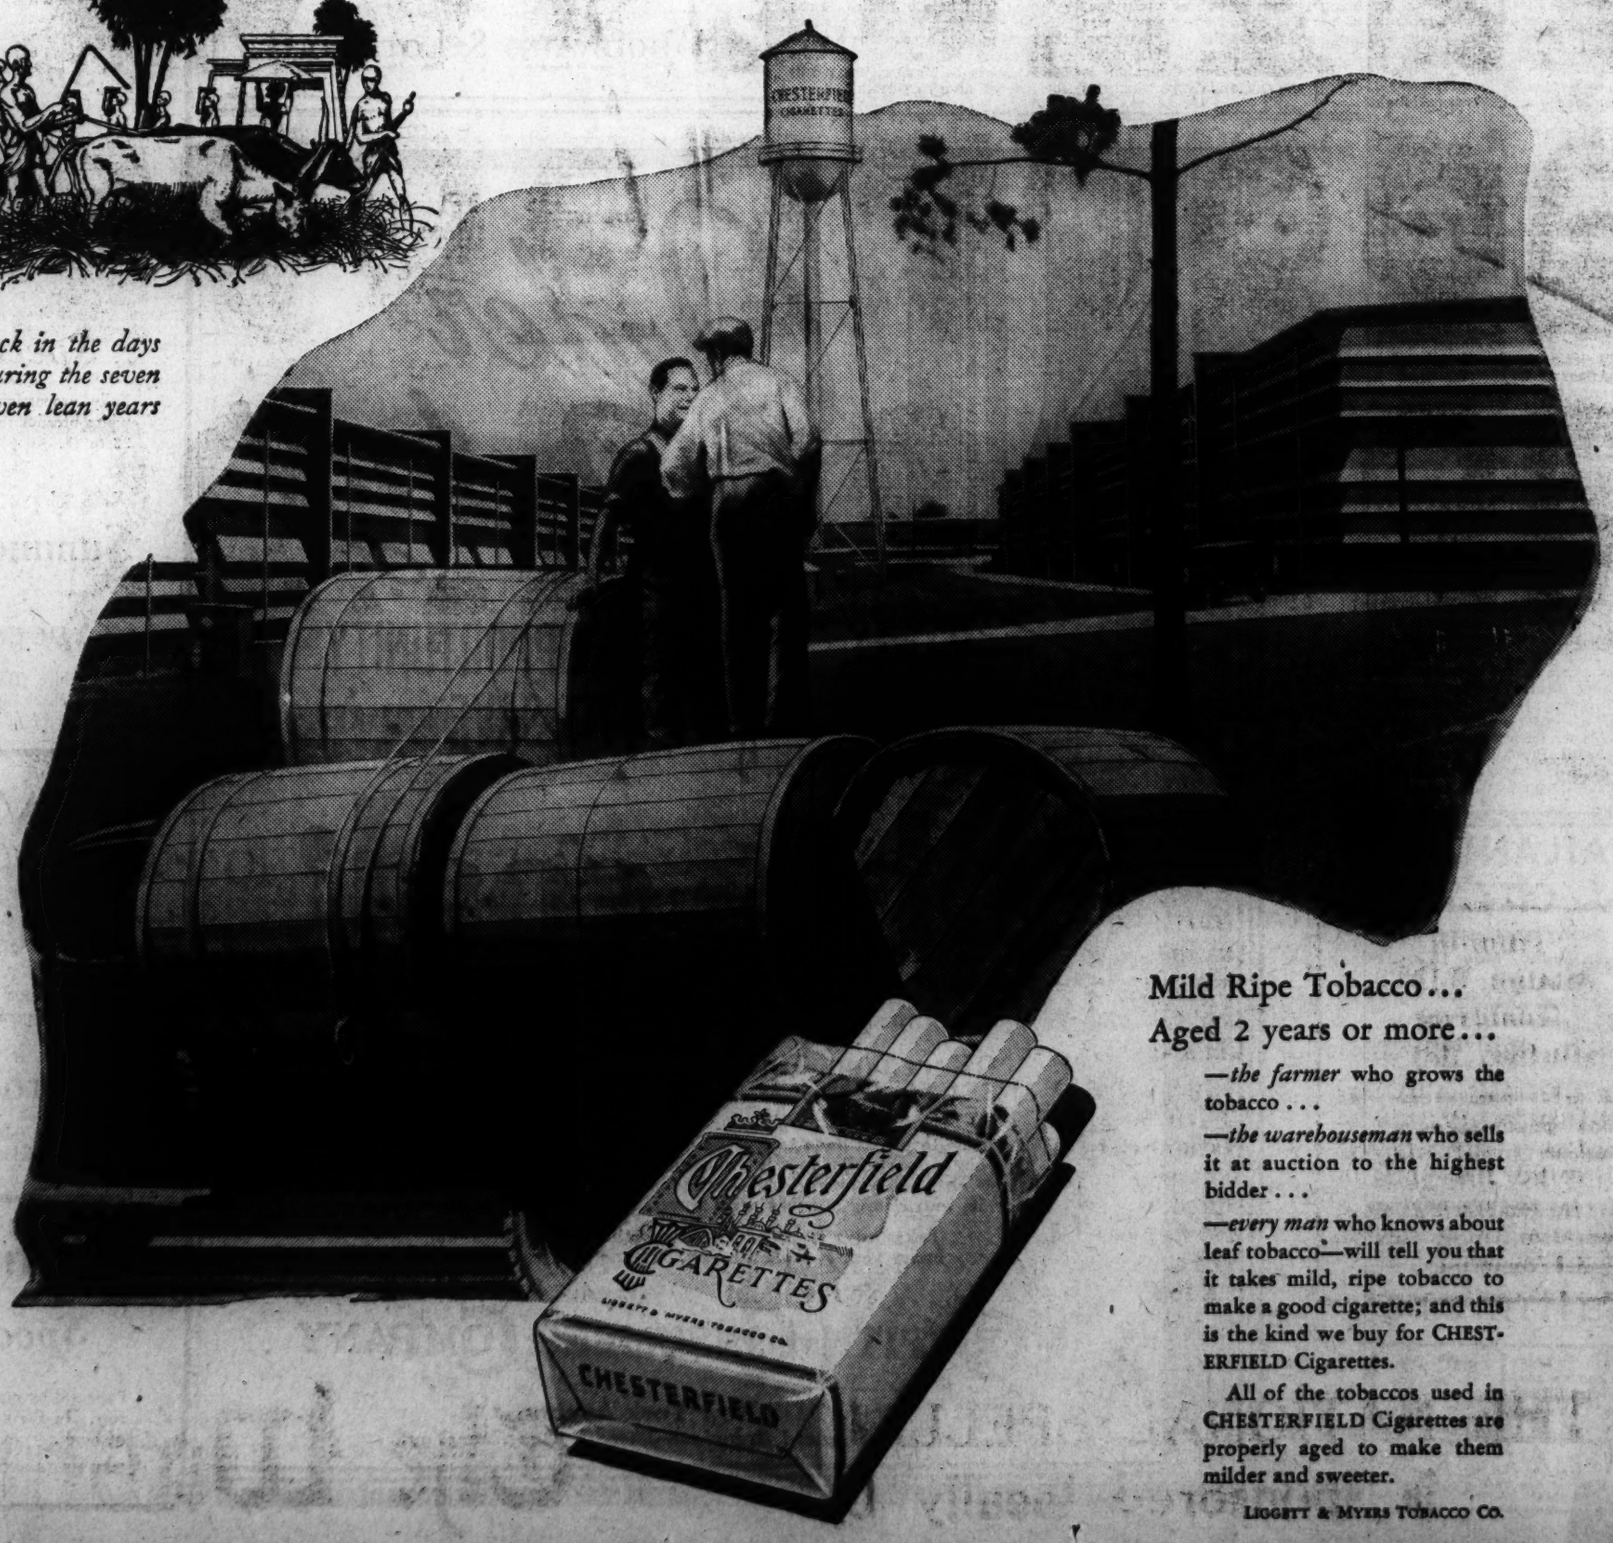
You remember how in Egypt, back in the days of the Pharaohs, they stored up grain during the seven good years so as to be ready for the seven lean years to come . . .

Lean years may come . . . and fat years may go . . .

That's why we have close to a hundred million dollars worth of tobacco packed away in 4½ miles of warehouses to grow mild and naturally sweet.

To make sure that Chesterfields will be uniform in taste and mildness, we have in storage mild, ripe tobaccos from the crops of four years—1931-'32-'33 and '34.



Mild Ripe Tobacco . . .
Aged 2 years or more . . .

—the farmer who grows the tobacco . . .

—the warehouseman who sells it at auction to the highest bidder . . .

—every man who knows about leaf tobacco—will tell you that it takes mild, ripe tobacco to make a good cigarette; and this is the kind we buy for CHESTERFIELD Cigarettes.

All of the tobaccos used in CHESTERFIELD Cigarettes are properly aged to make them milder and sweeter.

Garnett Urges Bail Rescinding For Sam Beard

'Substantial Question' in Appeal Plea Denied; Jail Asked for 12.

Flouting the opinion of Justice Joseph W. Cox that there was a "substantial question" involved in the appeal which Sam Beard and his 12 co-defendants announced they would make, United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett and his assistant, Roger Robb, late yesterday asked the United States Court of Appeals to withdraw Justice Cox's order permitting the defendants to bail pending the perfection of their request for a review.

Rob asked the appellate court to supersede the bond ruling with an order requiring the commitment of the 13 men. He cited seven reasons, among them a United States Supreme Court rule, which he asserted supported the Government's position.

Beard and his colleagues were admitted to bail, pending appeal, by Justice Cox. The jurist held that since there was, in his opinion, a substantial question involved in the appeal, he was empowered, in his judicial discretion, to grant bail.

The Government's motion contended there was no "substantial question" involved. The "wire-tapping" angle of the case did not revolve around the defendants' constitutional rights, and the defendants were not entitled to a "substantial question" ruling on their challenge as to the search and seizure of paraphernalia in the Mather office building, the Government asserted.

Other grounds of appeal, arguing against the sufficiency of the evidence and stating that the jury passed on the facts involved and decided the defendants were guilty, were cited. No action was taken on the motion, which requires that the defense attorneys answer by May 22.

House Fight With Senate Over Extension Looms Certain.

through opportunity for hearings, judicial review and public control of all compulsory processes.

There was no reference in the recommendations to price fixing, which is specificially forbidden under the Senate resolution. Major points of difference are expected to develop over the time of extension, the interstate commerce definition and the price-fixing provision. Opponents of the Richberg plan declare that under his definition of interstate commerce almost any kind of business would be subject to regulation.

Doughton Defends Richberg.

Following the Ways and Means conference, Chairman Doughton came to the defense of Richberg against critics who have charged that he has been "lobbying." The conference was the second one within 24 hours, the first having been held Wednesday night.

"We have been holding these conferences solely to get information to guide us in our duties," Doughton said. "These men have come here, not at their request, but at our invitation. They have not been trying to dominate this committee nor to write the law.

"I don't consider Mr. Richberg a lobbyist in any sense of the word. He has not tried to dominate or control this committee. I think Mr. Richberg has been put in an unfair light."

Doughton said the committee would draft a bill providing for two-year extension, based on the Administration recommendations, the present law and the Senate resolution. Public hearings will start at 10 a. m. Monday. The bill may be reported before the end of the week. Senate leaders have served notice that they will fight any such measure if it is passed by the House.

"Amazing Spectacle."

Opening his previously announced attack upon Richberg, Senator Clark, author of the 10-month extension resolution, said:

"Never since the decadent days of the Roman empire, when the praetorian guard arrogated to itself the right to set up and pull down emperors, has there been a more arrogant performance than that of the day before yesterday.

"It is an amazing spectacle, to say the least, for a Federal employe to call a meeting of several hundred other Federal employes, there to denounce the Senate of the United States elected by the people, because, in pursuance of the authority and duties imposed upon it by the Constitution, it saw fit not to obey the behest of Mr. Richberg by guaranteeing these employes a tenure of two additional years on the pay roll, but for the present limited these pay-roll enjoyments to a period which would enable the Congress to legislate in the light of a Supreme Court decision."

Referring to Richberg as a "Mussolini," Clark continued:

"Having now put the Senate in its place, if the resolution passed by the Senate day before yesterday shall be adopted by the Congress, doubtless Mr. Richberg will call another meeting of NRA employes to include the whole Congress within the scope of his denunciation.

Suggests "Appeal."

"If the Supreme Court should see fit in the performance of its functions to declare unconstitutional any part of the act, doubtless prompt appeal will be taken by Mr. Richberg to the pay-roll brigade of the NRA and the highest court will be roundly denounced for its harsh treatment.

If, perchance, the President of the United States should see fit to sign the resolution extending the period of the operation of NRA only until April 1, 1936, the council of NRA employes will doubtless decree his deposition from office and banishment from the imperial favor of Mr. Richberg's smile."

The "head and front of the Senate's offending," Senator Clark said, was the fact that it had failed to guarantee the jobs of "the bureaucrats of NRA" for a longer period. He said the objection also was that the Senate had refused to permit Richberg to write the law and that it had refused to change the law to make pending cases in the courts moot.

"Vicious practices of administration," he continued, "outrageous assumptions of power not given by the act, constant attempts to reach out and gather in jurisdiction never intended to be conferred by the act, ruthless oppression of small business, have been largely due to administrative conduct of the NRA."

Borah "Surprised."

Senator Barkley, (Democrat), Kentucky, followed with a discussion of the interstate aspects of NRA, declaring that he believed it unfair for a business in interstate commerce to be restricted by a code while a competitor doing only an intrastate business would not be so restricted. He said he believed "there has been great good accomplished by the NRA."

Senator Borah said he would not criticize Richberg for alleged lobbying "because I recognize his right to speak his views." He expressed surprise at Richberg's opposition to the Senate resolution. Senator Borah read a speech made by Richberg last October in which he attacked price fixing.

"If we are asked to recede from our stand," he said, "we will not consent to compromise measures, but will do precisely what we believe to be in the best interests of the country."

Borah said he believed destruction of price fixing to be "essential to sound economy and return of purchasing power to the great masses of the people."

Hits Business "March."

"Why should Richberg now turn about and condemn a resolution which kills price fixing?" he asked.

"I don't care anything about Richberg's philosophy," he said.

Referring to the proposed "march on Washington" of business representatives, he said:

"I see that industry is coming here to advise us. They ought not have announced that it is coming but that it is remaining. Do you suppose they are going to give up the power to fix prices without a struggle? It is such a power as was never contemplated by the czar of all the Russias. Let them disclose their profits and we'll have additional information to support Mr. Richberg's original objection to price fixing."

Speaking of the interstate commerce, Borah said that "without usurpation of power there can be no control of intrastate commerce by Congress."

They "Defy Attack."

"You can make rules," he said, "to annoy intrastate business into submission. There can be no objection to removal of intrastate business from NRA control unless this is to continue."

Ward Cheny, chairman of the industry and business committee for NRA extension, announced that a meeting of 1,000 to 1,500 business representatives would be held in Continental Memorial Hall next Wednesday to urge two-year extension.

An announcement concerning the meeting quoted Cheny as saying:

"We are coming to Washington as a representative voluntary body of business men and industrialists to register our conviction. This we shall do next Wednesday in our meeting here in Washington. It will be no 'mass meeting' or 'march on Washington,' but an orderly conference of industrial and business representatives.

"We expect attack. The political opposition—and almost all of the opposition is political—will probably be just as unprincipled in regard to our conference as it has been in regard to every other expression of support for NRA. But I want to make it clear at the outset that we defy attack of that and every other kind. We believe we have a right and a duty to come to Washington in an orderly manner and to confer and to state our position to those who represent us in the Government. We shall hold to strict accountability any person or agency that makes any statement impugning our motives."

Text of NIRB Recommendations For New Recovery Legislation

Following is the text of recommendations for NRA legislation made by the National Industrial Recovery Board and approved by President Roosevelt:

Essentials of legislative action for the extension of the NRA:

1. Two-year extension—This time is necessary to obtain the co-operation of industry in the formulation of codes, with assurances to management and labor of reasonably permanent conditions. It is necessary to maintain an adequate personnel in the NRA; to work out problems of code administration; to strengthen enforcement through judicial approval of methods, and to prevent the entire breakdown of labor and fair-trade practice provisions by chiselers who are already at work undermining the standards of fair competition. The extension of NRA for a few months will bring rapid deterioration and disintegration of the whole industrial recovery program.

2. Adequate period for the revision of codes—Three to six months.

3. Improved statement of legislative policies and standards to give additional guidance and authority for administrative action.

4. Jurisdiction of NRA limited to industries engaged in, or substantially affecting, interstate commerce. This will prevent the NRA from taking in too much territory and will strengthen its legal authority.

5. Provision for voluntary codes and adequate authority for imposition of limited codes. Both are necessary. Voluntary codes to encourage improved business practices, including appropriate labor provisions. Limited codes to insure minimum wages, maximum hours, prohibition of child labor and section 7(a).

6. Definite authority and standards for the NRA to prevent unfair competitive practices, especially those tending to monopoly and destruction of small enterprises.

7. Methods of code making and enforcement should be further defined; with enforcement primarily through injunction or cease and desist orders, and with provision for adequate protection of individual rights and small enterprises through opportunity for hearing and judicial review, and public control of all compulsory processes.

Lyddane Fired Off County Job In Montgomery

Board of Commissioners Drop Employe Whose Wife Faces Grand Jury.

Francis (Slom) Lyddane, whose wife, Mrs. Anne Lyddane, will face a grand jury Monday in Rockville, charged with a plot to murder her husband, was dismissed as a bookkeeper in the Montgomery County dispensary system yesterday by the board of county commissioners. No reason was given for the dismissal which is effective May 31.

New qualifications for county policemen were recommended at the board's meeting yesterday by the police committee composed of Commissioners Frank H. Karn, Paul M. Coughlan and Richard H. Lansdale. The proposed qualifications embrace the following:

At least an eighth-grade education, Army Navy or Marine Corps service desirable but not necessary, knowledge of motor vehicle laws and county laws, ability to operate motor vehicles, age between 21 and 35 with preference for ages between 25 and 31, height of at least 5 feet 8 inches and weight not less than 135 pounds, good eyesight and hearing, keenness of observation, integrity, reliability, tact, courage, strength and good physical condition.

Points will be allotted as follows: Education, 1; experience, 1; duties, including local information, 3½; personal interview, 2, and physical test, 2½.

A report of the board's inspection of county EWA projects revealed that much good work has been done and the commissioners were satisfied with the progress made.

Stephen C. Cromwell, manager of the Rockville Federal Emergency Relief Administration office, reported on expenditures in his office for the period from April 5, 1934, to April 25, 1935, which revealed that projects on which the county commissioners expended funds amounted to $89,245.79. On these projects the FERA spent $36,475.45 for labor.

Total FERA expenditure in the county amounted to $174,935.69. Total contributions on all projects were $172,940.10, making a grand total of FERA expenditures, Federal and otherwise, of $347,375.79. Of this amount Cromwell reported that administrative expenditures took only $7,511.55, or only 2¼ per cent.

A letter was received by the board from the Maryland State Roads Commission advising that headways on culverts throughout the state will be eliminated as soon as possible in connection with a new program shortly to be launched.

Announcement was made of the appointment of Floyd Moxley, of Damascus, as desk clerk in the Rockville police station at a salary of $75 per month, effective May 20.

New Furnace Promised For Hagerstown Court

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., May 16.—Overcoats will not be necessary as they were last winter for officials and employes at the courthouse on unusually cold days. The grand jury has been informed by the county commissioners that an additional furnace will be installed during the summer.

On several occasions last winter it was necessary for some of the offices in the courthouse to close, while other officials who remained on duty had to wear overcoats.

LOCAL CHAMPIONS TO COMPETE FOR HONORS AND PRIZES

Tune in Station WJSV Tomorrow Saturday, May 18

The area finals of the National Spelling Bee will be broadcast in part, over Station WJSV, from 10:30 to 11 a. m., and the final stage from 2 to 3 p. m. County winners competing.

Nearly 300 schools, in the past two months, have held contests to select their best spellers. School champions took part in county matches, and these winners, listed above, tomorrow will compete for the Maryland-Virginia championship.

A 12-volume set of ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA JUNIOR is offered by The Post, local sponsor of the National Spelling Bee, as first prize in the area finals. This widely acclaimed reference book is written and edited by experts for children. Profusely illustrated and handsomely bound, it comes in a wooden box, suitable as a bookcase. Second prize, offered by The Post, is a four-volume Champlin's Young Folks' Cyclopaedia.

The Maryland-Virginia champion, to be chosen at the area finals tomorrow in the New National Museum in Washington, besides winning Britannica Junior, will represent this territory in the National Spelling Bee.

There he or she will compete for $1,750 in cash prizes against champions of other parts of the United States. Public spirited newspapers the Nation over conduct the National Spelling Bee, to stimulate the study of spelling among school children. In the local area, The Post awards certificates of honor to school winners, books as first and second prizes in all county or city divisional matches, and the prizes noted above to area winners.

Tune in Station WJSV On Tuesday, May 28

The National Spelling Bee will be broadcast over Station WJSV from 11:45 a. m. to 12:15 p. m. Twenty champions from every part of the Nation to compete.

THE NATIONAL SPELLING BEE is sponsored locally by The Washington Post

Rewarded For Service.

Both full-time members of the District Public Utilities Commission have recently been appointed to new terms. In each case President Roosevelt decided to reward competent officials for diligent service rendered. His action gives assurance to the public that an alert and conscientious board will continue to investigate the utilities with the object of reducing rates to the minimum that will permit a fair return to the operating companies.

Richmond B. Keech has served on the commission only a year, but his reputation as an intelligent and hard-working public servant was well established before he took that assignment. As people's counsel he had become thoroughly familiar with the routine of utility regulation, and had demonstrated a keen interest in the public welfare. His present duties are in large measure a continuation of the service by which he won the public confidence.

The recent renomination of Riley E. Elgen, chairman of the commission, encountered unnecessary delay when it went to the Senate for confirmation. Although no opposition developed, the Senate withheld action because one of its members wished to learn Mr. Elgen's views on public ownership of utilities. In view of the important work before the commission it is to be hoped that no such irrelevant issue will be permitted to stand in the way of Mr. Keech's confirmation.

Collective Bargaining Test.

The settlement of the strike involving employes of the Toledo branch of the Chevrolet Company is a tribute to the efforts of the Automobile Labor Board which had been trying for months to establish a foundation for genuine collective bargaining between employers and employes within this industry. The decision was arrived at by secret ballot. With officials of the American Federation of Labor in favor of the company's compromise proposal, it is evident that the results of the poll reflect the wishes of a representative majority.

In the absence of machinery for obtaining an uncoerced expression of opinion, it is highly probable that the strike would have had to be settled by the old endurance test methods.

Apparently both sides have had a lesson in industrial discipline which is expected to save the industry from widespread and indefinitely prolonged suspension of operations in other disaffected areas. A genuinely representative collective bargaining agreement of local character obviously provides a more satisfactory basis for a general settlement than one which is reached by less peaceable and rational means.

According to Col. Leonard P. Ayres, the three leading producers of automobiles are directly or indirectly responsible for most of the net gain in the volume of industrial production recorded during 1934, and the 1935 gains over 1934 are, in his opinion, due chiefly to the same factors. Under those circumstances the value of collective bargaining in the motor industry as an alternative to settlement by the methods of strikes and lockouts is especially great.

Why We Devalued.

Secretary Morgenthau's inspired account of how and why the United States left the gold standard makes it appear that our chief purpose was to capture a larger share of world trade and conserve our gold reserves. At the time, of course, the effect of currency depreciation upon our export trade was regarded as distinctly subordinate to the attempt to raise domestic prices by monetary manipulation.

President Roosevelt, in his book, "On Our Way," stated that when the United States went off the gold basis in April, 1933, "we did deliberately what many other nations, including Great Britain, had been compelled to do against their will." That, of course, implies that the necessity of protecting our gold reserves was not a major consideration. The inference that the prime purpose of the action taken was to raise domestic prices is borne out by the emphasis which the President placed upon the necessity of arresting deflation and increasing property values as an alternative to continued bankruptcies and foreclosures. That, of course, was the general assumption at the time, as stated by Winthrop W. Aldrich in his recent testimony before the Senate Sub-committee on Banking and Currency.

Secretary Morgenthau's revised version of the Administration's reasons for abandoning the gold standard is a tacit confession of disbelief in the naive theory that internal prices vary in proportion to changes in the gold value of the dollar. Indeed, the price-raising experiment fell so far short of expectations that it would now be embarrassing for a responsible official to refer to the blasted hopes of the monetary advisers of those vanished days. If domestic prices alone were under consideration, therefore, fears of further devaluation would be virtually dissipated.

So long, however, as reliance is placed upon currency devaluation as a stimulus to export trade, there is always danger that the gold content of the dollar may again be cut.

Italy And Ethiopia.

In a cold-blooded fashion which glaringly illustrates the actual status of international morality, Italy is openly preparing to invade and subjugate a fellow member of the League of Nations.

Of that intention there is no longer room for reasonable doubt. For months troop movements, recently augmented, have been proceeding to the Italian colonies which help to cut the primitive African kingdom of Ethiopia from access to the sea. On Tuesday, Mussolini in effect announced that France and Great Britain have agreed not to interfere in the contemplated war of aggression. This was followed on Wednesday by inspired Italian newspaper declarations regarding the form of "organization" to be imposed upon Ethiopia. The world can now await the military command which will start the assembling Fascist legions on their march of conquest.

Probably this order will not be given until the autumn, provided the Abyssinians continue to refrain from any provocative action. The rainy season is about to start in East Africa and during that period hostilities more extensive than frontier skirmishes are not to be expected. The intervening period, obviously, is to be used in acclimatizing the young Italian troops; in training them for the type of warfare they can expect in the mountainous Abyssinian interior; and in developing lines of communication for an attack which probably will be directed simultaneously from both north and east. In his speech to the Senate this week Mussolini emphasized that "the number of workmen sent out surpasses the number of soldiers." He did not add that this labor is being used largely to build a comprehensive system of military roads converging on Ethiopia from both Eritrea and Italian Somaliland.

Whatever may be said of the ethics of his policy, Mussolini is unquestionably well-advised in taking this pending war very seriously. The Italians have not forgotten the crushing defeat the Abyssinians inflicted upon them 40 years ago. They know that unless their troops possess overwhelming superiority in airplanes, tanks, heavy artillery and other mechanical equipment they will risk another and a worse Adowa. For the Emperor Haile Selassie and his tribal chiefs realize that their backs are to the wall. They realize that Italy aims to convert their country into another colony. The undisciplined Abyssinian soldiers are not merely fanatically brave, and literally fighting for national existence, but they have also on their side Italian unfamiliarity with guerrilla warfare and Italian susceptibility to a hostile climate. Admittedly tropical diseases have already broken out among the conscripts who are being poured into the baking Red Sea ports.

Reports that high Italian officers view the outcome of this war with apprehension, and that French experts predict a five-year campaign before Italian victory can be achieved, encourage some hope that even now the problems at issue may be amicably arranged. Such an outcome might be expected if strong pressure were brought on Italy at the meeting of the Council of the League of Nations which convenes next week. The Abyssinian question is on the agenda, but Mussolini has taken steps to sidetrack any league action by appointing the Italian members to a proposed conciliation commission. The council, noting that this conciliatory step has been taken, may easily express a pious hope of settlement and leave the road open for Italy to act as she chooses. That, obviously, is what Mussolini anticipates.

Such a course would rob the league of much of the prestige which remains to it. In the case of Manchuria, where the intention of Japanese aggression was less flagrant and more defensible, the league at least put up a good fight for a settlement through negotiation rather than through military might. If it fails to take as clear-cut a stand in this case, even at the risk of forcing Italian resignation, the discredit to the council will be irretrievable.

To keep the record straight with regard to Germany, if for no other reason, it is essential that Italy's attention be called to the pledge in the covenant of the league which says that:

> The members of the league undertake to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all members of the league.

The Broadcasters Wake Up.

It is a matter of general lament that the radio has not fulfilled its early promises. Fifteen years ago, when broadcasting first became general, there was much excited discussion of the wonderful advances offered to civilization by a device which would throw entire peoples into instantaneous communication with the best cultural, political and economic thought. Today, with an estimated 70,000,000 persons over 10 years of age comprising the American radio audience, such bright visions have faded before the motley assortment of saccharine sales talks and kindergarten entertainment that constitutes the bulk of the daily programs.

There is talk of government control of all broadcasting. As a matter of fact, the Federal communications act already has empowered the Government to assume this control in an instant. In time of national emergency, all broadcasting equipment may be commandeered. More to the point, the law provides that broadcasters may produce only those programs that do not abridge the right of free speech or offend the general public and—most important—those that operate "in the public interest, convenience and necessity." Those are broad powers. Fortunately for the principles of democracy, little, if any, recourse to them has been detected. And only utter despair of the existing standards of program-planning could ever drive this country to the point of accepting bureaucratic control of radio.

There now comes a ray of hope that private broadcasting agencies are about to improve their programs by their own initiative. The Columbia Broadcasting System announces three new policies soon to apply to all its commercially sponsored programs. The amount of advertising in each program will be restricted; children's entertainment will be required to conform to standards excluding the exaltation of crime, recklessness, deceit, violence or disrespect; and discussion of bodily functions or disturbances in terms not generally acceptable in social groups will be discontinued.

Every private institution dependent upon public support for its success must necessarily cater to public taste. At the same time, every such institution should bear a full consciousness of its obligations to maintain the highest possible standards consistent with popular demands. That this at last is recognized as good business as well as good ethics must be encouraging news to every radio listener, advertiser, entertainer and social thinker of the country.

Just How Spontaneous?

Secretary Wallace concluded his address in Lousiana last week with this remark: "I say it is time for farmers to get up on their hind legs and fight for what they know to be simple justice." That is not, of course, a specific invitation to farmers to hold a "pep" rally in Washington. But it undoubtedly encouraged the so-called "March on the Capital" which has aroused so much political furor.

A demand for investigation of the gathering has been made in the Senate. Sponsors of that move are to some extent actuated by politics. It is their purpose to offset the unthinking impetus given the AAA by this enthusiastic cross-section of its beneficiaries. But after making all political discounts the fact remains that the Department of Agriculture is not cleared of the charge that it promoted a demonstration in the Capital City to impress Congress with the desirability of extending its powers through enactment of the proposed AAA amendments.

No investigation should be necessary to determine the origin of the farmers' "march." If the AAA is not responsible for the gathering, it should be able to establish that fact to the satisfaction of the public. On the other hand, if that organization has quietly sponsored a propaganda stunt, it has no legitimate excuse for keeping its activities under cover. A clear-cut statement from the AAA, denying any connection with the manifestation, if that is possible, would be helpful.

In any case the public ought to be informed as to the incentives behind the farmers who traveled several hundred miles to ballyhoo the AAA. Reports indicate that many of them are cogs in the administration machinery of the crop adjustment program. Thousands of farmers throughout the agricultural regions serve on community committees, county control boards, State boards of review, etc., with per diem wages taken from crop curtailment benefits. The interest of these individuals in continuance or expansion of the AAA program is obvious. If the applause which has just been heard has come chiefly from those who receive part-time wages as well as adjustment benefits from the processing taxes, the facts of the alleged lobby must come to light.

Groups interested in obtaining special favors are always inclined to converge upon Washington. That practice is not conducive to sound legislation, nor to impartial administration of the law. Whether factions seek new privileges, or merely try to retain bounties previously won, the principle remains the same. Nor is it changed by executive reference to one favored group as patriotic citizens and to a faction less powerful in politics as vicious lobbyists.

Reports indicate efforts to organize another bonus "army" to come here in protest against the anticipated veto of the Patman bill. The President may find it the more difficult to discourage this dangerous gesture for having so easily indorsed the "march" of farmers who also seek preferential governmental aid.

Supply And Demand.

From the Houston Post.

Hon. Neville Chamberlain, British statesman, in a recent speech, said:

"A policy of public works is always disappointing. The maximum effect of the maximum effort made by any government to create employment directly is trifling compared with the effect produced by a small improvement in ordinary trade."

That gets near the heart of the question of unemployment. It is trade that makes the wheels of commerce go round.

Tariff walls are an interruption to trade, and public works, however well meant, may help only temporarily.

The law of supply and demand can never be repealed. If there be no demand for the supply, naturally and necessarily there is a backing up, precisely as when more water than the river bed can accommodate is seeking an outlet.

The problem before this country, as it is for every country, is to find an outlet for its surplus products, and when that fails, the only alternative is to cut supply to demand, and for this we must trust to economic law and not to government regulation.

Letters To The Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Forty-Center's Remarks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why all this fuss about chain letters? And threats of prosecution? Seems to me that the volume of such letters has reached the point where it may take Postmaster Farley's Postoffice Department out of the red and therefore the Government should be the last one to complain. The Postoffice Department is making more out of chain letters than anyone I have yet heard of. Perhaps the employes are so used to ease that they hate to work so hard handling chain letters.

Who suffers from the chain? No one that I know of. The most anyone can lose is a dime and look at all the fun we get for our money. At a dime it's cheap.

With bookmakers and gambling existing all over the country, it makes me smile to see the Government taking the chain letter seriously. That is more than can be said of the hundreds of thousands circulating the letters, who see in it something that the American people thrive on—novelty.

All hail to the chain letters! Just another side of American childishness.

Insular States?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Puerto Rico and Hawaii now enter pleas to be created into States in this Nation. These demands must be met frankly by whatever opposition develops. For one, I am apposed to creating a State out of any Territory not preponderantly populated by the white race.

My reading of history has taught me that no nation has become powerful and long-lived that was composed of various races, and if these races had different historical backgrounds, or spoke different languages, the life of the particular nation was still more precarious. All of the ancient nations fell because they tried to incorporate other peoples into their own civilization. The "rise and fall of the Roman Empire" was due to that one fact. It was equally true of the Holy Roman Empire. And the Austrian Empire fell apart during the World War because it was made up of diverse peoples.

Great Britain had great difficulty in holding its parts together throughout its history, although there were only what might be called minor differences in race types and historical background. The British Empire is not now, after only a few years, the British Empire of 1914. Yet the great strength and continuity of what was Great Britain, and later the British Empire, lay in the fact that its major dominions were composed of one race, speaking one language and with one historical background.

We are sufficiently vexed by our population composition in continental United States without taking on what no other nation is history has ever done successfully. We had better solve our present problems before taking on more difficult ones.

Our possessions outside of continental United States, with the exception of Hawaii, were not acquired through design for conquest. In fact, we were more than puzzled what to do with the Philippines and Puerto Rico after the Spanish-American War was over. I can well remember the long-winded oratory of statesmen in the 1900 period, some of whom were for setting "these foreigners adrift;" while others were for giving them their immediate independence, and still others said we ought to keep these possessions and become empire builders like Great Britain.

Empires are now on the wane. Empires are almost as much out of fashion as kings and emperors—only Italy and Japan are still ambitious to become "far-flung."

That England, and later, Great Britain, conceded to have been the modern world's only successful empire builders, never gave their possessions beyond the British Isles equal voice in the "home" government—not even those of their own race who spoke the "mother" tongue, accounts for most of the success they achieved in empire building. That we could do as well or better is open to question.

President's War Record.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is there no one to defend the war record of President Roosevelt? Mr. Roosevelt, as Assistant Secretary of the Navy, was a passenger on the U. S. S. Dyer, a destroyer that arrived in France in early August, 1918. He spent nearly two months in Europe attending the conferences of the allied naval authorities in London, Paris and Rome. He witnessed the laying of a part of the North Sea barrage, and also inspected several United States naval air stations, naval bases and mine depots in Europe.

Instead of always being 3,000 miles away from gunfire, Mr. Roosevelt was in the midst of the war zone and actually heard the "boom" of the enemy's cannon. These facts are well known to many officials now in Washington, especially to Col. Howe, who even then was his secretary, and to Mr. McIntyre, who was on duty at the Navy Department.

President Roosevelt's war record is one of the most brilliant, spotless and courageous pages of his entire career—a record which is the envy of many politicians, for it is far beyond the reach of the political distortionist. HARRY J. BANDU.

Workless Relief?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was thrilled Sunday night at the President's optimism and started out Monday morning to put in an early application for work after two years of unemployment.

The personnel officer, with whom I talked when applying for work at the PWA, seems still neck-deep in the depression. He said they expected very few jobs to be added; that the PWA organization was about complete, etc.

Is the new work-relief program to be merely a business school racket? Is Mr. Ickes to have only expert secretarial work to make records of the expert sweeping of leaves from one spot to another? Why four months' labor over a congressional act that is to extend work only to those already employed?

After listening to the President's speech I thought things were to be handled differently, but it seems that if they keep the old personnel officers the old methods will prevail. Why did the Government give a series of examinations for Government employment assistants if political fossils are to be allowed to hand out jobs the old way?

A. C. STODARD.

On Bombing Friends.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt vents his wrath on the Congressional Military Affairs Committee by threats of censorship; because it made public proposed plans of United States military men for secret air bases on the Canandian border. He claims, however, that he sees no possibility of a change in the friendly relationship between the United States and any foreign country.

As it is not characteristic of the friendly spirit to make secret preparations to bomb a friendly people, we are waiting to see what kind of censorship the President, as commander in chief, has for the home-grown militarism that proposes to set up between Canada and the United States a sinister, explosive boundary line and wreck that invisible bond of fellowship between peoples which for over a century has been an example for the whole world and a proof of what true protection the friendly spirit can be and is.

Streamline.

The word "streamline" has been much in print during the last few months. As currently used it seems to have had its origin in these United States, but now it has leaped across the wide seas and is finding its way into newspapers in England and her remoter colonies. In Germany it has been adopted almost letter for letter in the adjective "Stromlinien." England, however, looks at the word askance. London Punch has ridiculed it as "gibberish," and a bewildered Australian asks what the word means, anyhow.

It is perhaps not easy to define, though it conveys to the mind a very clear idea—the idea of something with flowing lines, like those of a swift bird or fish, so that currents of air or water divide and stream past it, offering the least impediment to its progress. When we think of "streamline," too, it may suggest the unbroken flow of a deep, rapid river. In either case it seems to be a happy and legitimate adjective for describing the design of a water vessel or land vehicle built to avoid butting into inert or agitated masses of air or water which cut down speed. We shall probably see the word admitted to good society in future editions of English dictionaries.

The Post Impressionist

Wife—Or Still Widow?

Post Office, Friday.

OUR British cousins always have a good deal of fun over American divorces. They say our States' laws clash to such an extent that an American divorced in one part of the country never knows whether he remains divorced when he is in another part of it. But in the British Isles a citizen's frequent difficulty is to know whether or not he is married.

Of course, we have the "Scotch Marriage" in mind. Wilkie Collins wrote a tremendously Collinsesque novel about it—long ago. Now life has written another—in that English court devoted exclusively to "Probate, Divorce and Admiralty."

Although there were two suits, both hinged on a single alleged marriage—"irregular Scotch."

Suit 1: At the proper register-office of Thanet, on May 15, 1915, Geoffrey Michael Elliot Square, now a retired army officer living in Plymouth, married—or thought he married—a Scotch-born lady then known as Mrs. Valerie Jean Bewicke, widow of a certain Richard Evelyn Bewicke. And Geoffrey wanted this ceremony pronounced null and void.

Suit 2: At the proper register-office of St. Martin's, on January 7, 1921, widowed Ada Mildred Youell, of Goldsmiths, near Fairwarp, Sussex, had married—or thought she married—a Mr. Aubrey Cowan. And Ada wanted this ceremony pronounced null and void.

The trouble was that, according to both petitioners, Valerie Jean Bewicke and Aubrey Cowan, both of whom are alive today, had married each other at Sliddery, Isle of Arran, on July 25, 1912, and did not—said the petitioners—go through any form of divorce prior to the lady's subsequent marriage with Geoffrey or the gentleman's subsequent marriage with Ada.

Counsel for the former Mrs. Youell submitted that, over there in pictured Arran, on the date last mentioned, Mr. Cowan and the widow Bewicke exchanged a promise of marriage and followed it with "mutual declarations, signed by each party," in these terms:

"I hereby solemnly swear to take Valerie Jean (or Aubrey) to be my wedded wife (or husband) until death do us part."

Counsel further submitted that there was "at least twenty-one days' residence in Scotland by the parties, one of whom, the woman, was Scotch" and a subsequent matrimonial partnership. The length of this association wasn't specified, but the whole combination of circumstances, counsel argued, constituted in Scoteh law a valid, be it never so irregular, marriage.

The former widow Bewicke—Valerie Jean—put in a defense, but it seems to the lay American mind, to have been a trifle confused.

She declared that her mental state, when she signed the so-called marriage-document, was such as to render her legally incompetent of executing such a document.

And she declared that—because of his part in certain proceedings instituted by her at Edinburgh against Cowan—nobody ought to be better aware than her present husband, Square, of her never having been legally married to Cowan!

Of course, she admitted, there had been a time when Cowan said he was married to her—a time something like a year before he married Mrs. Youell. But, precisely to scotch all such nonsense, Valerie Jean, in 1920, started those Edinburgh proceedings—husband Square himself acting as her "curator and administrator."

What she demanded on that occasion was an order upon Cowan to "keep perpetual silence thereanent"—that is, never again to dare to say he'd been married to her. The action was settled on a basis which included a denial by him that he had ever been her husband.

And the upshot of it all?

When modestly chronicling the development of legal precedent in British law, the Post-Impressionist has often had recourse to quotation from the law-reports of the London Times: their style lends dignity to his frivolous Column. Nor can he do better than to go to the same source in the present instance:

"Mr. Justice Langton, in giving judgment, said the case was one of the strangest and most interesting to come before the Court. The crucial question of fact—namely, the alleged Scottish marriage between Valerie Jean Bewicke and Aubrey Cowan—was hotly disputed and formed the principal and most material issue. On the question of the marriage he (his Lordship) could entertain no doubt whatever.

"On the material point as regarded her state of mind when the respondent signed the marriage document in Arran, on her evidence and that of Mr. Cowan he found that she intended to sign it knowing that it would constitute a Scotch marriage. Not only were the documents themselves unequivocal, but the inference to be drawn from the conduct of the parties was to his mind irresistible.

"In the result he (his Lordship) granted a decree nisi in nullity in both petitions, making no order for costs in the first petition, and giving the petitioner her costs in the second petition."

At The Heels.

IN THE light of Mr. Roosevelt's speech to the farmers, Republican observers are coming to compare the role of Huey Long, Gov. Talmadge et al. to that occupied by the Southern drys in the Al Smith campaign of 1928. It has always been felt that if Smith had not had to give so much attention to the South he would have made a much better showing in the rest of the country. It was something new to the Democratic managers. In previous campaigns they had put the South on the shelf at the outset and devoted their time, energy and money to the East and West. Now they had the South barking at their heels throughout the campaign. They had to send the candidate down there, they had to send money. In the end the whole campaign fell down miserably.

From Mr. Roosevelt's speech to the farmers it is apparent he is concerned with another type of barking at the heels. The speech itself was directed at all of his critics, of course, but the tone was directed at the Long, Talmadge et als. It was in their language, it was cut out for their followers. It is not likely that it made friends anywhere else. It must have lost him friends, in fact, among those who associate a great dignity with the White House.

Mr. Hoover, it will be recalled, threw away this great asset of dignity in the heat of the 1932 fight. It is an asset that can't be minimized in a campaign. Countless people in the country look upon the opposing candidate as an impudent upstart for even challenging the man in the White House. When the man in the White House gets down into the fray he becomes just a candidate himself.

It had been assumed, however, that Mr. Roosevelt wouldn't make full use of this asset; that he would get right down into the fight. But what is giving considerable comfort to the Republicans is that Long, Talmadge et al. are pulling him down to them. They are barking at his heels and he gives the impression of not being able to shoot straight ahead but always having to turn and try to shake these fellows off.

Just as Smith was unable to pitch his campaign solely to the East and West and had always to be shaping it with the troublesome South in mind, so it seems that Mr. Roosevelt won't be able to make an appeal to the middle-of-the-roaders because of his worry about the rabble rousers. With the conservatives it is assumed he is fairly sunk. And with many speeches like the one to the farmers it is believed he will find himself struggling altogether in the limited arena of the Longs, the Talmadges, the Coughlins. There are really not enough votes in that arena to go around.

It is really a serious predicament he is in, and there is no serious threat of a third party involved. Even if he had the followers of the Longs, the Talmadges and the Coughlins intact he couldn't win with them alone. He needs in addition the bulk of the middle-ground crowd, those who are neither rigidly conservative nor interested in the rabble-rousing appeal.

How he expects to hold his ground here is difficult to understand. He can't let the mob go. Presumably he will have to continue to talk in language it understands, will have to continue to use the words of the Longs, Talmadges and Coughlins—will have to try to out-talk them, in fact. And the more he does this, it would seem, the more offense he will give to the middle-ground crowd.

• • • •

It is an awful thing to have barks at your heels like this. Every time he approaches the middle-ground crowd and begins a polite or pleasing conversation up will come the mob yipping at his heels and he will have to turn and speak in a language they will recognize. He can't kick them, he can't act firm. He must keep his words to the plane of the Longs, the Talmadges and the Coughlins.

They are a menacing shadow all the time, a shadow that will pursue him until the vote next year. There was nothing in his manner to indicate it worried him when he made his speech to the farmers. He seemed in a very gay mood, indeed. And worried he may not have been. But the tone of the speech would seem to indicate it is a very great concern.

Britain's Glass House

Hitler's Base-Stealing Proclivities Urge England to Abandon Disarmament Hopes And To Forget Obligation To Revise Post-War Treaties In Current Excitement.

By David Wills.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

HITLER is becoming quite an expert stealer of bases; first the air force, then the army, and now the navy. His air force was announced to "exist" and his army to be conscripted in anticipation of arranged discussions of these matters; and now without waiting for the naval conference in London he has ordered 12 submarines—just little ones, of the size that did so much damage against British shipping in the last war. And so he plays the game of the Isolationists and Big-Army men in England.

Hitler's claim that the German air force was equal to the British was sprung upon the British public as a great surprise, and the ordering of the submarines increased British uneasiness. Comparison of air force strengths is notoriously difficult; there is no formula as for naval comparisons. The British power is said to be 500 first-line machines, which means that she can keep this number in the air in time of war, since for every front-line machine there are three more tuning up or in reserve. The Germans claim 1,000 machines, but this is at present a total and not a continuous effective force. But great play is being made of the German claim and of the 1,000 to 500 ratio, and deliberately or by accident the news has been allowed to reach the public in the way most likely to develop anxiety. The main cause of public concern is not present ratio of strengths, but doubt of German intentions and fear that the British have no industrial organization competent to compete with the Germans in turning out war materials. So for the time being the big air force men have won the day.

Early in the month the House of Commons had a full-dress debate on foreign affairs. Mr. MacDonald, one-time honorable prisoner in the cause of pacifism, played the tragic part of herald of increased armaments. A few days before in an article in the News Letter he reprimanded Hitler for unilateral breaking of treaty obligations, for acts which contradicted his professions of peace, and demanded that Hitler should show proof of his good intentions. In the house debate he repeated his warnings, declared that the government would at once speed up rearmament in the air, expressed his concern that Germany's acts should not drive us into military alliances and supported a collective system of organized security.

• • • •

IN this statement he had the support of the right-wing conservatives such as Chamberlain, Churchill, Hailsham, Cunliffe-Lister, etc. He gave them rearmament; they could afford to swallow his collective security stuff for the time being. And in his expressions of anxiety and pleas for a showdown by Germany he had the general support of the house. But he was attacked by the opposition on three grounds. The first, that his expressions of peace and desire for disarmament were contradicted by the actions of his own representatives at the disarmament conference at Geneva. The British government claims to have done everything to bring about a successful issue of the conference. So does every government, yet the result is failure.

Second complaint was that he should make a distinction between the obligation of treaties voluntarily signed by all parties and treaties imposed by force majeure. And third complaint was that this government pays lip service to collective security but measures England's rearmament needs on a basis of national security and in effect enters England in the new armament race. The prime minister had made a short-range statement with no long-term policy; he had reacted to the fear and suspicion of the moment and had left Europe to flounder for lack of determined guidance.

Perhaps the best expression of British opinion was made by Sir Austen Chamberlain, who said:

> I am quite certain that if we find that Germany really is peacefully intent on entering into a partnership with other nations that she will be welcomed by us as heartily, and perhaps more heartily, than by any other nation. After all, we have made great efforts to bring Germany really into a partnership, and we have perhaps made more efforts than anybody else. If she is of a partner's mind and of a peaceful intent she will be welcome. If she will not join the family of nations, and if, instead of seeking to persuade she means to extort or impose her will, then she will find this country in her path again (cheers), and with this country those great free commonwealths which center round it, and she will have met a force that will once again be her master. (Loud cheers).

THERE are two great dangers in the present phase of the crisis.

The first is that disarmament is being forgotten. Both Hitler and Goering have stated and still maintain that although Germany is rearming, as of right, she will disarm at once down to any level accepted by all the European countries, and she will put her air force at the disposal of a collective system. There is every reason to believe this offer to be sincere, yet it is being ignored, and we continue to rearm in case anything may happen; if nothing happens we shall sit back with a sigh of relief—and an increased burden of armaments.

And the second danger is that we may use the present crisis as an excuse to forget the moral necessity of revising the post-war treaties. Thus in the House debate a member said that there had grown up a definite public opinion in favor of treaty revision, but that growth of public opinion changed when Germany withdrew from the League of Nations, and he thought it had been destroyed by the declaration of conscription by Germany. How easily we forget our obligations! Europe is rapidly becoming a Glass House Dwellers Association for Throwing Stones!

Treaty revision and the underlying economic difficulties of European organization are the immediate issues. Most people are agreed that Germany should have a fair deal, without stating specifically what they mean by the phrase. Reparations now seem to be a matter of the remote past; Germany declares that she has no aggressive intentions against French terrtory; she has awarded herself army, navy and air force. What else does she want? The urgent demand is that the stigma of war guilt should be forgotten, the Treaty of Versailles be torn up and replaced by a new one freely negotiated, and that Germany should be treated in all things as the equal of all countries with the signs and substance of equality as well as the title. And the substance of equality is what other nations refuse and what Germany therefore is seizing of her own accord.

THE longer justice is denied her the further spreads the inevitable reaction; her inferiority complex has already grown to terrific proportions and shows itself in all the cruel and vain glorification of race, persecution of Jews, Christians, liberals, individualists and denial of freedoms. This is a disease that breeds fear and a disease that can only be cured by correction of the underlying injustices and by patience.

The signs of equality which Germany demands grow greater the longer they are denied, but so long as the existing nationalist organization of Europe remains, territorial readjustment is bound to be one of them. Germany has already raised the question of her one-time colonies. These were divided up by the principal Allied powers and awarded as mandates under the supervision of the League of Nations. But the league has no power to withdraw or reaward a mandate, and Japan, resigned from the League, intends to stick to the former German colonies in the Pacific. The major German colonies in Africa were alloted to the colony-glutted British Empire, and to her Germany must therefore go if she wants to recover them.

With England in her present temper Germany will have no success on this quest. In the Commons debate a conservative argued that we should remove all inputations of Germany's unworthiness to administer colonial mandates, and having satisfied German honor should require from Germany a categorical declaration freely renouncing all territorial claims and ambitions in the colonial field.

• • • •

THAT was the only question of direct and vital interest to Great Britain and all the Empire, and it was the government's duty to lend a sympathetic ear to Germany's legitimate claims in other fields, provided no concessions were given by Britain on colonial and naval questions. A labor member supported this face-saving device on the grounds that they could never agree to handing over any colony to Nazi rule.

This argument concerning England's colonies is repeated by other nations concerning their own possessions; all are agreed that justice shall be done, provided only that it isn't done at their expense. It is not politically possible that Germany should get any territorial revision at the expense of England, Poland, France, the Baltic States or anybody else; and union with Austria is prohibited.

Germany must, therefore, be content with treatment as equal. Europe must be made secure by a collective system which includes Germany, and by a substantial degree of disarmament, and political difficulties must be drowned in an economic revival through abolition of the present economic warfare which divides the countries of what should be the United States of Europe. So might Europe get peace for a season. But where is Europe to find the men of good will and imagination who will fight for this peace?

The Pot Of Gold.

THIS is a rich country, heaven knows. It amounts to only about one-twentieth of the world's land area.

But for every man or woman here, as compared with 16 Europeans, Asiatics, Africans and so on elsewhere, there lies under the good right hand of American dominion almost one-sixth of the world's wheat, almost one-third of the world's oats, over one-third of the world's coal, half the world's lumber, over half the world's cotton, three-fifths of the world's corn, and almost three-quarters of the world's oil. Belonging, remember, to the Americans—1 out of every 17 people in the world.

Now certainly the lowest common denominator in describing the rich is the fact that they are well supplied with mundane goods. They have the cream off the milk; they're rolling in honey; they live off the fat of the land. Well, as the world's richest nation, are we?

• • • •

"RICH MAN, POOR MAN" (Harper, $1) strikes into the root of a paradox which must be plain to you. The authors of this trim little book, R. A. and O. P. Goslin, have written it as the first publication of the new "People's League for Economic Security"—a nonpartisan group whose message will be plainer as we go on. Three of the advisory council acted as an editorial committee on the volume—Stuart Chase, Henry Pratt Fairchild and Harry A. Overstreet. And those names should give the hint of what is to come.

Briefly, it is a plain-spoken study on the paradox of plenty. With a large number of vivid pictorial charts, couched in the simplest language, printed in a gentle blue, it may seem rather too primer-like in your eyes. Don't be deceived; it hews to its point better than a thousand tomes of forward-looking economics. "Trees" have had their texts; here is a view of the "forest." And though it has a decidedly "liberal" slant, it is a book which should be read and marked well by Right-Wingers and Left-Wingers alike. After they have seen these facts, then let them concoct their arguments.

THE world's richest and most resourceful country—and in 1929, fond year of our "prosperity," 62 out of every 100 city families lived on no better than a "subsistence diet" (no milk, fruit, or vegetables) and 12 families more lived on the "emergency diet" ($1 a day for five people). In the same year the production of clothes would have given, if divided out per capita, to each man and boy one-half of a suit, one-sixth of an overcoat, three shirts, one-half of a sweater, and two hats. In the same year one-fourth of the people were living in slums, and less than half owned their own homes. Half had no medical attention, three-quarters no dental. You can guess what the case must be now.

For we had 48,000,000 workers in 1929, and now nearly one-quarter of them are idle. The authors very wisely ask if the reader knows just what 11,000,000 people means, and though the "here to there" formula is a bit overworked, listen to this—11,000,000 unemployed men and women in a bread-line, close enough for each to touch the one in front, would reach from New York to San Francisco and all the way back to New York!

During the depression—just a playful little flick of the business cycle, as we're told—the idleness of these men resulted in the fact that $287,000,000,000 worth of goods and services were not produced. The country is that much poorer. And the World War, with 19 nations at loggerheads, cost everyone concerned a grand total of only $200,000,000,000. Try smoking that in your pipe.

• • • •

BUT Is this all perfectly and sweetly familiar to you. Let me find something a little more fresh and memorable. For instance, it's a common thought that the Government is getting too big, too costly. As a matter of fact, there are more school teachers alone (not to mention State, county, city and Federal officials) than there are employe in the six largest private business for profit combined—the American Telephone & Telegraph, United States Steel, General Motors, Pennsylvania Railroad, General Electric and the A. & P. stores. Almost any taxpayer will say "Whew!"

But wait a minute. What does the taxpayer get? A certain man in New York City figures that (in return for governmental services), Federal (administration, Army, Navy, Coast Guard, Weather Bureau, highways, etc.), State (university, hospitals, prisons, alms houses, bridges, parks, etc.) and city (street lights, police, street cleaning, water, grammar and high schools, libraries, fire department, garbage collection, sewage disposal, playgrounds, clinics, etc.)—he pays $365 a year in combined taxes.

The same man pay $365 a year for nothing more than electricity, telephone, gas, and oil and gasoline for his car!

But our authors muffed an even better point there. The fact is that 72 cents out of every tax dollar goes to pay for past and future wars. Work it out, and for all the above services but Army and Navy that man paid only $102.20 a year. Costly? I'd just like to know what a private police fee alone would be.

• • • •

OUR authors and the "People's League," wants a social control and ownership in these fields—an unvarying medium of exchange; banking and credit; natural resources (enough natural gas is blown every year into the air, wasted entirely, to pay the whole cost of all our tax-supported schools); power (the expense of private production of electricity, as contrasted with public production, costs the country $1,000,000 a day); organization of production, of transportation, and of distribution. They do not speak of the means to these ends, ends which would give us double our humanly used supply of food, clothing, shelter and education, and which would halve our misery.

But the residue of the primer facts in "Rich Man, Poor Man" should be firm in the minds of those who are interested, of those who, curiously enough, must be willing to be called dreamers. For in the richest country in the world the vision of a reasonable commonwealth for all is still at the end of the rainbow, like the pot of gold.

Grim Defenses Nestled Under Hawaii Palms

Gay Honolulu Sees Little of Fortifications; U. S. to Build More.

By the United Press.

Honolulu.—Glamorously camouflaged in exotic flowers, stately palms and peaceful, verdant hills, Hawaii today looked forward with mixed emotions to becoming America's most heavily fortified area.

Already a Gibraltar of the Pacific with six Army posts, two Army air fields, a Navy air base and Pearl Harbor Naval Base, the Government this year will spend many more millions to enlarge and strengthen its first line of defense.

Grim Defenses.

The thousands of tourists who make Waikiki Beach a carefree year-round playground see little of the grim defense fortifications nestled behind luxuriant tropical vegetation at strategic points in and around Honolulu. Occasionally soldiers and sailors of the 20,000 stationed here will be seen, but usually they, too, are pleasure bent on shore leave.

Honolulu business welcomes the forthcoming expenditure of $11,000,000 for a new Army air base and the $38,000,000 for extensions and improvements at Pearl Harbor. They mean better business.

Largest in Area.

The new Army air base will be the largest and most modern in the entire Pacific area. Two thousand acres required for the base already have been condemned near Fort Kamehameha, a short distance outside Honolulu.

According to present plans, the base will have 12 hangars capable of holding a squadron of planes each and two double hangars for seaplanes. The huge takeoff apron will be 5,400 feet long and about 1,000 feet wide.

Indiana Campers Reserve All Sites

State Park Grounds Taken by Groups for Summer.

By the United Press.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Group camps at Shakamak and McCormicks Creek State Parks already has been reserved for most of the summer, the State conservation department announced today.

The Shakamak group camp, with a capacity of 250 persons, will be used by 4-H Club groups from Clay, Putnam, Sullivan, Parke, Vermillion, Vigo, Pike, Greene and Daviess Counties from July 23 to August 8, and has been reserved by the Indianapolis Orphan Home from August 8 to September 16.

Two group camps, with a total capacity of 350 persons, will be used at McCormicks Creek through the summer. The Indianapolis Y. M. C. A. will use one of the camps from July 8 to August 13. It will be open for reservation after August 13.

The other camp will be used by Terre Haute Girl Scouts from June 20 to July 15 and the Junior Catholic Daughters of America from July 15 to August 5. It is open for reservation after August 5.

The group camp at Pakagon State Park has been reserved by the Pakagon Camp for Boys from June 23 to September 1.

Extraordinary Ellery Walter

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps.

ELLERY WALTER, who died on April 2, 1935, at St. Petersburg, Fla., at the age of 28, was one of the bravest and most extraordinary young men I have ever known.

In 1928 he made a sensational but well-merited success with his book "The World on One Leg," in which he described with great vivacity his circumnavigation of the globe with a crutch.

Ellery Walter was born in Philadelphia June 16, 1906, and was thrown on his own resources at the age of 14. He worked in the Detroit News press room, in factories, farms, oil fields, in Mexico, a fish cannery in Alaska and studied at the University of Washington. There he wished to be on the university crew and also a member of Phi Beta Kappa; he could easily have satisfied both ambitions, if he had had any funds; but unfortunately he tried to economize on food and sleep.

• • • •

An infection in his foot grew worse, resulted in many operations and finally his leg had to be amputated. He traveled around the world, supporting himself by tutoring and writing for the papers. He arrived in New York with a manuscript of an article, and without enough money to pay his taxicab fare. He drove to the office of a magazine, asked the taxi to wait, went in, saw the editor, sold the manuscript and paid off the driver.

He wrote and lectured and simply boiled over with energy; I saw and talked with him many times, but I never saw him quiet, sluggish, or depressed; he was always in high spirits and was the living proof of the conquest of the body by the mind. He was so intensly interested in life, human nature and current events that he literally had not time to feel melancholy.

• • • •

His book on Russia, called "Russia's Decisive Year," is instructive, because of the honesty of the man. He went to Russia, almost believing in Communism. But he refused to be shown around and led by the Soviet guides; he went off by himself to the villages and remote country districts; where he saw such universal suffering, starvation and misery, that he hated Communism more than anything else in the world.

I shall always remember him for his warm-hearted, affectionate disposition and his high-hearted gayety.

Observer Notes 11-Year Dry Cycles

Missourian Says Sunspots Cause Droughts.

By the United Press.

Montgomery, Mo.—Droughts occur only once in every 11 years, according to Capt. Tom See, veteran astronomer, who recites history over a period of 1,000 years to prove the assertion.

"This regular cycle of droughts is caused by sun spots," the weather observer says.

The basis of theory is a book outlining the history of China. His findings—the results of painstaking study of weather data—were placed at the disposal of the Government in a letter of Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

Capt. See believes his discovery will be more important to agriculturists than any data Government weather forecasters can produce under their "haphazard system." He has found that the 11-year cycle of cold winters and plentiful rainfall in this country against cycles of drought in China coincide with available records of European weather compared with the drought this country suffered last year.

The observer went into history of the ancient Greeks to show that in 1184 B. C., or 238 cycles of 11 years back from 1929, intense suffering from cold marked the battle of Troy.

Bringing his observations up to date, Capt. See predicts no more serious droughts until about 1944-45.

Farm Resident Wins Right to Keep His Dog

Fort Scott, Kans. (AP).—Tireless efforts of his 86-year-old master won a permanent home for a mongrel dog in the Bourbon County poor farm.

The dog was ejected on order of Fred McKinnis, custodian, who claimed the animal was vicious. Grieving, the aged inmate walked the streets of Fort Scott until he retrieved his lost pet, and then refused to return to the poor farm without the dog.

County commissioners ordered a muzzle for the dog and both were readmitted to the county home.

"Mama," whispered little Willie as the great conductor took his place in the orchestra pit and the famous soprano began her aria, "what's the man shaking the stick at her for?"

"Shut up!" Mama explained. "That's his baton. He isn't shaking it at her."

"Then what's she hollerin' for?"

That, we are sad to report, is little Willie's reaction to good music. The case of his sister is even worse. She just loves to prattle about how much she adores good music, but when she has an opportunity to listen to a great symphony she stays home and tunes the radio to Cab Calloway's band. She thinks that arpeggio is an island in the Pacific and that Chaikovski was a Russian general. You see, little Willie and his sister have not read the excellent articles by Ray C. B. Brown in The Washington Post; and, therefore, are not en rapport with things musical. But there is hope for them even now, and we are starting a subscription to The Post for them in order that they may learn the intellectual pleasure to be derived from listening to classical music.

Mr. Brown is one of America's best known music critics, and his authoritative, intelligent, sensitive articles are required reading for music lovers. Washington is becoming more and more music conscious, and The Post is proud of the part Mr. Brown has played in explaining the works of great composers to new listeners. For two years he was managing editor of Musical America and his writings are studied closely by students. In his "Postlude" column, discussing the programs presented by symphony orchestras, choral groups and others, he strikes a new note in criticism.

Like his good friend, Dr. Sigmund Spaeth, the "tune detector," Mr. Brown can listen to Tin Pan Alley's latest song hit and tell you instantly the symphony from which the theme was stolen, and, if you question him closely, he might remember the older work from which the symphony composer borrowed a few bars!

In The Sunday Post you'll find an entire page devoted to music, and the leading article, always written by Mr. Brown, will give you a deeper, more sympathetic understanding of all things musical. Nowadays, when Stravinski's "Firebird" suite is discussed at the dinner table along with the New Deal and Europe's war scare, you'll find Ray C. B. Brown's brilliant articles of great help in convincing your hostess that you, too, can recognize Bloch's "Schelomo" and that you can discuss Hindemith with the best of them. If you are a lover of good music you'll appreciate his clear, authentic criticisms; if you are just learning to listen to the great symphonies you'll demand his help. You'll find it in

Boys and Girls Vie in Drilling At Alexandria

Alexandria High Shares Prizes With Washington-Lee High School.

907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The Alexandria High School cadets and the girl cadets of Washington-Lee High School yesterday won the competitive drill held at Alexandria High School for trophies awarded by the Forty and Eight Society of the American Legion.

Alexandria won from George Mason by 2 points—88 to George Mason's 86; Washington-Lee trailing with 74 points. The girls' contest was closer. Alexandria High took second, with a score of 91 points against 93 for Washington-Lee, while George Mason girls were 1 point behind Alexandria.

The trophies were presented by Maj. John A. Stanley, U. S. A., chief judge. Other judges were Capt. E. A. Kimball, First Lieut. S. G. Conley and Second Lieut. T. D. Maury, all Regular Army officers. Cadet First Lieut. Robert Craddock commanded the winning platoon of Alexandria High School, while First Lieut. Elizabeth Fuller was in command of the Washington-Lee girls platoon. The Forty and Eight was represented by Franklin DeDier, grand chef de train. Department of Virginia, who was acting chairman of the arrangements committee in the absence of Col. Clarence Deems, jr., and Harold L. Flynn, chef de gare of the local voiture. Other members of the committee on arrangements were John W. Haggerty, of Quantico, and G. W. Hangar, of Clarendon.

The Alexandria Kiwanis Club had as its guest speaker yesterday the Rev. Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives. His talk was on "Confidence in the Future."

President Robert W. Eaves introduced ten girls from the Jefferson School, of which he is principal. They were costumed in voluminous skirts and pantalettes, knee breeches, long-tailed coats and high stocks.

Eaves announced that the next week's meeting will be held Wednesday when the club will entertain the class officers, valedictorian and salutatorian of the Alexandria High School.

The United Daughters of the Confederacy and the Sons of the Confederacy will hold their annual Confederate Memorial Day exercises Friday, May 24, the anniversary of the day in 1861 on which 700 Alexandria Confederates marched out to join their commands at Manassas.

The celebration this year will lack its previously dominant figure, Gen. Edgar Warfield, who died since the last Memorial Day.

The memorial address will be delivered by the Rev. Dr. E. V. Regester, pastor of the Del Ray Methodist Church, who will be introduced by R. Samuel Luckett, commander of the R. E. Lee Camp, Sons of Confederate Veterans, who will preside. Benediction will be by the Rev. Dr. William Jackson Morton, rector of Christ Episcopal Church in Alexandria. The annual custom of decorating the Confederate monument at Washington and Prince streets, and the mound in Christ Church yard where many Confederate soldiers are buried, will be carried out.

Spanish war veterans, the cadet corps of the Alexandria High School and the Citizens Band of Alexandria will participate in the parade of Sons and Daughters of the Confederacy, which will follow the exercises in Lee Camp Hall. Mrs. Charles W. Howell will have charge of decorating the monument.

Twenty-three Washington bakers, whose trucks deliver bread in Alexandria, filed a protest in Alexandria police court yesterday against paying the $50 license fee imposed by the city council for the operation of each truck. Attorneys for the bakers asked for five days in which to file a brief, which was granted by Judge James Reese Duncan, with the consent of City Attorney Carl L. Budwesky.

The Rev. Norman Roberts has been elected superintendent of the Sunday school of the Methodist Protestant Church for the coming year, effective June 1. Other officers elected were Milton T. Penn, first assistant superintendent; R. J. Ayers, second assistant; Mrs. William T. Penn, superintendent of home department; Mrs. William Anderson, credit department; Mrs. A. S. Barnett, beginners; Mrs. Norman Roberts, primary boys; Miss Mary Simpson, primary girls; Milton T. Penn, secretary of school; Richard Herrell, first assistant secretary; Harold Payne, second assistant; Norman Roberts, treasurer; Milton T. Penn, secretary of association; Mrs. H. H. Newton, pianist; Mrs. Julia Santmire, first assistant pianist, and Miss Mary Ebhardt, second assistant.

The May Day celebration of St. Agnes School, which was to have been held yesterday afternoon, was postponed due to inclement weather. It will be held at 4:15 p. m. today, weather permitting. In the event of rain or extreme cold, the celebration will be held the first clear school day.

Woman's Club Of Lyon Village Elects Officers

Mrs. Chas. Stanton Named President; Mrs. Watt Vice President.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Mrs. Charles I. Stanton was elected president of the Woman's Club of Lyon Village at its annual meeting held last night at the home of Mrs. Freeland F. Chew on Courthouse road.

Other officers elected were Mrs. William G. Watt, vice president; Mrs. Charles Hiller, secretary; Mrs. Clarence Croft, recording secretary, and Mrs. I. Chance Buchanan, treasurer.

A children's parade will be held in Lyon Park tomorrow afternoon by the Junior Community Center.

A covered wagon and two floats, including the Henry Clay School May Day queen and her attendants, will lead the procession, followed by a large number of children in costume. A sham battle between "Indians" and "cowboys" will occur as the parade nears the business section of Lyon Park.

The parade is being held in connection with the moving picture entertainment "The Covered Wagon," being given by the organization next Thursday afternoon and evening for the benefit of the juvenile club.

The parade will leave the Community House at 2:30 o'clock and will return in time for the regular meeting of the organization at 3:30.

Attention is called to all voters of Arlington County that while the poll tax books are closed and no one will have a further opportunity to pay their poll taxes in order to vote at the November election, there is still time for those otherwise qualified to vote to register.

Charles R. Fenwick, chairman of the Arlington County Democratic executive committee, says:

"The registration books are closed 30 days prior to the general election in November, but are not closed prior to the primary and anyone may register and vote up to and including the day of the primary.

"Any person taking up residence in the county after January 1, 1934, and prior to November 5, 1934, is eligible to register and vote in the coming November election and primary in August 6, without payment of poll taxes."

The Arlington Rotary Club will present an American flag to the headquarters staff, Arlington County Boy Scouts, tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Carroll V. Shreve, president of the club, will present the flag to H. D. Lockling, district commissioner, Arlington County Boy Scouts. The presentation will be made at the annual camporee being held tomorrow afternoon and night at Camp Arki on Mount Olivet road.

The board of governors of the Lyon Park Community Center will sponsor a benefit roast-beef dinner to be served in the community house next Tuesday evening from 5:30 to 8 o'clock. The proceeds will be applied to the fund being raised to paint the building. A committee of ladies with Mrs. P. C. Dyer as chairman will be in charge of the arrangements.

The Neighborhood Garden Club of Ballston announces that plans are being made for its annual flower show to be held in Clarendon May 28 and 29. Bronze markers will be placed on all trees planted by the club during the bicentennial. These trees will be registered with the American Tree Association.

A plant exchange and public sale of plants will be held at the home of the president, Miss Evelyn Cannon, 211 North Glebe road, tomorrow afternoon from 4 to 7 o'clock.

The Sons of the American Legion, Arlington Post, No. 139, will meet tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the legion hall in Clarendon.

Harry K. Green, commissioner of revenue, and his assistants will be at the Ballston firemen's hall tonight from 7 to 9 o'clock to assist taxpayers in the preparation of their local and State income tax returns.

Prince Georges Issues Permits For Beer Sales

Seven licenses for the sale of beer were granted yesterday during the semimonthly meeting of the Prince Georges County liquor board in Upper Marlboro, Md.

Nearly 50 persons from Oxon Hill attended the meeting, carrying a petition with 209 signatures, to protest the granting of a license to an establishment operated by Carrie Galloway in Oxon Hill.

The delegation asserted that that neighborhood was already supporting several stores selling alcoholic beverages. The board refused to grant the license.

Another group of citizens appeared to protest the issuance of a license to the Mullikin Farm Supply Co., Inc., of Mitchellville, Md. This license was refused after the third member of the corporation declined to sign the application.

Licenses for the sale of beer to be consumed on the premises were granted to Bert Heinman, of Woods Corner; George B. Alvey, of Forestville; Gioffre Angelo, of Largo, and Mary Agnes Hunt, of Capitol Heights.

Licenses to sell beer to be consumed away from the dispensary were granted to the Maryland Drug Co., Inc., of Laurel, Md., which was also permitted to sell wine and liquors; John H. Forester, of Columbia Park, and Peter L. McGalliaria, of Huntsville.

Another meeting will be held next Thursday to determine whether the liquor license of Frank H. Beach, of Silver Hill, should be revoked. Beach was recently convicted in circuit court of possessing untaxed liquor, an offense which makes revocation of the license mandatory. The hearing will also take up protests against a license held in the name of Margaret Louise Harris, of Oakland.

Safe Deposit Unit Names Delegate

Backer Is Representative at Convention.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., May 16.—The Maryland State Safe Deposit Association, including about 80 representatives of 35 banks of Western Maryland, held a dinner and meeting at the Francis Scott Key Hotel last night to promote membership.

A. H. Troeger, assistant treasurer of the Safe Deposit & Trust Co., Baltimore, and president of the association, presided. A. LeRoy McCardell, president of the Frederick County Bank, welcomed the group, and Walter P. Duvall, president of the National Safe Deposit Advisory Council, spoke on the annual convention at Asbury Park, N. J., June 7 and 8. J. W. Backer, of the Baltimore National Bank, was chosen delegate, and H. M. Wharton, of the Provident Savings Bank, Baltimore, alternate to the convention. The by-laws were amended to increase the executive committee. Mr. Backer led a discussion on the use of safe deposit boxes.

Cambridge Man Shoots Self Dead

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cambridge, Md., May 16.—Herbert L. Harper, Cambridge business man, ended his own life here today by shooting himself through the heart.

State's Attorney J. Gorman Hill, after an investigation, held it was a clear case of suicide and ruled that an inquest was not necessary. Harper's hand grasped a pistol when his body was found in his office by two salesmen, and he had left a note for his wife.

His family said he had been despondent since February of this year, when he was overcome by carbon monoxide in the garage at his home. He was ill at that time and had not fully regained his health.

House Group Favors Two Bills To Nationalize Virginia Shrines

Jefferson 'Loafing Place' Among Mansions Proposed as New Historical Monument; Richmond Battlefields Urged as Park.

By the Associated Press.

Favorable action was taken yesterday by the House Public Lands Committee on two bills designed to extend Federal jurisdiction over historical spots in Virginia.

One of the measures, fathered by Representatives Montague and Bland, would bring into the Colonial National Monument, Green Spring and Carters Grove in James City County and Rosewell mansion in Gloucester County. It also would change the name of the monument, which includes Williamsburg, Yorktown and Jamestown, to the Colonial National Historical Park.

The other bill would authorize the Interior Department to take over and maintain the Richmond Battlefield State Park and rename it the Richmond Battlefield National Park. It was introduced by Montague.

Montague, Bland and Dr. H. J. Eckenrode, State historian, appeared in behalf of the bills.

Eckenrode described Rosewell mansion as a place where Thomas Jefferson "loafed in his spare time." Now in ruins, it was the home of the Virginia Pages and Eckenrode asserted is on the approximate site of Powhatan's village at the time of the landing of the English colonists at Jamestown in 1607.

Green Spring was the home of Sir William Berkeley, a colonial Governor of Virginia who was "intimately associated" with Bacon's rebellion, Eckenrode said.

The Carters Grove mansion in James City County is the only one of three which is preserved. It is owned and occupied by Archibald McCrea and is considered by National Park Service historians to be one of the finest examples of colonial architecture. It was built in the late seventeenth or early eighteenth century by Carter Burwell.

Eckenrode said practically the only cost of the Government would be maintenance.

Both measures had the approval of the Interior Department.

Hancock Cast Presents Play At School Hall

Hagerstown Women's Club Elects Mrs. Riley Head for Fifth Time.

By Elisabeth C. Taylor.

Amateur players of Hancock, Md., produced "Uncle Tom's Cabin" in the high school auditorium last Wednesday and Thursday nights. Mrs. A. L. W. Williams directed the play, whose cast included some of the best known residents of Hancock. Funds from the sale of tickets went to the benefit of the volunteer fire company of the town.

For the fifth consecutive year Mrs. S. B. Riley has been elected president of the Women's Club of Hagerstown, Md. In past terms Mrs. Riley has led the club in its many activities and within the past fiscal year has reduced the indebtedness on the clubhouse, one of the most attractive in the State, by $1,500. Other officers elected were, first vice president, Mrs. Frank S. Lusby; second vice president, Mrs. J. Alvey Long; third vice president, Mrs. Perry Prather; treasurer, Mrs. John J. Porter; assistant treasurer, Mrs. Harper Ballentine; secretary, Mrs. J. L. Carnochan. During the past year 51 new members were added to the rolls of the club.

Flower Show Today.

The Harmony Grove Women's Club, of Frederick, Md., will hold its annual flower show today. Mrs. William Thomas and Miss Ethel Thomas will be hostesses.

The Junior Women's Club of Martinsburg, W. Va., held a meeting yesterday, the purpose of which was a discussion of home projects and a demonstration under the direction of Phyllis Kidwell, chairman of the committee.

The Merryland Tract Women's Club of Frederick, Md., was entertained yesterday at a Mother's Day program under the supervision of Mrs. George Garrett, Mrs. Oscar Shafer and Mrs. Allen Willer. Mrs. Stanley Zecher was in charge of recreation features.

Mrs. Charles Crawford was hostess yesterday to members of the Women's Club of Walkerville, Md.

Tomorrow the 4-H Clubs of Calvert County will give a pageant in Prince Frederick, Md. The title of the pageant is "Around the World With Music." It will be presented on the courthouse grounds this afternoon. Two hundred school children will participate in the various scenes, directed by Miss Elaine Knowles, with the assistance of the teachers and those who attended the recreational school in Calvert County during the first week in April.

Countries and nationalities to be represented by the children, grouped according to schools, will be Hawaii, by Solomons High School; Bohemian gypsies, by Solomons elementary school; Greece, Wallville school; Ireland, Broomes Island; Scotland, Holland and Italy, by the three Prince Frederick elementary clubs; Japan, Huntingtown; China, Fairview; Mexico, the Beach School.

Whenever you hear anyone mention the "Result Number," he is talking about Post Classified Ads—National 4200.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., May 16.—Augusta County's producers will dispose of this year's crop through the United Wool Gatherers' organization, it was decided at a meeting of the county's association yesterday. Reports showed that last year 44,739 pounds of wool was sold by the United Growers from this county, the majority bringing 28 cents. All but 3 cents was paid immediately after the sale June 6, the remainder within 60 days.

W. W. Trimble was reelected chairman of the board of the Augusta unit; H. M. Hamilton, vice president; J. C. Coiner, secretary; John H. East, treasurer. Members of the board reelected are Ray S. Cline, W. A. Cline, H. M. Shiflett, William Shiflett, John H. East, J. C. Coiner, W. W. Trimble and H. M. Hamilton.

Mr. East was named to represent the growers on the committee of valley growers dealing with United Growers.

K. A. Keithley, of the United Growers, was here for the meeting, which was also attended by representatives of wool producers in Shenandoah, Rockbridge, Rockingham and Nelson Counties.

200 Members Of Federation To Meet May 23

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cambridge, Md., May 16.—Two hundred members of the Dorchester County Federation of Women's Clubs will hold their spring meeting May 23 in the Methodist Episcopal Church at Church Creek. The Woolford-Church Creek Community Club will act as hostess, and the program will be presented by the American home department of the federation, of which Mrs. Leon Spicer is chairman.

The Rev. Harvey O. Hufnal, pastor of the church, will offer the invocation, and a response to the greetings from the hostess organization will be given by Mrs. James B. Noble, president of the federation.

The business session will include annual reports of officers, and brief reports from club presidents. The nominating committee will present the following ticket for election: President, Mrs. Philip E. Douglas, Hurlock Club; vice president, Mrs. H. E. Parker, East New Market Club; recording secretary, Mrs. Charles A. Bromwell, Madison Club; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Ira S. Brinsfield, East New Market Club, and treasurer, Mrs. Floyd D. Virginia Nurses Talk 8 Hr. Day At Convention

Annual Session Under Way at Charlottesville; Leisure Discussed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., May 16.—State and national officers arrived here today to attend the three-day convention of the Graduate Nurses Association of Virginia, which opened tonight at the Albemarle Hotel. Among those who will speak are Miss Clara D. Noyes, of Washington, head of the American Red Cross Nursing Association; Mrs. Alma Scott, director of the American Nursing Association in New York, and Miss Sena Anderson, executive secretary of the Graduate Nursing Association of Washington.

Presiding was Miss Helen Frances Zeigler, president of the association. Following the invocation by the Rev. William K. Smith, the nurses were officially welcomed by Mayor W. Danbridge Haden. The response, on behalf of the association, was by Miss Jesse W. Faris.

In her annual address, Miss Zeigler emphasized the eight-hour duty for private nursing, and also the changes necessary in the curricula of nursing schools in the State to keep pace with national standards.

Tomorrow morning's session, to be held in Madison Hall at the University, will be devoted to a discussion of "Private Duty Nursing Problems," with Miss Viola Carner, of Roanoke, presiding. The chief speaker will be Miss Clara D. Noyes, of Washington.

The afternoon session will include a discussion of "Public Health." Mrs. Freda Cruxton, rural nurse of Hanover County, will preside. Speakers will be Dr. Frank Riggin, of the State Public Health Department, and Miss Mary Mastin, head of public health nursing service in Virginia.

From 5 o'clock until 6 there will be a tea in McKim Hall, with alumnae of the Nursing School acting as hostesses, and at 7 o'clock there will be a dinner at the Albemarle Hotel. Dr. Meta Glass, president of Sweet Briar College, will be the principal speaker. The subject of her talk will be "Leisure as an Extra-Curriculum Activity."

The final meeting will be held Saturday morning, with adjournment at noon.

Garrett Appointed County Prosecutor

Loudoun Attorney to Fill Out Term of J. Galleher.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., May 16.—Judge J. R. H. Alexander today appointed Edwin E. Garrett, one of Loudoun County's leading lawyers, as Commonwealth's attorney to fill out the unexpired term of John Galleher, who resigned to become NEC director for Virginia. Garrett will serve until December 31, 1935.

The appointee is former Commonwealth's attorney of Loudoun County, serving for 13 years. He was appointed in 1898 to fill the unexpired term of J. B. McCabe, and was elected to the position for three terms. He is a past vice president of the Virginia Bar Association and is recognized as one of the leading criminal lawyers in Virginia.

Two candidates, Mayor Charles F. Harrison, and Fenton Connor, have announced themselves for the position, subject to the Democratic primary in August.

Flower Exhibit At Falls Church Open to Public

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 541, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 156-J.

The third annual spring flower show of the Garden Club of Falls Church, Va., will be held tomorrow in the Town Hall at Falls Church. The classes will be open to all amateur gardeners and the flowers must be grown by the exhibitor. All entries must be in place by noon so they may be judged by 3 o'clock, when the show will be opened for public inspection. No admission fee will be charged.

Prizes and blue ribbons will be awarded the best entry in each group, and one prize will be given for sweepstakes. The show is staged under the direction of the exhibition committee, including V. P. Kalmbach, chairman; Mrs. L. H. Weld, Miss Bertha Holmes, H. J. Photis, Mrs. H. E. Middleton, Mrs. R. W. Williams, Miss Ethel Reid, E. G. Beinhart and L. A. Jackson.

Judges of the show will be Mrs. J. E. Willett, president of the National Capital Iris Society, and Mrs. M. B. Payne, vice president of the National Capital Iris Society.

The first group includes the iris classes, consisting of bearded iris, self-colored, blends or bi-colors, varieties grouped according to color, arrangements in vase and baskets, seedlings developed by exhibitors and the non-bearded type. This group includes 25 classes.

The second group consists of 10 classes of peonies, including collections of named varieties, double blooms of white, light pink, dark pink and red, collections of Japanese varieties, single peonies, seedlings developed by exhibitor, and arrangements.

The third group is devoted to hardy flowers and shrubs which include arrangements of hardy garden flowers, perennials, pansies and roses, flowering shrubs and arrangements, miniature flowers, corsages and educational or novelty exhibits.

The fourth group is devoted to children's exhibits and includes an iris display, mixed flower display and a wild flower display.

The first county-wide glee club contest sponsored by the Federation of School and Civic Leagues of Fairfax County, Va., was won by the Falls Church Elementary School Glee Club under the leadership of Miss Mary Brewer.

Eleven clubs from the elementary schools participated in the contest, which was the first of its kind to be held in northern Virginia. The Baileys Cross Roads club, directed by Miss Helen Ward, won second place; the Forestville Club, directed by Miss Madeleine Long, third, and the Burke Club, directed by Miss Myrtle Estes, was given honorable mention.

The judges were G. H. Ward, director of juvenile activities with the National Broadcasting Co.; Mrs. J. Forney Donaldson, supervisor of music in Arlington County, and Mrs. Ernest Trice, of Richmond.

Other elementary schools competing were Annandale, Fairfax, Franconia, Fort Belvoir, Groveton, Lorton and McLean.

A series of three missionary mass meetings will be held in Fairfax County, Va., Sunday under the general chairmanship of the Rev. W. Leigh Ribble, rector of Falls Church for the Protestant Episcopal congregations in the northern section of the diocese of Virginia.

The first meeting will be held in Fairfax at 11 a. m. in the Fairfax Elementary School, with Zion Church as host. The congregations of the Episcopal churches of Fairfax, Manassas, Haymarket, McLean, Burke, Chantilly, Herndon, Vienna, Nokesville and Hickory Grove are invited to attend. The second meeting, Sunday afternoon at 3 p. m., will be held in the parish hall of St. George's Church, Clarendon, with the Clarendon, Cherrydale, Falls Church and Rixey churches participating. Sunday evening at 8 p. m. all of the Episcopal congregations in Alexandria, the Theological Seminary, Lorton and the several seminary missions will convene in Christ Church.

The Rev. R. W. Patton, D. D., director of the American Church Institute for Negroes, will be the principal speaker at each meeting and will present the cause of the missionary work conducted by the Diocese of Virginia and the National Council. Spirituals and plantation songs will be presented at each meeting by a group of Negro singers from St. Paul's Normal and Industrial School, Lawrenceville, Va., for which he is making a special appeal for funds.

These three mass meetings are the first of a series of 11 to be held throughout the diocese of Virginia from May 19 to May 26, in preparation for a drive for a special offering to be taken on Whitsunday, June 9, for the support of missionary work. The $25,000 sought is to be allocated by giving $6,500 to St. Paul's Normal and Industrial School, $13,000 for missionary work in the diocese of Virginia, $5,000 for foreign and domestic missions, $500 for the expenses of the campaign.

Miss Helen P. Childs, of Washington, will be the guest speaker today at an all-day meeting of women's societies of the Falls Church Presbyterian Church which is to be held at the home of Mrs. R. B. Rollinson. Miss Childs will present her observations on Spanish speaking Americans.

Mrs. J. E. Staub, of Burke, has been appointed general chairman of a membership drive to be put on by the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce. A meeting of the board of directors of the trade body was called for Monday night in the board room to plan details of the drive and select other members of the committee.

The resignation of Mrs. Paul Brown, who had tentatively accepted election as secretary to succeed A. LeGrand Stafford, was accepted. It was decided to ask Stafford to continue to serve until the end of the chamber's year, July 1. The importance to the chamber of the services of an enterprising and efficient secretary was stressed by Senator John Rust and other directors.

The meeting was given over to a discussion of ways and means of awakening more general interest throughout the business people of the county in the activities of the Chamber of Commerce. It was decided to return, at least for the summer, to the former custom of holding meetings in different localities, the next meeting to be held in Annandale, the October meeting in Oakton.

Mrs. Clarence A. Ransom was installed yesterday as president of the Falls Church Parent-Teacher Association. Mrs. D. J. Shear and Mrs. Atherton Mears were installed as vice presidents, Mrs. W. Carson Ryan as recording secretary and Miss Mary Brewer as corresponding secretary. The installation service was in charge of a former president, Mrs. J. O. Belz.

Reports of the year's work were made by chairmen of standing committees. Miss Nancy Edwards reported that $227 has been spent for books for the Madison School and $160 for high school books. Music was furnished by the glee club and a piano solo was given by Marian Sparrow. Announcement was made of a concert for the benefit of the P.T.A to be given Tuesday in Madison School by the Falls Church Music Study Club.

The Herndon Parent-Teacher Association has elected the following officers: President, Dr. Ernest C. Shull; first vice president, Principal J. H. Rice; second vice president, Mrs. Frank Peck; third vice president, Mrs. Mack Crippen; fourth vice president, Mrs. Allen H. Kirk; secretary, Miss Elizabeth Ellmore; treasurer, Miss Sadie Detwiler; historian, Mrs. B. F. McGuire.

The Floris Community League has selected the following officers: President, Walter Watson; vice president, Wilson McNair; second vice president, Edgar E. Beard; secretary, DeOrman Robey; treasurer, Miss Rebecca Middleton; historian, Mrs. John Middleton. Wilson McNair and Principal G. C. Poteet were elected delegates to represent Floris Community League at the next meeting of the county Parent-Teacher Association. Miss Emma Ellmore was appointed chairman of the membership drive committee.

Mayor Allen H. Kirk, at the regular meeting of the Herndon Town Council, appointed the following budget committee: R. N. Wrenn, chairman; Ernest Gibson, of the town council, and Fred W. Robinson, of the local school board.

Town Clerk Guy R. McGlincy was ordered to advertise the town election on June 11, when the following officers will be elected: Mayor, town sergeant, clerk and six councilmen. Mayor Kirk appointed Russell Lynn and George F. Harrison judges of the election, and Miss Sadie Detweiler, clerk.

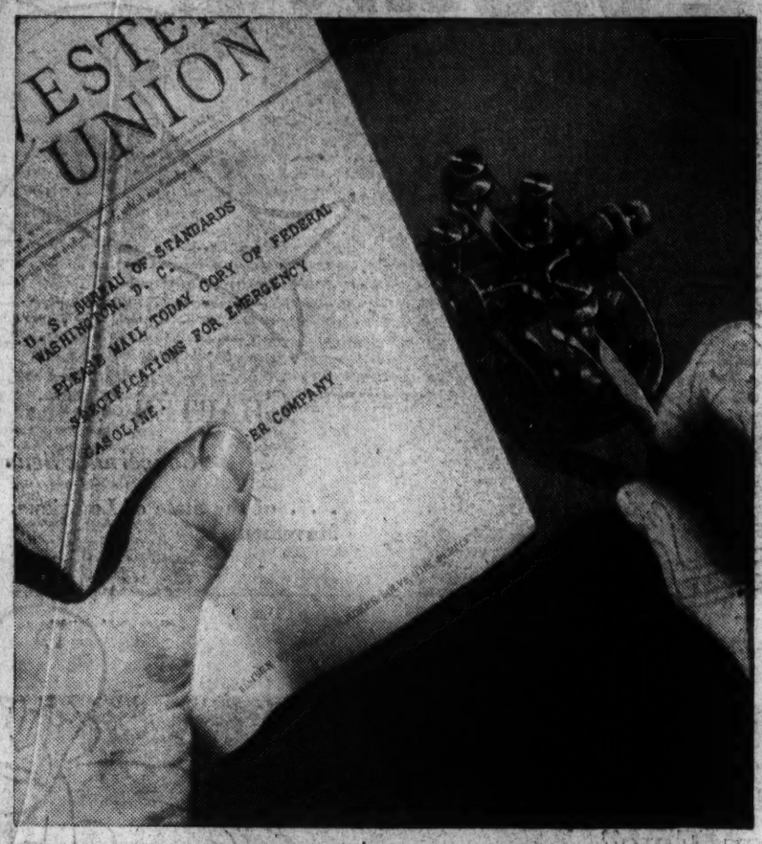
Let Government Specifications help you pick your gasoline.



IT'S AVAILABLE to every citizen of the United States . . . this pamphlet which tells what a gasoline must do to be fit for Government service.

It gives the specifications for emergency gasoline... the gasoline that's used in Government ambulances and fire-engines.

And it's a higher set of specifications than that for ordinary Government uses.

CLAIMS ARE FUTILE... but these Government specifications give a fair, unbiased basis on which to determine how good any gasoline really is.

NIGHT AND DAY... In all 48 states... Texaco stations and dealers supply hundreds of thousands of motorists with this faster-starting, emergency gasoline.

These people find it a great satisfaction to know that whenever they buy Texaco Fire-Chief, they're buying motor fuel as scientifically as the Government.

Wouldn't you?

Magnus Hirschfeld Is Dead in France

Jewish Leader Was in Exile From Germany.

Jewish Telegraphic Agency.

Paris, May 16.—The death of Dr. Magnus Hirschfeld, 67, German-Jewish authority on sexual problems and pioneer advocate of sexual "reform" was announced today.

Dr. Hirschfeld, who has been living in France as an exile since the Nazis came into power in Germany, died yesterday. He was compelled to flee after the Institute of Sexual Reform in Berlin, which he organized in 1918 and which later was taken over by the Prussian government and renamed the Magnus Hirschfeld Institute, was raided and destroyed.

The Nazis also banned Hirschfeld's scientific books and burned them in a public bonfire.

Dr. Hirschfeld visited America several years ago. While there he urged that Jewsih religious leaders should make "some compromise" in relation to the question of birth control. He is the author of many works which are considered standard books on sex analysis and sex psychology.

Nice Will Sign 325 Measures, Veto 80 Others

'Fair Trade' Bill to Await Further Study; 'Teacher Oath' to Be Killed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., May 16.—Gov. Harry W. Nice today cleared the decks for final action on remaining legislation enacted at the recent session of the General Assembly. Approximately 325 bills are slated to receive his approval, about 80 will be vetoed, and two measures will be laid aside pending further study. The Governor will be joined by President Lansdale G. Sasscer, of the Senate, and Speaker Emanuel Gorfine, of the House, for the bill-signing ceremony.

One of the bills to be held for further study is that providing for the retirement of policemen at the age of 70, and the other is commonly known as the "fair trade bill." Commenting on the latter measure, the Governor said it is earmarked for price fixing and is somewhat akin to the NRA bill now before Congress. He said he believed it would be good policy to await action of Congress.

Perhaps the most important bill destined for executive veto is the familiar "teacher's oath measure," designed to require all instructors in State-aided institutions to take the oath of allegiance to the United States. This bill aroused a storm of protest and the Governor announced his decision a few days ago, asserting among other things that, in the form the measure was adopted, it is a "futile gesture" to the ends desired to be accomplished.

The Governor also has announced his disapproval of the "claw machine" bill and a few others, but the rest to be vetoed will not be made known until tomorrow. A number in the group, however, are duplicate measures, that is, bills embracing like provisions that were passed by both the Senate and House. In such cases, one or the other will be stricken out.

Governor Nice is planning to go to St. Marys City on Saturday to participate in the ceremonies of dedicating the "Freedom of Conscience" statue.

Education Board Reelects Coblentz

Personnel Is Discussed at Frederick Meeting.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., May 16.—Leslie N. Coblentz was reelected president and Robert L. Warfield, vice president, at the annual meeting of the county board of education at the courthouse yesterday. Miss Helen J. Woodley, Miss Drucilla Worthingham and Miss Hal Lee Ott were reappointed supervisors of white schools and John W. Bruner supervisor of colored schools. Miss Gertrude Smith was appointed county attendance officer.

Superintendent Eugene W. Pruitt discussed with the board the teaching personnel for next year due to changes in the fall enrollment which indicates the need for fewer teachers at Brunswick and Knoxville. The board members were given a tentative report of transportation routes and the number of pupils to be transported to high and elementary schools next year. The report will be made a special item of business for the June meeting. The officials are considering paying the transportation of approximately 375 high school pupils living more than three miles from schools in the Frederick neighborhood including Point of Rocks, Braddock, Mount Pleasant, Jefferson, Urbana, Buckeystown, Lewistown, New Market and other places.

Tobacco Code Lauded By Brown at Danville

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., May 16.—The tobacco warehouse code has operated to the mutual benefit of the farmer and the warehousemen, according to Fred R. Brown, a member of the National Warehouse Code Authority, who has returned from a meeting of the directors of the National Warehouse Association, held in Richmond.

The association elected to hold its annual meeting in Asheville, N. C., on June 14 and 15.

Relief Director Assails State On Hospital Aid

Funds Far Below Free Work in Maryland, Shannahan Says.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 16.—Samuel E. Shannahan, director of the Board of State Aid and Charities, said today State-aided hospitals continue to show "heartrending descrepancies" in the amounts received from the State for free work they perform.

He cited the work of the Easton Hospital as an outstanding instance. That hospital served three counties, he said, and although it did $16,000 in free work between October, 1934, and March, 1935, it received but $7,000 from the State.

The Washington County Hospital, he said, received $5,000 for $16,765 worth of free work. A total of 260,112 free patients received treatment in all State-aided hospitals in the six-month period, Shannahan said.

The hospitals with value of free work done and appropriations received were listed as follows:

Hospital	Earned	Rec'd.
Annapolis Emergency	$6,320	$5,500
Allegany	6,511	5,000
Cambridge	7,242	7,250
Montgomery	5,445	3,500
St. Mary's	709	1,750
Easton Emergency	16,003	7,000
Washington County	16,765	5,000

To Hold CCC Services.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westernport, Md., May 16.—The Tri-Towns Ministerial Association yesterday decided to cooperate with the CCC camp at Bond, Md., in conducting services. The Rev. Robert L. Wasson, chaplain of Civilian Conservation Camps in this district, with headquarters at Flintstone, attended the meeting.

Girl, 4, Is District's 41st Traffic Death

Washington's forty-first traffic fatality for the year was reported yesterday with the death of Edith Mae Rhon, 4-year-old colored child of 1213 Q street northwest. She died in Children's Hospital.

The child was struck by a truck near her home Wednesday. Chester Johnson, colored, 44, of the 1200 block of Delaware avenue southwest, said to have been the driver of the truck, was arraigned in Police Court on reckless driving charges. He requested a jury trial, which was set for June 6.

"Mary, I want you to meet our best friend!"

"MAYBE that sounds strange, Mary, to call these pieces of paper our best friend. But it's true.

"These papers will never go back on us—never let us down.

"If anything happens to me, they'll provide for you. They'll see to it that the children get the right sort of education. They'll even pay off the mortgage if I haven't been able to do it.

"Do you wonder then that I call these papers our best friend? They are my life insurance policies.

"These policies are going to do something else for us, too. If I live, they are going to make it possible for me to retire—and for you and me to have an easy, comfortable time of it in our old age.

"So you see these policies are going to act as 'best friend' either way. They're going to take care of you and the children if I die. And they're going to take mighty good care of us all if I live!"

A man can assume many responsibilities when he lets life insurance share them with him. When your Life Insurance representative calls on you in the next few days, he will give you a free copy of the booklet, "How to Win Both Ways." It tells you how you can plan a future that means security for your family if you die, and security for yourself and your wife if you live. Don't fail to read it thoroughly.

"The sooner you plan your future, the better your future will be"

Maryland Club Opens Outdoor Season May 30

Tables Sheltered by Beach Umbrellas to Be Put Around Pool.

By Kay Ware.

In case you've begun to wonder about the Maryland Club Gardens, it is set to open May 30. Equipment consists of a long terrace balconied over the swimming pool, with a stage across the water on the other side. There's the horseshoe bar just a step away, cool breezes for hot nights, long clinking drinks, and music for dancing.

They plan to set up tables around the pool, sheltered by beach umbrellas. If the weather is inclement too much so for umbrella use—the Club l'Hiver will be opened.

Meanwhile the present show is composed of Leonora and Santino, dance team; Sally Winston, sophisticated singer, and Mae Swanson, solo dancer.

Will Lacey, a comic cyclist, who rides around the floor on one wheel, simultaneously playing trumpet and banjo, and balancing a hat on the end of a stick on the end of his nose, is featured at Childs' Gingham Club.

In addition, Anita Lester dances.

The hostess, Ethel Malcolm, has just returned from a vacation in her home town, Cleveland.

Mrs. Helen Hamilton, manager of the Russian Club Troika, deserves praise if for no other reason than that she is Washington's only woman night club owner.

A past master at the art of making her guests feel at home, Mrs. Hamilton was ideally suited for her new profession when she first entered it last fall. Up to that time her knowledge of business had been limited to maintaining a penny bank for her two children, who live in New York, where she visits them on alternate week-ends.

By now she has learned all the tricks, from buying supplies for her Troika kitchen, to keeping tab on all the guests who visit the club.

A bit about Club Habana's head waiter:

Known as Paul . . . Has headwaited at the Knickerbocker in New York, at the old Shoreham here, at Wardman, and ten years at the Mayflower . . . Was private maitre d'hotel for war-time Italian Ambassador, Rolandi Ricci . . .

His recipe for successful headwaiting is the ability to "blend" guests in seating them at tables and to guess, simply by looking at them, which couples want to be nearest the orchestra, or under the softest lights, or at a ring-side table.

He speaks four languages, French, Spanish, Italian and English. Out of his experience in serving many nationalities, he discovered that Americans are easiest to handle and most appreciative of thoughtfulness and courtesy.

Don't try to go to Heigh-Ho or Club Habana next week. You'll find the door locked and windows darkened. Both spots close Saturday.

Opera is prevalent at the Shoreham, when Antonio Rossitto, of the Chicago Civic Opera, tenors his way through Pagliacci, Rigoletto and others. Ramon and Ruth are the featured dance team; Sylvia Brown combines contortions and grace (when it's possible); music by Max Lowe's orchestra with Barnee directing.

Seen at the Mayflower lounge: The Russian Ambassador, Mr. Alexander Troyanovsky, with the Minister from Albania, Mr. Faik Konitza, and Emil Durig, noted sculptor. All three must enjoy American music, for they were seated close to Sidney's orchestra and listened intently to their tunes. Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, with Mrs. Julian Lamar and Col. Henry W. Anderson, of Richmond, were other prominent guests.

Second Colony Group Ready for Alaska Trip

Seattle, May 16 (AP).—The second contingent of colonists headed for the Government's rehabilitation project in the Matanuska Valley, Alaska, arrived here today by train from Michigan and Wisconsin.

There were 194 men and women and 177 children in the group.

They will sail late Saturday for Seward, on the Army transport St. Mihiel. The first group sailed from San Francisco early this month and is now in the valley.

Lady With the Laurels

in addition to being one of the managers and owners of the Russian Troika, is as charming a hostess as you'll find in any night spot. Watch for her gracious smile the next time you go there.

While it was in process of construction, the famous building strike hit them full in the pocketbook, tilting prices sky high and exhausting them financially . . . Harris and Berlin, the night it opened, took a room up the block at the Hotel Astor, a corner room permitting them to see down the block to the theater . . . At 8:15, Harris timidly stuck his head out of the window—and almost collapsed with joy when he saw mounted police keeping the crowds in line.

Not, you understand, that there ever was any great doubt of her success when she came to Broadway . . . She arrived here as a Conservatory of Music winner and went immediately to the C. B. Dillingham banner . . . She is a good business woman . . . RKO bargained with her on "Roberta," offering her $45,000 flat and a percentage . . . The percentage clause will tilt it to $90,000.

I saw the sun rise over New York yesterday morning, a bronze-red fire ball, and as it spilled every tone of golden color over the city, you knew that it was good to be alive . . . Before the sunrise, the huge buildings that compose the majestic skyline of Fifty-ninth street were bathed in a startling pale light, almost eerie in its striking whiteness . . . No traffic stirred in the streets, and in the hush, the symphony of birds in the park could be heard clearly . . . The white silver of the lake, the green of the grass, the tender colors of buds on the trees were in perfect harmony . . . It was as if all the lines in Manhattan's forehead had been soothed away, and that the giant, in sleep, had a nice smile at the corners of his mouth.

Tax 'Shortage' In County Goes To Prosecutor

Auditor Reports $88,822 Was Not Collected in Montgomery.

Montgomery County commissioners yesterday referred an auditor's report, alleging the county treasurer's office had failed to collect $88,822.78 in taxes duing the levy years 1932-33, to State's Attorney James H. Pugh, in Rockville, for "appropriate action."

The report also charged a number of other irregularities in county finances. Early yesterday afternoon the commissioners sent County Auditor Alexander Hancock to the office of the county treasurer, J. Forest Walker, with a request that the checks be turned over to the board.

Walker sent word back by Hancock that he desired to consider the disposition of the checks. A resolution then was adopted by the board demanding that the treasurer immediately turn the checks over to Edward Peter, attorney for the board, for collection.

Appearing before the board, a representative of a Baltimore auditing firm told the commissioners yesterday the $88,922.78 represented levies on real estate that should have been advertised for tax delinquencies.

Lands owned by the county treasurer and members of his family were among the properties on which taxes were in arrears, but which were not advertised, the auditor asserted.

Although he was scheduled to appear before the commissioners yesterday, Walker told newspapermen he had no intention of doing so. He declared he had demanded copies of the auditor's report on three separate occasions so he could study the findings of the Baltimore firm and explain the items in the report. None of these requests was granted, he said.

Representatives of the auditing company stated, however, that other parcels on which taxes were delinquent, but which were not advertised for sale, were owned by the North Washington Realty Co., of which E. Brooke Lee, former leader of the Democratic party in the county, is an official. Two other real estate firms were on the "preferred list," they said. These, they asserted, were the Blair Development Co., and the Sligo Park Land Co., both of Silver Spring.

Checks Returned.

Checks aggregating $12,984.25, accepted in payment of taxes, had been returned because of insufficient funds, the auditor's report also alleged.

The county board had authorized Walker on June 22, 1933, to turn the checks over to the county attorney for collection, Joseph C. Cissell, former attorney for the county board, said yesterday.

A tax bill of the North Washington Realty Co. in the amount of $30,000 had been received on February 4, 1934, the auditing firm's representative said. Check in payment was not deposited in the bank until June 29 of that year, however, he asserted.

When he questioned Walker about the matter, the representative said, he was informed that the county treasurer was not familiar with that account.

Dr. Richling Host to Party At Cocktails

Herr and Frau Scholz and Mr. Hewes Also Entertain During Day.

Visitors Drop In on Uruguayan Minister's Fete at Carlton.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Three delightful cocktail parties yesterday afternoon, and at each of them hosts of charming people; the first at the Carlton Hotel, where the Minister of Uruguay, Dr. J. Richling, entertained a group of friends which included members of the Diplomatic Corps and of smart residential society. Dr. Richling is one of the "quasi bachelor" ministers of the corps, Mme. Richling being absent from town, and is a charming host. Yesterday he entertained in the patio at the Carlton and guests arrived from the other two parties of the afternoon, or departed to attend one or both of them. That is Capital society, each day crammed with interesting things to do and few dull moments.

Among the guests were the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull, the Minister of Panama and Senora de Alfaro, Mme. Troyanovsky, wife of the Soviet Ambassador; Senor Don Manuel Trucco, Chilean Ambassador, with his three young daughters, and nearby the Senoritas Patterson, who are doing honors for their father, the Cuban Ambassador, while he is absent in Havana. Also the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy and the Marchesa di Saint' Orsola; the Financial Attache of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Irigoyen, whose marriage took place April 22 in New York. They are spending some time in the Capital, and are looking for a summer place in nearby Virginia.

Fete at Scholz Home.

Then on to the party given by one of the most attractive and popular young couples of the Diplomatic Corps, the First Secretary of the German Embassy and his wife, the lovely Frau Scholz. They make their home on Cleveland avenue in a rambling white house, furnished with rare pieces which they brought with them from Berlin. Many of the things are wedding gifts, for Herr and Frau Scholz were married only a a few weeks before they came to Washington last autumn. The latter will leave the end of next month for Germany to spend the summer with her family, returning in October. Herr Scholz, who is not due for a leave of absence yet, will remain in the Capital.

Glimpsed among the guests was Rear Admiral Robert Wittoeft, Naval Attache of the embassy, recently returned from a trip to the West Coast and Hawaii, and being greeted on all sides. Visiting the host and hostess are Herr and Frau Menzie, of New York, who are a most interesting couple. Herr Menzie is head of the North German-Lloyd Steamship Co. in New York, and was a classmate of Admiral Wittoeft at the German Naval Academy some years ago. His wife, a Hollander, was deep in conversation with Mlle. Inez van den Broeck, sister-in-law of the Minister of the Netherlands. They had just discovered that some years ago they attended the same school in the Netherlands, so the afternoon turned out to be somewhat of a reunion.

Others Present.

Others there were the Third Secretary of the Embassy and Frau Struve, with the former's sister, Fraulein Struve, who is spending some time in Washington with her brother and sister-in-law; Mme. Bostrom, wife of the Minister of Sweden; Mr. John Pelenyi, Minister of Hungary; Miss Marvin Breckinridge, Mrs. F. W. Barber, Mrs. Chester A. Snow, jr., Mrs. William T. Lann, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton, Mrs. Crosby Miller, and Senor Miguel Echegaray, Agricultural Secretary of the Spanish Embassy.

The third party was that given by Mr. Clarence Hewes in his home on Massachusetts avenue in honor of Mrs. Harry O. Penick, of New Orleans, who is visiting her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Hyde, at their home on Wyoming avenue. Mrs. Penick, is an anual visitor to the Capital, having spent much of her girlhood here while her father, Murphy J. Foster, one-time Governor of Louisiana, and for many years Senator from that State, was in Congress.

Mr. Hewes Entertains.

Mr. Hewes' parties are always delightful, for there are gathered people from all parts of the world, who meet again in Washington. Mr. Hewes was formerly a member of our diplomatic service, and his acquaintances are most cosmopolitan. Among those seen there yesterday were Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, both just arrived from the veterans' garden party at the White House; the Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. Harold Sims, Mr. Edward Gardner, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, Mrs. Campbell Prichett in an ensemble of lilac crepe, with a small hat to match, serving punch; the Minister of Iran and Mme. Djalal in conversation with Mme. Petroff, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of Bulgaria, and Mme. Florescu, wife of the Counselor of the Rumanian Legation, on the terrace overlooking Rock Creek Park.

Pan-American Union Concert Set June 11

Invitations have been issued by the director general of the Pan-American Union, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, and the assistant director, Dr. E. Gil Borjes, for a concert of Latin-American music on the Esplanade of the Pan-American Union Building June 11. The United States Army Band and assisting artists will present the concert.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

Official and Resident

Senora de Espil, wife of the Ambassador of Argentina, has issued cards for an "at home" Friday afternoon, May 24, from 5:30 to 7 o'clock in the embassy.

The Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted have issued invitations for a reception Friday afternoon, May 24, from 4 to 6 o'clock, in the legation, to celebrate the wedding of His Royal Highness, Crown Prince Frederik of Denmark and Iceland, to Her Royal Highness, Ingrid of Sweden.

The Minister of Honduras, Senor Dr. Don Miguel Paz Baraona, has left Washington for New York, where he will spend two weeks. While there he will meet his son, Senor Don Felipe Paz Baraona, who will arrive from Honduras and will accompany him to Washington.

Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, left Washington yesterday for New York, where she will be the guest of Miss Ann Callaghan until May 24. The Attorney General will join her in New York for the week-end.

Senator and Mrs. Alva B. Adams have as their guest in their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel Mrs. Robert S. Gast, of Pueblo, Colo., who arrived here a day or two ago.

Mrs. James Brady Smith, of Brooklyn, making her annual spring visit to Washington, is the house guest of Mrs. William Francis Keohan. While here she is renewing her acquaintances with friends she knew in Louisville, Ky., and Atlanta, Ga.

The former Secretary of War, Mr. Dwight F. Davis, entertained at dinner last evening in honor of the Governor of Puerto Rico, Mr. Blanton Winship.

Capt. and Mrs. W. D. Puleston and Mrs. Gilbert M. Hitchcock are among arrivals from Washington at the Plaza, New York City.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William M. Wright and Capt. and Mrs. William M. Wright, jr., are expected at the Barclay, New York, tomorrow from Washington. The Rev. John O'Grady, of Catholic University, is at the Barclay.

Dallas Women Visiting Gibsons at Shoreham

Mrs. Zell Gibson Roe has come from Dallas, Tex., to visit Brig. Gen. and Mrs. William R. Gibson at the Shoreham. Mrs. W. E. Allann, of Dallas, accompanied Mrs. Roe to Washington and is also at the Shoreham, to visit her mother, Mrs. W. L. W. Whitley.

Former Senator Simeon D. Fess has arrived in Washington from his home in Yellow Springs, Ohio, and is at the Carlton.

Mr. John Kerr joined Mrs. Kerr in their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel yesterday, coming here from Cleveland. They will be at the Wardman Park through the remainder of the spring season.

Mr. Walter J. Cummings, former special assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, has arrived from his home in Chicago, and is at the Carlton.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Mott Gunther will close their house in Georgetown next week, and will sail Saturday, May 25, for Europe, where they will spend the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard F. Hagenauer and their daughter, Miss Katherine Hagenauer, have come from their home in Chicago and are at the Shoreham while in the Capital to visit Representative and Mrs. Edward A. Kelly.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Curry, of New York City, are spending a few days at the Shoreham. They attended the R. O. T. C. annual drill at Georgetown University yesterday in which their son, Mr. Robert Emmett Curry, participated. The younger Curry is a senior at Georgetown. His father is former leader of Tammany Hall in New York.

Massachusetts Woman Is Visitor in Capital

Mrs. W. R. Bowne, of Worcester, Mass., is at the Carlton for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester T. Butler, of London, who are touring in this country, have stopped off in Washington for several days. They are at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Mrs. Sanford Bissell has closed her winter home at Winter Park, Fla., and is at the Shoreham for a few days before going to New York.

Mr. and S. Hanbury Williams, of London, is passing some time at the Carlton.

Commander Raymond F. Frellsen, U. S. N., with Mrs. Frellsen, has come here from Annapolis where he is stationed, to spend a short time. They are at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Swanson Bids Training Ship Officers to Fete

Argentine Vessel Arrives Tuesday; Others Will Entertain Visitors.

The Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Claude A. Swanson, has issued invitations for a dinner dance on Tuesday evening at the Army and Navy Country Club in honor of the officers and midshipmen of the Argentine training ship, Presidente Sarmiento, which will arrive in the Washington Navy Yard early Tuesday morning.

The ship is commanded by Commander Alberto Teisaire, with 21 officers and 45 midshipmen. An interesting program has been arranged for the visitors during their stay in the Capital.

On Tuesday afternoon, the commanding officer and some of his officers will make calls on the Secretary of the Navy, the Ambassador of Argentina and other officials. On Wednesday, the Secretary of the Navy will entertain at luncheon at the Army and Navy Club on I street when the guests will include the commanding officer, members of his staff, and the Ambassador of Argentina, Senor Don Felipe Espil.

Later in the afternoon some of the officers and midshipmen will go to Annapolis to visit the Naval Academy, and the others will be entertained at a cocktail party by the Naval Attache of the Embassy, Commander Guillermo MacKinlay. On Thursday they will be at leisure to do whatever sight-seeing they wish, and on Friday will visit the Marine Barracks at Quantico, Va. That afternoon the Ambassador and Senora de Espil will entertain at a reception for them, and on Sunday, May 26, they will leave for New York arriving there on May 29.

The gardens of Mrs. Bliss' home were to have been included only in the tour yesterday. Due to the inclement weather, Mrs. Bliss has consented to open them again tomorrow from 2 until 4 o'clock.

Mrs. Hall Lowe Becomes Bride Of James Alley

Ceremony Is Performed at the Larz Andersons' Residence Here.

An interesting wedding was solemnized yesterday when Mrs. Esther Hall Lowe, daughter of Mrs. Hall and the late Col. Harrison Hall, former adjutant general of the United States Army, became the bride of Mr. James Burke Alley, of Washington and Jericho, L. I., the son of Mrs. Albert R. Alley and the late Mr. Alley, of New York and Tennessee, at 4 o'clock at the home of the former United States Ambassador to Japan, Mr. Larz Anderson, on Massachusetts avenue.

In one of the drawing rooms of the Anderson home, which is filled with the paintings and objects d'art collected by the owners during their extensive travels, the ceremony was performed by the Rev. U. G. B. Pierce, D. D., with only members of the two families and a few close frends as witnesses.

The bride wore a frock of pale gray mousseline de soie, printed in a fine pattern of black. The dress was fashioned with a wide trailing skirt, velvet flowers in a deep shade of wine color forming a cluster at the front of the bodice. With it she wore a wide shallow hat of wine-shade straw with a simple band of the same hue. The bride, who was unattended, was escorted by Mr. Anderson. Her charming young daughter, Jane, wore a tiny frock of pale yellow linen and pale yellow ribbons in her hair. Mr. James Rayford Sykes, a nephew of the bridegroom, acted as best man.

After the ceremony a reception was given for a few close friends, who were received by the bridal couple, assisted by Mrs. Hall, Mrs. Alley and Mrs. Anderson.

Mr. and Mrs. Alley left late in the afternooh for a wedding trip and after June 1 will be at home to their friends at 1530 Thirtieth street in Georgetown. The bride's traveling suit was of navy blue and white print and a hat of matching blue, stitched in white.

Mrs. Alley is a former student of the Holton Arms School and has been a popular member of Washington society since her residence here with her mother at 2230 California street. Mr. Alley is a member of the Harvard Club and the Bar Association of New York, the Piping Rock and Aviation Clubs of Long Island and the Metropolitan Club of Washington.

Society Flocks To Exhibition Of Miniatures

Work of Albert Colfs Is Shown at Belgian Embassy.

Members of smart Capital society flocked to the Belgian Embassy Wednesday afternoon to see the exhibition of miniatures by Mr. Albert Colfs, Belgian artist, which were shown under the patronage of the Ambassador of Belgium, Count Van der Straten Ponthoz.

Mr. Colfs has been in Washington several weeks since his return from South America, where he spent several months in Chile and the Argentine, and during his brief stay here has completed three additions to his collection; those of the Countess Van der Straten Ponthoz, Senora de Espil, wife of the Ambassador of Argentina, and the late United States Minister to Canada, Mr. Warren Delano Robbins, the last painting being done from photographs.

Distinguished Group Attends.

A distinguished group gathered in the handsome drawing room of the embassy, where they were greeted by the Ambassador and his wife, the latter wearing an afternoon frock of gray, vastly becoming to her silvery bobbed hair. After viewing the collection and admiring the pictures, the guests went into the dining room for tea and to discuss the beautiful work of the artist. He has painted Countess Van der Straten Ponthoz in a gown of black velvet, and Senora de Espil seated on a rose velour settee, wearing a silvery tunic with a black skirt. Both miniatures are excellent likenesses and fine workmanship. The painting of Mr. Robbins is also fine.

Among other paintings in the collection is one of the Princess Josephine Charlottee, small daughter of the King and Queen of the Belgians; a fine study of the artist's father, and two of his small daughters, as well as numerous portraits of exceedingly beautiful ladies of the Argentine and Chile.

Guests at Exhibition.

Glimpsed among the guests were the newly appointed United States Minister to Rumania and Mrs. Leland Harrison, the Misses Patten, Mrs. C. Mathews Dick, Miss Marian Trumbull, the former United States Minister to Argentine, Mr. Robert Woods Bliss; Senora de Espil, Mr. and Mrs. William Franklin Sands, Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, wife of Senator Lewis; the Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. Michael MacWhite, the Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Veverka, and Mrs. Wilbur Carr, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State.

Also present were the Minister of Iran and Mme. Djalal, the Naval Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Sable, Mme. Bostrom, wife of the Minister of Sweden; Princess Troubetskoi and M. Stein, former Russian Minister to the Argentine, who is spending some time in the Capital.

Troyanovskys Plan Dinner for Hughes

Reception With Music Will Follow Saturday Fete.

The Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Mme. Troyanovsky will entertain at a dinner at the embassy Saturday evening in honor of the Chief Justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes. The dinner will be followed by a reception with music. The soloists will be Mr. Jan Peerce, leading tenor, of Radio City Music Hall, New York, and Mr. Mischa Violin, violinist. Mr. Violin is the director of the Radio City Music Hall Orchestra.

The musical reception will be the last of the season given by the Ambassador and Mme. Troyanovsky.

Artist Shows Self Portrait At Gallery Here

Work of Mrs. Herbert Pell Draws Much Interest at Corcoran.

A self portrait of a prominent society woman who is also an artist of distinction is attracting much interest at the Corcoran Gallery of Art. It is that of Olive Bigelow (Mrs. Herbert Pell, of New York and Newport), who is equally well known in Washington, London and Paris. Her canvas is now being exhibited in the southeast gallery of the American section. It represents the artist seated at her tea table, pouring, and is entitled "How Many Lumps?" The color motif is striking—the Chinese red of the gown against a brilliant yellow background with the color tones of the red blouse reflected in the silver service. The subdued notes of the pearls, the rich old lace—the china—blend harmoniously with the dominating tone of red. The pose is graceful, the technique broad.

Mrs. Pell is a serious artist and has won recognition among the younger American painters of note. One of her pictures received honorable mention in the spring salon of 1921. Her "Danube Canal" was exhibited at the Chicago Art Institute in 1930 and was placed later in the museum at Providence, R. I. Among her other portraits recently received at the Corcoran Gallery which may now be seen on request are the following: "Portrait of Charles Dana Gibson," "Hon. H. C. Pell and His Dog Yankee," "Tatiana," and "Hon. Herbert C. Pell and Son."

The Pells' summer home in Newport, where they entertain delightfully, will be among the first to be opened there this season.

Politics Is Exciting Game, Youthful Feminist Finds

Bachrach Photo.

Young people will play a more imporbtant part in the next political campaign than in any previous one, predicts Miss Ruth Lockett, recorder of the General Land Office, and youngest presidential appointee.

That's Why Young America Is "Going to Town" on Party Activity, Ruth Lockett, Youngest Woman Appointee of President, Says.

By Mary Greiner Kelly.

YOUTH is "going to town" politically. True, there are thunderclaps and fireworks ahead, danger of bruised toes and a curtailment of romantic dallying in that arena of party contests. But it's the only place where youth can try out its adult voice and test its talents constructively.

"Why, it's the most exciting game in the world!" explained pretty Ruth Lockett, youngest feminine Presidential appointee in the Nation and national vice president of the Young Democratic Club of America. "I can't understand," continued the vivacious young woman, "how any young man or woman of spirit can waste energy on less important organization work. It's like a hungry man reaching for a cream puff instead of a steak.

"Even college students have caught the political fever today. The appeal of fraternity and campus clubs pales beside the lure of lending a hand to the grown-up job of reconstructing a nation. And party politics is the only door open. Nothing matches it for drama, color and opportunity."

Organized Democratic Clubs.

Miss Lockett who won acclaim as a young poet, went places politically before she ever left the Stanford University campus. Already established in sorority and campus club life, she turned her talents to social service and charity work. Then she blazed a youthful trail for prohibition repeal. Next she met the indomitable Mary Dewson, who was laying preconvention campaign plans in the West. Inspired by the contact, Ruth set out in 1931 to organize the first Young Democrats of California.

"I found out then how thrilling a political campaign can be," she said. "It's so utterly satisfying to see one's ideals of a lifetime suddenly take on tangibility and crystallize themselves into a single platform, then to see that platform placed upon the shoulders of one man."

Two years ago, when but 23, Miss Lockett was summoned to Washington to receive a Presidential appointment. The youngest woman in the United States so honored, she was given the flattering position of recorder in the General Land Office, under the Interior Department.

Succeeding Elizabeth Wheeler, daughter of the Montana Senator, as national vice president of the Young Democratic Clubs of America, the former Stanford girl will devote her vacation time to political organization work. Anticipating the national convention to be held at Milwaukee in August, she will leave for that city Thursday to help make arrangements. Next she will attend a meeting in her home State scheduled for next week.

"The young people of all parties are going to take a greater hand in the next political campaign than ever before," she predicted. "They feel they have earned a right to be heard. They have weathered the worst depression in history, brought on through no fault of their own. Denied a chance to earn a living in spite of having fitted themselves for it, they haven't grown bitter. Nor have they lost heart. The youngsters of the Nation seek only a chance to help blaze the new trails to recovery.

"The jazz age with its befogged lack of thought has passed. The young folks of today are thinking clearly and constructively and their ideas are worthy of consideration. In politics they don't try to steal the show. They want only to make it run more smoothly by playing their own part effectively."

Progressive in Outlook.

What characteristics distinguish the younger wings of political organization?

"Spontaneity, directness of attack and a progressive outlook," according to Miss Lockett. "Most young people demand action rather than flowery words or vague promises," she said. "They organize their programs with definite accomplishment in mind. Possessing a more scientific background than their parents, they reason things through more swiftly. They do not let important matters hang fire indefinitely.

"Idealistic, the majority of young people have no slavish regard for wealth and social prestige. They respect the person who produces the goods in the shortest time possible. Change and innovation do not frighten young people. That is why they've been trusted with grave responsibilities of Government since the depression. And, on the whole, don't you think they've done a pretty good job of it?"

American Women Fail Socially Because They Devote Talents To Material Side of Functions

By Malvina Lindsay,

PROWESS in the drawing room has helped many a French woman to fame, a recently opened historical exhibit in New York has revealed. Only one leader of a movement—Joan of Arc—is shown beside an array of kings' wives and mistresses and of famous hostesses.

• • • •

A similar listing of American women would show feminine humanitarians and leaders of reform movements dominating the scene. Revolt against injustice and compassion for suffering have been the chief motivating forces of such American heroines as Clara Barton, Susan B. Anthony, Jane Croly, Frances Willard and Jane Addams.

• • • • •

That this is so should be a matter of pride to the women of America. However, the question naturally arises, "Why has this country produced no great feminine social tradition?"

Think back over the past for names of women famous in the Nation's social life. That of Dolly Madison and a few lesser luminaries come to mind. But certainly little glamour attends the hostesses of the past or their hospitality. Certainly no pulsating life, no far-reaching influence distinguishes most social events of the present. Yet why should this be true in a land where women are so dominant socially, so well educated and energetic, and allegedly so beautiful and overwhelming?

ONE ANSWER might be that women of America and France were different temperamentally. Another, that the glamour and social opportunities of court life have been lacking in this country. And still another that American men, obsessed with money making, and brought up in the pioneer fear-of-being-a-sissy tradition have given women little or no cooperation in developing social life.

• • • •

However, these are not enough to explain the general lack of yeast in the bread of social affairs, both past and present, a lack for which women, controlling the social scene as they do, are largely to blame. The chief reason American women have fallen short of developing the exhilarating and influential social life one might have expected of them, has been because of their naive and childish emphasis on material rather than immaterial values.

• • • •

It is a frequent comment of foreign visitors that the American woman with all her energy, all her intellect, all her resourcefulness, depends too much on outside forces to achieve her ends. She looks to the beauty shop to give her beauty, to the couturier to give her style, to the club lecturer to give her culture, to the preacher and the Ladies Aid to give her spirituality.

SO WITH her social life. If she gives a party, all her thought, all her energies are directed to the refreshments, to the favors, the centerpieces, the decorations, the gowns she will wear, the favorable location of her newest piece of furniture, the behavior of her newest maid, the problem of herding the guests through the proper inclosures. As a result, her party is a material triumph, perfect in appointments, food, procedure, but thin and hollow—sounding brass and tinkling cymbal. Her guests leave stuffed in body but starved in soul.

If the same concern were directed to the intangible side of a social affair, the event might be something more than just a "nice party." If the hostess once could get her mind off the material problems of her teas or dinners she might be able to bring to these events the necessary intangible values—tact and intuition in the handling of guests, skill in drawing out their treasures of mind and spirit, and the spontaneous and opulent giving of the best that is within herself.

• • • •

Most women fail socially not because of ineptitude as a misdirection of energy. They need to advance beyond the pioneer stage of social life, to become a little more worldly wise, a little less housewifely. If American hostesses with their great talents would depend more on themselves and less on their cooks and butlers, they would be on the road to developing a social tradition. American social life still stands chiefly in need of more Marys and fewer Marthas.

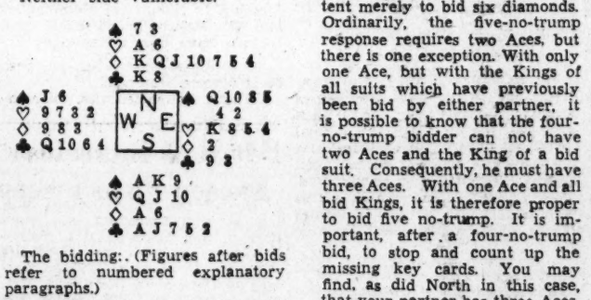
Modern Methods.

Correct use of the Four-Five No-trump Convention is not difficult, but like any other of the bidding tools of expert players, this Ace-showing method requires care and systematic visualization of your partner's hand.

East, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

East	South	West	North
Pass	1♣	Pass	1◇(1)
Pass	2NT(2)	Pass	4◇(3)
Pass	4NT	Pass	5NT(4)
Pass	7◇(5)	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—Despite the great playing strength, North bids only one, a jump takeout requires 3½ honor-tricks.

2—With 4½-plus honor-tricks, all suits stopped, and a fit with North's suit this is very close to a three-no-trump rebid. South chooses the conservative course because of the possibility that North may have made a highly shaded one-over-one response with only one-half honor-trick in his hand.

3—This is the Jump Trump Rebid, very valuable in reaching Slam contracts. After a strength-showing bid, this jump to four in a suit shows a nearly solid suit—a suit six cards or more in length and having only one possible loser.

4—After South's conventional four-no-trump bid, North is not content merely to bid six diamonds. Ordinarily, the five-no-trump response requires two Aces, but there is one exception. With only one Ace, but with the Kings of all suits which have previously been bid by either partner, it is possible to know that the four-no-trump bidder can not have two Aces and the King of a bid suit. Consequently, he must have three Aces. With one Ace and all bid Kings, it is therefore proper to bid five no-trump. It is important, after a four-no-trump bid, to stop and count up the missing key cards. You may find, as did North in this case, that your partner has three Aces.

5—Knowing that North has the heart Ace, the club King, and a diamond suit which will be made entirely solid by the addition of the Ace, South jumps to seven diamonds.

The Play.

East opened the five of spades: North was able to make his contract with ease by immediately taking the two high clubs and then ruffing a third round of clubs with the diamond ten. He then returned to the dummy with the trump Ace and ruffed another club. This established dummy's club Jack, and after he had drawn trumps North led a spade to dummy's Ace and discarded his small heart, claiming all the tricks.

Silk Linen and Shantung Assume New Importance

WASHABLE silks have a new importance for summer because of the wide variety of types which are fashion firsts. No longer is it simply a decision between a tub silk crepe and a washable silk shirting.

First in the fashion ranks are the new silk linens and the silk shantungs in various weaves. The silk linens closely resemble linen except that they have more luster, but being made of silk they have the natural elasticity of silk and therefore are easier to keep fresh and unrumpled.

Women who buy washable dresses are especially interested in the wearing qualities of the fabrics used. They want somethnig that will not stretch or shrink, that will be easy to wash and iron, and that will keep its freshness after numerous launderings. Because of its natural elasticity, pure silk makes washable fabrics that are ideal in these respects.

The new silk linens have the advantage of taking strong dyes easily and are at their loveliest in the new vivid peasant colors which are so important this summer. They also come in some very new prints. The latter favor simple bold plaids and geometric treatments, the technique radically different from that used on silk crepes. Hand-blocked effects are particularly good. A smart costume in silk linen is two-piece, with a black skirt, a white jacket-blouse and a polkadot Ascot scarf.

The one-piece sports frock is the prime favorite this season. It is featured in variations of the shirt-waist type which introduce softened effects, touches of button and ribbon trimming, novel stitching, and a number of different yoke treatments.

The two-piece dress is found in the heavier, rustic fabrics like silk linen and silk shantung, with a windbreaker-type jumper. Also in shantungs in heavy versions are two and three-piece jacket suits, severely tailored, with bi-swing backs and strictly mannish treatments. Natural silk shantung is the most important fabric for these suits.

Comfort Is Keynote.

There is a great to-do over tricks done with the sleeves of active sports frocks to make them as "action proof" as possible. Patented seaming, no seams at all, and intricate cuts are all being featured to make the sportswoman's life as comfortable as possible. Most of the sleeves are cut quite full and reach midway between shoulder and elbow. In tennis dresses just the shoulder is covered. Gored skirts are beginning to achieve prominence, although the pleated skirt is still most important. The simple little straight skirt has a last-year look.

Natural tones are outstanding. They appear in every type of washable sports silk.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have been engaged for two years. Occasionally during this period my fiance insisted on giving me small sums of money which he said he wanted me to have for personal items, such as taking a friend to luncheon, the movies, etc. At first I demurred, but finding this only precipitated an argument I took the easiest way out and accepted the money. However, I have never spent one penny of this money, which now amounts to about $100, but very carefully laid it aside, thinking it would come in nicely when we married.

• • • •

He has now broken our engagement and in no uncertain terms has branded me a "gold digger" and reminded me of the money he spent entertaining me. As a matter of fact, I never have been a "gold digger" and any money spent for our entertainment went for amusements he enjoyed and things he wanted to do. I was rarely, if ever, consulted. I merely fell in line. However, we did enjoy many of the same pleasures and for that reason I never objected to not being consulted, although there were times I thought I should have been.

• • • •

Mercenary Strain Revealed.

DEAR MELINDA: Not only should I return the money loaned, but if it were within my financial means, I should send him an additional check reimbursing him for the paid entertainment he provided during the time of the engagement.

• • • •

You may not be, consciously and deliberately, a "gold digger," but you must be lacking in a certain clean self-respect to have accepted money from your fiance, either as a gift or for designated personal expenditure. Certainly there is a mercenary strain in the person who, under these circumstances, would hesitate for a moment to return the carefully hoarded $100. One feels definite contempt for the man who would conduct himself as your fiance has, but one feels, too, that his recriminations have not been heaped upon you unearned. The only way you can prove you aren't the "gold digger" he thinks you are and you think you aren't is to repay him the money he so much regrets having given. M. H.

Woman Needs Clothes.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: You will be helping me very much in publishing this letter. I am wondering if some of the wealthy women of this city would be kind enough to send me some of their cast-off clothing. I can sew fairly well and could fix over clothes to fit me.

• • • •

No one in my family has had regular work for several years so I would be very much pleased with what anyone could send me. Such a contribution would be a lot to me, and I am hoping that there are women who will find it possible to make such a helpful gesture. Sincerely, MRS. BLANK.

DEAR MRS. BLANK: Here is your letter in print and I hope it may have the desired result. For the benefit of readers, I may add that your name and address will be furnished them on request. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

What Today Means

"Taurus."

IF MAY 17 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:45 to 11:45 a. m., from 1:45 to 3:45 p. m., and from 6:45 to 8:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:45 to 9:45 a. m., from 3:45 to 5:45 p. m. and from 8:45 to 10:45 p. m.

Any manifestation of a contradictory or stubborn spirit on this day may prove a serious error of judgment. Any rude interruption or abrupt contradiction is likely to stir up a stormy protest, with devastating effects. Business and professional men on this date will do well to be prepared to make allowances for temperamental customers and clients. If handled tactfully, people inclined to be cranky can be satisfied. Guests, at any form of entertainment, will do well to watch their p's and q's, for hosts may be inclined to be not only supersensitive, but critical as well. It might be well to remember today the old saying: "Not to look a gift horse in the mouth," if you are given something for nothing, even if it is of little use.

Married and engaged couples, as well as those in Cupid's toils, will find it much better to offer no excuse at all, in case they are feeling in need of making one, than to advance a poor one.

If a woman and May 17 is your birthday, the happiness, as well as good cheer which is your due, is all that will be needed to disperse any speck of gloom that might threaten the harmony of the day. You seem predestined to accomplish many worthwhile things. If you are wise, you will not dwell on any unhappy episodes of the past, but will await, with an optimistic mind, some of the good things the future has in store. Banish from your thoughts sentiments tinged with the verdigris of resentment or hatred, if you wish to be the recipient of a great deal of good.

Journalism, teaching, commercial art or advertising, radio broadcasting, as well as office work, may provide the right place for your capability to be demonstrated. In matters concerning love you should have no cause to complain.

The child born on May 17, when it passes from childhood into youth, probably will have no difficulty in forging rapidly ahead, along the road which leads to the high pinnacles of good fortune.

If a man and May 17 is your natal day, your ability will receive recognition, if you persevere. Let nothing cause you to lose confidence in yourself. If you let hope sustain you, obstacles will disappear, and the laurels of victory will be yours. Insurance, real estate, stocks, bonds, banking, writing, the lecture platform or pulpit are among occupations that may enable you to see your dreams come true.

Quarantine Best Way to Curb Glanders

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

SOME months ago there appeared in this column an article dealing with fungus plant diseases, many of which primarily affect animals and some of which are easily transmitted to man. A rather surprising number of comments were received and it appears that many more cases exist than are chronicled in medical literature. Although the disease referred to—actinomycosis, blastomycosis, etc.—do not fall into the same general group with glanders, this latter condition is essentially a disease transmitted from animals to man.

While glanders, sometimes called farcy, is fairly common in animals, it is not particularly so in man. Nevertheless, veterinarians and those who care for horses should be particularly on the alert for the identification of symptoms. If detected, prompt quarantine and other special measures should be employed to prevent its spread to human beings.

The disease develops first in the nasal passages and bronchi of horses and cattle, causing a profuse mucus flow. Later nodules form in the air passages and the infecting organisms (bacillus mallei) produced in these areas are carried to other parts of the body, including the internal organs.

Its infectious character is clearly illustrated by an accident experienced in a Rumanian (Czernowitz) laboratory. The chief bacteriologist was studying cultures of the bacillus mallei and had placed the organisms in a centrifuge (an apparatus revolving at high speed, designed to precipitate solid particles from a liquid). The tube containing the organisms burst, spreading the contents over the laboratory. Fragments of glass were picked up by several assistants and, as it was believed the bacilli were dead, no special precautions against infection were taken. In the course of a few days, however, all those who at the time of the mishap were in the room developed symptoms of glanders and two cases proved fatal within 48 hours.

Some authorities believe that many cases of the disease are mistaken for smallpox, as occasionally the eruptions on the skin resemble the pustular stage of smallpox. Now and then glanders of the lung is diagnosed as tuberculosis or influenza, and the case is reported of a young rancher who had the care of a number of horses, one of which had recovered from the infection. This patient became ill with what was thought to be influenza. Because of his failure to convalesce in the usual time he was taken to a near-by hospital, where he was found to be suffering from glanders.

Because the symptoms of glanders vary so widely the disease often goes unrecognized unless the character of the secretion from the nose calls attention to the type of infection.

Prevention lies in complete quarantine of infected animals and adequate protection of the hands, the face, and particularly the air passages of all those who are compelled to handle diseased animals. Veterinarians have done much in preventing the spread of this virulent infection to man.

Beauty Packet That Fills All Needs on Sale

Kit Is Not Loaded Down With Extras Which Take Up Space.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A FEW MONTHS ago the ether began vibrating with rumors of an amazing little beauty box which was to make its appearance here in May. Yesterday the kit arrived.

There are so many kits, for dry and oily skins, for beach, for traveling, for office and home, that one deserving of honorable mention must be unusual.

This one is. Unlike the majority, it contains only those essentials for skin care and make-up that you actually need. It isn't loaded down with extras that simply take up space and push up the price. It has a liquefying cleansing cream with an emulsion base suitable for dry as well as oily skins. It is a fine, quick little cleanser that takes off the old make-up and coating of dirt in just about two seconds.

Next, there's a generous jar of tissue cream, rich, soothing and necessary for coarse skins. It's a happy combination of vegetable oils and other ingredients with antiwrinkle properties. You'll notice after using it consistently how the texture of your skin will improve.

After this cream you'll naturally want a freshening lotion for toning and perking up the skin. You'll find a very fine one included in the kit. It's mildly astringent and ever so soothing.

You'll go into rhapsodies over the foundation lotion, a creamy, balmy liquid that not only serves to erase skin irritations but to hide blemishes and keep the powder on from dawn to dusk.

All these little beauty essentials are in one compartment of the kit. In another section you'll find a perfect little make-up trio. There's a lipstick, commonly called sub-deb because of its handy in-between size. It's not so large as most lipsticks, and yet it's far from being a half pint. This middling size is especially adapted to your evening or sports purse. And then there's a lovely little rouge compact.

Its attractive gold case will grace your purse as well as your dressing table. Completing the outfit is a small box of a No. 1 face powder. You may choose any shade you like, but we suggest a certain new rachel which is excellent for fair skins just beginning to darken.

Perfect Mascara.

If you were to list the points of a perfect mascara what would they be? First of all you'd, probably want one that goes on smoothly and does not cake on the lashes and give you that hopelessly artificial look. And then you'd want one that would not run and smudge and leave you looking like a clown when you're trying to be your most charming self. Point No. 3—It must not smart and sting. You know how it is to have your eyes reddened and ever so sensitive thanks to a bit of mascara touching the delicate tissues. No sir, this perfect mascara must be smart-proof!

What will you say when we tell you that this perfect little mascara is actually here, that there is actually such a one? It doesn't cake, it doesn't smudge! It doesn't sting! It contains a new ingredient which encourages the growth of the lashes. You'll be amazed with the silky, lustrous effect it gives your lashes.

This mascara comes in a case suited exactly to its modern qualities. The new case is automatic. Press a lever and the mascara rises ready for use. And it will last you through tears and laughter—and even spring and summer showers!

Questions Answered.

Query: What can I do to take away the rather heavy growth of hair across my upper lip? S. E. T.

Answer: If you will send a stamped self-addressed envelope we will be glad to give you the name of a man who specializes in electrolysis—removing hairs with an electric needle.

Have you tried bleaching? If the hairs are not stiff and coarse you can hide them successfully in this manner. Bleach them with peroxide every night and morning for a week and you'll be sure to notice the difference. Some women prefer a solution of peroxide and lemon juice, half and half.

Query: I find that every face powder I use gives me the "sneezes and sniffles." Do you know any which are free from ingredients which might effect me in this manner? MRS. DODD.

Answer: There is one which is especially prepared for women who react to powders as you do. It is free from chalk, orris root and all irritating ingredients. Write, or call and we'll give you the name and tell you where it may be purchased.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 305, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Baked Trout Is Delicious Seafood Dish Served With Simple Bread Dressing

The moderate price and wide choice of fish this week should induce many a woman to choose this dish for Sunday's dinner. Here we have a baked trout, garnished with crisp chicory, lemon and radish circles and served with a piquant frozen cucumber relish.

Cucumber Relish Will Add the Final Note of Perfection.

By Dorothea Duncan.

DAME NATURE seems to be doing very well by her hungry public. This week she offers trout as an ideal Sunday dinner suggestion. Boiled trout with horseradish sauce is delicious, as is broiled or fried trout, but you haven't tasted perfection until you have tried a baked trout.

Dress and stuff the fish, leaving the head and tail on. Use a simple bread dressing flavored with a bit of chopped onion and a sprig of parsley. Cut three slits into the sides of the fish and insert a strip of bacon into each cut. Dredge the fish with salt, pepper and flour and place it on a rack in a baking pan. Place in a hot oven (425 degrees F.), add a cup of boiling water, and cover. Cook 15 to 20 minutes to each pound, basting frequently, adding water after each basting if necessary. After the first 15 or 20 minutes reduce the heat to 350 degrees F. Serve the fish on a large platter surrounded with crisp curls of chicory, lemon and radish rings.

A piquant cucumber relish will add the final note of perfection to your baked trout. Try it, using the following recipe:

Frozen Cucumber Relish.

1 very large cucumber or
2 medium-sized ones
3 tablespoons lemon juice
3 tablespoons cider vinegar
1 teaspoon onion juice
½ teaspoon salt
1-16 teaspoon white pepper
Speck cayenne
16 marshmallows
2 egg whites

Peel and grate the cucumber. (There should be 1¾ cups of pulp.) Add all the seasonings and mix well. Meanwhile, melt the marshmallows in top of double boiler and beat until smooth. Combine with the cucumber mixture and stir until well blended. Place in refrigerator until almost congealed; then whip the egg whites and fold them in lightly, but thoroughly. Return to freezing tray and freeze without stirring. Serve in small glasses with the fish course. Serves six to eight.

This mixture may also be frozen in a crank freezer:

Fresh Strawberry Whip.

1 package strawberry flavored gelatin
1 cup warm water
1 cup strawberry juice
1 cup crushed strawberries
1-3 cup sugar

Dissolve gelatin in warm water. Add strawberry juice. Chill until cold and sirupy. Place in a bowl of cracked ice or ice water and whip with rotary egg beater until fluffy and thick like whipped cream. Fold in strawberries and sugar. Turn into mold. Chill until firm. Unmold. Serves ten.

For culinary assistance, call Dorothea Duncan, National 4200, or write to her, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, in care of The Washington Post.

The GAME of LIFE

By Priscilla Wayne

Ellen Dale displeases her husband, Michael, when she decided to go back to work to help pay her mother's debts. Both busy at their jobs, Ellen and Mike see little of each other. When Ellen finds Mike with Marjorie Hutton one night at a chicken shack, she at last believes the gossip her mother has relayed to her. She refuses to let Mike explain and goes home to her mother. When, because of Mrs. Mallory's intervention, she hears nothing from him, Ellen decides to get a divorce. The lawyer arranges that Mike be served with notice immediately, and Ellen goes to their little home to pack her belongings. While she is there, Mike arrives. Ellen faints.

THERE were frantic moments when Michael carried Ellen to her bed, bathed her face in cold water, tried tremblingly with every means at his command to bring consciousness back to her.

He put in a frantic call to his mother to locate his father, Doctor John, and hurried back to Ellen. The thinness of her face struck him like a blow. He wondered if she actually meant the brutal thing she had done to him that afternoon.

That his young wife loved him as much as he loved her, Michael Dale had never really doubted until that afternoon when her notice of divorce had been served on him. All the time he had hoped, and kept on hoping there would be a reconciliation, a bridging of that fearful gulf of misunderstanding that had come between them.

Doctor John came into the room, opening his medicine bag almost as he came. As always, the very sight of his father gave Michael courage. "How long has she been this way?" Doctor John took time to ask.

Opens Her Eyes.

"Since I put in the call—20 minutes or so."

"Take it easy, Son," Doctor Dale said. "See, she's coming out of it, right now."

And Ellen opened her dark eyes, ringed with their shadows of pain, and gazed in bewilderment around the room. "You're all right, Ellen," Doctor John said, his professional fingers at her wrist. "Just keep coming along. You're going to be all right. See, here's Michael. He's just coming out of it, too. You had him scared out of ten years' growth, Ellen dear."

Michael Was Frantic.

Poor Michael. He loved his little wife with all his heart. That shudder, as though the very sight of him repulsed her, cut to the quick.

"I'm here, Ellen," he said, taking her hand, knowing his father would expect some kind of show of affection, longing to take her into his arms yet, somehow, after that look he could never forget, not daring to.

"You're going to be all right. Ellen dear," Dr. John said. "But you must take it easier, from now on."

"From now on?" Ellen's voice was like a cry.

"I'm glad," Dr. John said, slapping Michael on the shoulder, his good face all a-grin. "Your mother and I didn't want to nose into the business of you young people, but I'll tell the world we're glad you've decided to give us a grandchild."

Mike Didn't Know.

"You mean—that Ellen—," poor Mike's voice trembled.

"What's the matter with you modern kids?" Dr. John laughed. "Why, you aren't nearly so smart as you let on to be. Oh, I'll excuse you, Mike. Ellen here could barely have known it. And maybe I'm mistaken myself. But then I'm a pretty old duffer and I've seen the stork's shadow in the eyes of a good many brides."

And so presently he went away hustling to tell the joyous news to Mary and believing fondly that he left as much happiness behind as he carried away with him.

Ellen lay in her bed, very quietly, trying to think through the future. She was going to have a baby—Michael Dale's baby—and she had served Michael with notice that she meant to divorce him.

Michael closed the door on his exulting father, came slowly back to Ellen.

Not Too Late.

Ellen sat up on the bed and holding the edge carefully, said: "I—I suppose you've had the notice?"

"Yes." The question seemed to call for little else.

"If I had—known——"

"You would have—waited——"

"Yes."

"It isn't too late," he said at last, a desperate hope clutching at his heart. "You could withdraw the suit—until afterward."

Ellen's troubled eyes searched his face. "You mean for the sake of the—the child, we should wait?"

"We owe it to him," Michael said.

Ellen nodded slowly.

It was the only time they mentioned divorce proceedings. To each it seemed that the other was merely waiting until responsibility had been fulfilled, until each would again seek to go separate paths.

There was to follow the saddest, most bitter period of their lives.

Her Plan Was Best.

Mama was difficult.

Mr. Hardesty broke the news to her, after Elleen had visited his office briefly.

"I don't want to go on with it," Ellen had explained nervously.

"You're going back to live with your husband?"

"Yes."

Theodore Hardesty grinned, looking at the girl shrewdly. "That's right, Ellen," he advised in fatherly fashion. "There's an interesting reason?"

"Yes."

"Many a marriage," said the attorney, speaking with absolute truth, "has been saved by the unexpected arrival of a little stranger. A baby is a pretty satisfactory cement for a shattered marriage, and don't you forget it."

Tears of gratitude filled Ellen's eyes. "And you'll stop the divorce proceedings?"

"Tighter than a drum. Just forget about it."

Mother Is Angry.

But Rose Mallory was not so easy to deal with. She had fairly walked the floor in nervous hysteria when Ellen failed to arrive home quickly after she had made what was supposed to be a hurried trip to her own little home.

"Just keep your shirt on," Aunt Ellen had advised, none too tactfully. "Ellen's a grown woman. She can take care of herself"

"But she promised to come right away. She said she wouldn't be in that house more than ten minutes. Oh, I ought to have gone along with her and waited outside. But I hate the very sight of the place."

Aunt Ellen gazed at her sister-in-law with belated understanding. "Rose Mallory, you've been up to something. You haven't been trying to patch things up like you told me you would. You've been trying to get Ellen to leave her husband."

Mama's eyes gleamed with satisfaction and she forgot her hysteria for an instant. "She is going to leave him. Divorce notice has been served on him this afternoon."

Went to See Girl.

But time slipped on. Ellen did not come. Finally, in spite of everying Aunt Ellen could do, Mama called a taxi and went careening over to Michael Dale's home.

She waited angrily at the door. Her worst fears were being realized—she had seen the son-in-law she despised through the window. He opened the front door

"I came after Ellen," Mama said haughtily.

"Ellen's sleeping." Michael said with equal haughtiness.

"I want to see her—right away." and Mama glared at this young upstart whom she'd never welcomed as a son-in-law and never would.

"You can't see Ellen. I'm sorry. She's asleep and I won't awaken her."

Mama fairly screamed at that defiance. "You won't waken her? You won't waken her? What have you got to say about it? She's divorcing you. In less than a week you'll just be an incident in her life—an incident that she's well through with."

Michael spoke hastily and with decision. "Ellen is ill. I've had my father and he says she's not to be disturbed. I'm sorry, Mrs. Mallory, but I'll have to ask you to go on home."

Pay Roll Increases Exceed Food Prices

Statistics Given on Rise in Last Two Years.

By the Associated Press.

Urbana, Ill., May 16.—Housewives who complain at rising food prices fail to recognize that the upward trend was started by factory pay rolls, says R. W. Bartlett, of the University of Illinois college of agriculture.

Bartlett says factory pay rolls have increased nearly twice as fast as retail food prices in the last two years.

The total cash income of factory workers in February, 1935, was $613,000,000, which was an increase of $258,000,000, or 73 per cent over the amount for the same month last year. During the same period food prices increased only 34 per cent.

"While food prices have increased during recent months, especially for the consumer whose income has not been increased, it is reasonable to expect that food costs will take less of the consumer's budget during the coming year if crop yields are more nearly normal," Bartlett said.

Old Greek Manuscripts Found in Montreal

Manuscripts dating from the eleventh and twelfth century were recently discovered in Montreal, Canada, according to the Rev. Canon G. Abbott-Smith, principal of Diocesan Theological College there.

The manuscripts were supposedly brought by a Greek into Montreal from an old Grecian monastery. The sections found are taken from the Gospel of St. Luke and the Gospel of St. Matthew.

Expert Backs Belief Drafts Cause Colds

THE NEXT TIME anybody scoffs at you because you believe you catch cold whenever you are in a draft, quote Dr. Wilson G. Smillie, professor of the Public Health Administration, Harvard University.

Dr. Smillie says, according to "The Forecast," that drafts certainly do produce colds in susceptible individuals.

"It's a question of chilling the body surface," the physician declared. "A man can work all day in a strong chilly wind and, if active and warmly clad, he will not catch cold. On the other hand, a person working in a warm room with a constant draft of not very cold air on the back of his neck will catch cold if he is susceptible."

New Jam Declared Rich in Vitamins

A new sweet particularly delightful to children—paprika jam—has been evolved by food manufacturers as a result of the recent discovery of the rich vitamin C content of red pepper.

The American Chemical Society, according to the Forecast, a magazine, has received notice that in Hungary, where the red pepper grows abundantly, a jam prepared from its juice and called Vitapric is on the market. The jam is bright red in color.

The product, its producers claim, contains twice as much vitamin C as lemon juice and may easily be blended with the foods that children eat.

W. K. Kellogg
OF BATTLE CREEK

YOU never had a taste-experience like this: Kellogg's Wheat Krispies are unlike any other ready-to-eat cereal. They actually are blended for crispness. Just enough rice is added to whole wheat to insure a wonderful, crackling crunchiness. Crispness lasts right down to the last spoonful.

Wheat Krispies are nourishing. They digest easily and release energy quickly. Try them soon. Discover that the whole family likes this remarkable new cereal.

Wheat Krispies are sold by all grocers. Buy a big package today. Enjoy them for breakfast, lunch or supper. Always oven-fresh and ready to eat. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Kellogg's WHEAT KRISPIES

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

Sound on cellophane is the latest wrinkle in the radio industry. According to the magazine Radio Art. The material is fireproof, nondeteriorating and strong, and occupies less space than the nitrate film that has been used for "sound-on-film" rolls.

The new material is called "Cellaphilm." One of its greatest advantages is its durability, for instead of the striations being merely coated on the surface of the film, as in present-day use, it is impregnated throughout the entire thickness of the strip. If scratched, the stock may be repolished and refinished with a varnishlike substance which acts as a preservative, and the "Cellaphilm" may be used again and again without the loss of definition.

The annual Society of Arts and Science award for the best motion picture performance of the year will be presented to Grace Moore for her acting in "One Night of Love." The ceremonies will be heard on WMAL at 9:30 p. m. Will Hays, Ethel Barrymore, A. Atwater Kent and Mabel Walker Willebrandt will speak briefly. Frank Crowninshield, editor of Vanity Fair, will make the award.

Speeches:

Senator Pope, "International Cooperation to Prevent War," WMAL, 10:30 p. m.

Representatives Hoeppel and Ekwall, WRC, 5 p. m. Their subjects, respectively: "Technotax" and "The Portland Rose Festival."

A program celebrating the opening of trade relations between the United States and China will be heard on WJSV, 10 p. m.

Other dial doings:

Dolly Stark, big league umpire, is guessing on the College Prom spot, WMAL, 7:30 p. m.

Bea Lillie leads an expedition back to the Yukon, WMAL, 8 p. m.

Bettie Davis plays a scene from her new picture, "The Girl From Tenth Avenue," on Hollywood Hotel program, WJSV, 8 p. m.

Carla Romana, C. B. S. staff pianist, features Russian composers in her program, WJSV, 2:15 p. m.

Two broadcasts concerning the Ship Constellation's diving bell are heard on WJSV today. The first, at 2:15, occurs when the bell is demonstrated to naval officials. Then, at 4:15, Arch McDonald will descend into the depths of the Potomac inside the bell, and tell you what he sees.

Dr. Sampey Elected By Southern Baptists

Memphis, Tenn., May 16 (AP).—Dr. John R. Sampey, president of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky., was elected president of the Southern Baptist Convention late today, defeating Dr. Robert G. Lee, pastor of the Bellevue Baptist Church, Memphis, by a narrow margin.

Both secretaries, Dr. Hight C. Moore, Nashville, Tenn., and J. Henry Burnett, Macon, Ga., were re-elected.

Dr. Frank R. Tripp, St. Joseph, Mo., was elected first vice president.

Bid to Long Proposed.

Springfield, Ill., May 16 (AP).—A resolution asking that Senator Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, be invited to address the Illinois House of Representatives was introduced today by Representative Harry M. McCaskrin, Rock Island Republican. House leaders refused to consider the resolution, turning it over to the executive committee.

Federation Post Given Mrs. Hoadley

Chevy Chase Woman Elected President at Annapolis.

Mrs. John Troy Selected as Vice President by Convention.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., May 16.—Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley, president of the Women's Club of Chevy Chase, Md., was elected president of the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs today. Mrs. Hoadley has been active in club work and for three years has been editor of the Maryland Club Woman.

Mrs. John Paul Troy, of the Neighborhood Improvement Club of Govans, was elected vice president; Mrs. Frederick P. Roe, of the Greensboro Community Club, recording secretary; Mrs. M. J. Lane, of the North Beach Women's Club, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. J. Howard Hopkins, of the Women's Club of Laurel, treasurer.

The officers were nominated by a committee composed of Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, chairman; Miss Florence Monk, Mrs. H. Matthew Gault, Mrs. Edward W. Kock, and Mrs. J. Enos Ray.

Mrs. Maguire Reports.

The third day of the thirty-sixth annual convention started with the minutes of the secretary, Mrs. Joseph T. Maguire, and was followed by a question box directed by Mrs. H. Matthew Gault and answered by the leaders of the various departments.

The report of the credentials committee, made by Mrs. Clarence L. Fowler, was followed by the report of the nominating committee by Mrs. John L. Whitehurst. The polls were open for voting between 10:30 and noon.

At 11 a. m. the first business meeting of Epsilon Sigma Omicron, reading fraternity, was held.

The afternoon session started with a lecture and forum by Dr. Ellery C. Stowell, of the department of political science of American University, on "The New Deal in Foreign Affairs." Commenting on current foreign affairs, Dr. Stowell urged the convention members to study and understand the developments in foreign policies as well as those in the United States.

Prize Winners Named.

Prizes awarded at the Wednesday night session to the fine arts competitors went to Miss Roberta Craig, of the Hytheham Club, for sculpture; Mrs. Anne Campbell Price, for arts and crafts; Mrs. Lillian J. Oldenburg, of the Women's Club of Riverdale, for the best short story; Mrs. Bessie Munson and Miss Susan Campbell, of the Current Topics Club of Riverdale, for the play, "Hollywood Bound."

No competition was held in music, the festival being substituted. The Roland Park Club was awarded the Penny Art Fund prize for the larger club, while the prize to the smaller club was given to the Women's Club of Cottage City.

Dr. Stowell's speech this afternoon was followed by the report of the postal vote on resolutions by Mrs. George W. Young, chairman. The judge of elections, Miss Emilie Doetsch, of Baltimore, reported the election returns. After the adjournment of the convention the delegates and club members were received at the executive mansion by Governor and Mrs. Nice.

Sales of Pulitzer Prize Biography, 'R. E. Lee,' May Never Defray Expenditures in Writing It

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 16.—Although "R. E. Lee," Douglas Southall Freeman's Pulitzer prize biography, is selling "amazingly well," it may never repay its author the expense of its creation.

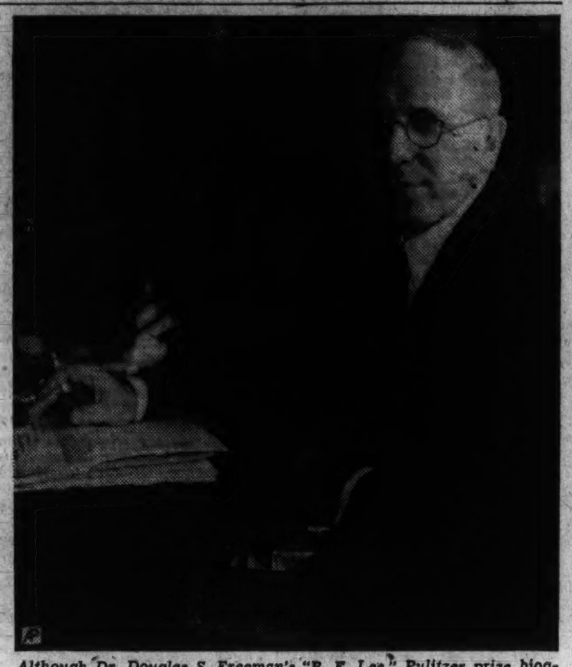
For besides his work as editor of the Richmond (Va.) News Leader, and many important posts in connection with historical and other societies, Dr. Freeman has spent 20 years upon his four-volume story of the Lee career.

He has traveled thousands of miles in quest of material, has spent thousands of dollars in investigation, and has given most of his spare time to his hobby since he first, in 1915, was asked to prepare the "definitive" Lee biography.

The first two of the volumes were published as a "set" October 5, 1934. The remaining two volumes were not released to the public until after the first of the year, but were printed and copyrighted before December 31, according to the publishers, and therefore were eligible for consideration by the Pulitzer awards board.

The scope of the work is indicated by the fact that 84 chapters are devoted to the War Between the States. Mr. Freeman has clarified the mass of material contained in the 84 chapters, however, by carefully maintaining one point of view—that of Lee himself. To illustrate the general's campaigns, 150 maps had to be prepared.

Among the hitherto neglected sources of Lee material examined by Dr. Freeman were the hundreds of papers sent the War Department by Lee before 1861, and his letter book as superintendent of the United States Military Academy, which last produced anecdotes about the scrapes of Lee's own nephew, Fitz Lee, and "Curly" Whistler, who later made his fame with a paint brush rather than an army rifle.



Although Dr. Douglas S. Freeman's "R. E. Lee," Pulitzer prize biography, is selling "amazingly well," he may never recover for the trouble and expense of its preparation. He spent 20 years on the monumental work.

Maps drawn by Lee himself in the Mexican War were found, and a good deal more was learned about Lee's last months in Texas. Hundreds of persons were interviewed, some of them veterans of the war, many more of them descendants of veterans. A large number of Lee's own letters were discovered, and some photographs came to light that had been supposed lost or non-existent, among the latter a photograph of Lee on Traveller, his famous white horse.

Although most of the book is devoted to Lee, the military man, Dr. Freeman has not neglected the years after Appomattox, and especially Lee's years at Washington College, managing the students on one hand and their parents on the other—both difficult at times.

Capital Man Bares Profit In Rum Ring

W. A. Christie Surprise Witness in Norfolk Conspiracy Case.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., May 16.—A surprise Government witness, W. A. Christie, Washington, D. C., real estate dealer, testified in the trial of alleged Franklin County liquor conspirators here today that he transported "cheap Franklin whisky across Virginia to Newport News, Hampton and Phoebus, via Chatham and Richmond.

Naming bootleggers to whom he sold for $6 a gallon mountain whisky for which he paid $1.25 a gallon in 1930-33, Christie, the 142d witness, asserted that he paid "protection" money to Willard R. Hodges, Glade Hill; Will Wray, indicted deputy sheriff, whose niece he said he married, and to Carter Lee, indicted Commonwealth's attorney of the county.

The defense kept him on the stand for 45 minutes, tracing his life since birth in Savannah, Ga., asking particularly for familiar persons and scenes in eastern Virginia, until court was adjourned at 5:15 p. m., and had not yet had an opportunity to delve into his testimony about a liquor "ring" he said existed in Franklin.

Ambush Death Probed.

Meanwhile the Government probed death of T. J. ("Jeff") Richards, deputy, who was shot down in ambush last October near Callaway 17 days before the grand jury convened at Harrisonburg. Aged G. T. Guilliams, who lived near Richards, said that shortly before he was killed, Richards told him that "if he went to the penitentiary" as the result of Government investigation "he'd have company."

Christie said that nine months in every year he averaged three trips a week with 150 to 200 gallons of cheap whisky delivered on "order" to the Eastern places. Never, he said, had he been caught for transporting in Franklin, but a car from which he had unloaded whisky was seized at Hampton.

In Warwick County, near Morrison, Christie said he was buying whisky from a man named Turner and delivered it to several, including a man named Franklin, when James Smith, of Chatham, told him he could get his cargo "cheaper" in Franklin. Smith introduced him to Hodges and he took his first load to a man familiarly known as "the Cap'n" near the Phoebus Soldiers' Home.

"Pay Off" Is Hinted.

The defense took up his activities load by load. The second load was distributed, he said, to a "string" of bootleggers near the soldiers' home and the third to a man named Roberts.

Christie had said that after he got his third or fourth load, Hodges, who kept his liquor in a warehouse behind his filling station, suggested that "if I wanted to be one of the boys I'd have to pay off"—at the rate of $50 per month per car. Hodges "said he gave it to Mr. Lee," the witness declared. Later, he said he met Lee at the filling station, was invited to Lee's office, "and then I paid Mr. Lee."

"The snake doctor" was another man from whom he hauled, and he testified that he carried one load of brandy Wray furnished him to Phoebus in 40 five-gallon tins, bought 20 10-gallon charred kegs in Newport News and sold the brandy as "charred."

Hagerstown Trade Boom Reduces Idle

Engineer Reports Gains in Industry and Agriculture.

By C. B. Carr.
A Staff Correspondent.

Hagerstown, Md., May 16.—Happy days are here again—for Hagerstown.

That is the opinion J. B. Ferguson, president of one of the largest engineering and construction companies in the East, with offices here, expressed today as he reviewed the continuous increase in industrial activity and retail trade in this city of 35,000 people during the last two years.

Ferguson pointed out the prosperous condition which this city is now enjoying. First, and with much elation, he cited the fact that Hagerstown's unemployed population has dwindled almost to the vanishing point with the resumption of normal activities in the railroad shops, silk mills and other industries here.

Labor Is Scarce.

"If I were to look for ten laborers tomorrow morning," Ferguson continued, "I fear that I would be some time locating them. Everyone appears busy here."

Ferguson declares that the demand for labor in Hagerstown has been so great in recent months that hundreds of men and women from nearby Waynesboro and Chambersburg, Pa., have found employment here.

Ferguson, who is president of Hagerstown's Chamber of Commerce, has been in close touch with numerous industries in the city, and reports to him tell of the increased business activity of late. In the shops of the Western Maryland Railway 900 are employed; the Hagerstown Shoe and Legging Co. has 900 at work, with a weekly pay roll of $20,000; 400 are busy at the local plant of the Fairchild Aircraft Corporation; the Pangborne Corporation, manufacturers of sand blowing equipment, has 300 on the job; the silk mills employ about 1,000, and a score of other industries are giving employment to hundreds of others.

Talk with any business man in Hagerstown and he will tell you the same story: "Times are better here." Among the things that were pointed out today as indicative of better business conditions were increases in automobile sales, increase in retail store merchandising, upward trend in newspaper advertising lineage and an increase in the local electric power load.

Tannery Humming.

Williamsport, Md., a thriving town of 2,000 people, a few miles south of here, is also feeling the "business boom." After slack business for several years, the W. D. Byron tannery is under full steam, with 300 workmen employed.

Hagerstown is the center of Washington county, Md., an agricultural section which has for generations been noted for its diversity of products. There are thousands of chickens, hundreds of milch cows, acres of wheat, and carloads of cattle grazing upon green pastures, regarded the best in years because of heavy spring rains.

Morgan Sentenced To Life in Prison; Joy Draws 6 Years

Slayer's Mind Weak, Experts Contend

Jury Deliberates 3 Hrs., Recommends Against Death Penalty.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., May 16.—Circuit court here today closed a case pending since last October by sentencing Charles H. Morgan, 22-year-old farm hand, to life imprisonment for the first-degree murder of John Thomas, 56, colored, and gave George E. Joy, employer of Morgan, six years when he was found guilty of instigating the crime and acting as an accessory.

Morgan was brought to the stand this morning shortly after he had been sentenced and testified that Jay had threatened him unless he killed Thomas.

The murdered Negro was found on a country road near Loveville, 6 miles north of here, last October 22 by his young son. His body was riddled with shotgun charges.

Confessing later, Morgan told of how he was threatened by Joy and later shot Morgan from ambush as he rode along the road on horseback.

Today, Joy denied implication. Testimony brought out that it was rumored Thomas was to have taken over Joy's job as head tenant of the farm where the three men were employed. On the stand, Joy explained that he was "not serious" when he told friends a few weeks before the crime took place that he ought to shoot Thomas.

Although Morgan was not sentenced until this morning, he was adjudged guilty last night after the jury had deliberated three hours. A recommendation of the jury requested the death sentence not be imposed. During yesterday's trial psychiatrists testified that while Morgan could distinguish between right and wrong, he had the "mind of a 13-year-old child."

Ed Howe Sees Need of Dictator

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 16.—Ed. Howe, "the sage of potato hill," is "mad" because he feels England, for which he says he has "never had any love," is "beating us back to prosperity."

"England is ahead of us," asserted the emphatic little Atchison, Kans., editor, now past 80, as he arrived here today for an operation to restore his failing eyesight. "We need some common sense."

"What we need in this country," he asserted, "is a big butter and egg man. If we found one, we'd make him dictator so quick it would make your head swim.

Birth Control Law Supported By Church Unit

Virginia Episcopalians in Stirring Debate at Fredericksburg.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 16.—The Virginia Episcopal diocesan council in final session here today adopted a resolution requesting Congress to "give serious consideration" to pending bills which would legalize dissemination of birth control information through the mails. The vote came after three hours of stirring debate.

The resolution, which was indorsed by action of the 1934 convention, was introduced by the Rev. Robert B. Nelson, Winchester, and was supported on the floor by E. Randolph Williams, Richmond attorney. It was vigorously opposed in a speech by Rev. F. L. Robinson, Cismont, Va., as "against teachings of the Bible and the laws of nature."

Roswell Page, Hanover County made a motion to refer the resolution to the State Legislature for action, but this was voted down.

The council approved the budget of $140,000 for 1936 and "challenge-diocesan" effort to raise $25,000.

The Rev. Beverly D. Tucker, rector of St. Pauls, Richmond, presented a resolution giving vestries authority to fix their own missionary quotas. This was referred to the executive committee of diocesan missionary society.

Another resolution presented by the Rev. Mr. Nelson, calling for indorsement of general convention action favoring Federal supervision of motion pictures, was carried.

Maryland U. Board Will Elect Today

Shriver Expected to Be Renamed Chairman.

Annual election of officers will be held by the University of Maryland board of regents at the organization's regular meeting today at the Fidelity Building, Baltimore.

If the usual custom is followed, the present officers will be re-elected. They include George W. Shriver, executive secretary of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, chairman; John M. Dennis, of Baltimore, treasurer, and Dr. W. W. Skinner, of Kensington, secretary.

President Raymond A. Pearson returned yesterday from a week's trip to Atlantic City and is expected to attend the meeting.

Retailers at Frederick Form an Association

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., May 16.—Business men at a meeting at the Francis Scott Key Hotel last night organized a Retail Merchants Association by the election of the following officers: President, J. Walker Carty; vice president, George B. McCleery; secretary, Joseph H. J. Nestor; treasurer, Ernest Berger; directors, the officers and Dr. C. L. Mullin, Carl Jacobson, James M. Donnan, John M. Culler and Wilbur Seeger. Addresses were made by L. G. Wachter, William B. Bennett and R. Ames Hendrickson.

Writ Issued for Man Dead for 18 Years

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., May 15.—"He departed this life 18 years ago."

This explanation was written on the back of a summons by Deputy Sheriff M. P. Ham when he returned the document to the court here after a 35-mile trip in search of a man.

"The machinery of the law moves slowly, but the ends of justice must be served," was Ham's further comment.

The officer attempted to serve the summons one day this week.

Convicted Killer Faces 5 to 18-Year Sentence

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Webster Springs, W. Va., May 16. Henry Mitchell, 60, against whom a circuit court jury here returned a second-degree murder verdict, faces a penitentiary term of from 5 to 18 years, if a new trial is not granted.

Mitchell was found guilty of shooting to death his son-in-law, William J. Harris, 40, proprietor of a restaurant here, after they had quarreled because Harris refused to give Mitchell a job in the restaurant. He used a rifle, shooting Harris through the heart.

Sheet Erosion Found on 62% Of Virginia Soil

By the Associated Press.

The Soil Erosion Service said yesterday that nearly two-thirds of the land in Virginia is subject to soil erosion. The State-wide survey was part of a national study.

Sheet erosion was found to be active on 15,758,912 acres, or 62.1 per cent of the total area of the State. A total of 14,854,188 acres, or 58.5 per cent, were affected by gullying.

Only 9,351,320 acres, or 36.8 per cent, were found to have little or no erosion.

Serious sheet erosion — where more than three-fourths of the top soil and some subsoil were lost—had damaged 1,009,941 acres and severe gullying was reported for 479,463 acres. The remainder of the area subject to this sort of damage was eroded to lesser degree.

In announcing the results of the survey, which took up various sections of the State in detail, the service called attention to soil conservation demonstration projects covering 175,000 acres on the Bannister and Sandy River watersheds near Chatham, Va.

The Virginia summary follows:

"In the flatwoods section of the southwestern part of the State there is very little erosion because of the comparatively level topography.

"The Chesapeake Bay region and the inner coastal plain have a topography classified as undulating to gently rolling or hilly, the soils being generally sandy, with friable subsoils. Many rolling or steep areas have been cleared and used for clean-tilled crops without adequate protection by terraces, strip cropping or other erosion control methods to slow down the velocity of running water. Consequently, sheet erosion has done widespread damage, and gullying is conspicuous in some localities. The greatest amount of erosion in this region is in central Virginia and in King George and Westmoreland Counties."

"Little Friend," on the Belasco Screen, Offers Familiar Formula of Triangle Drama

Picture's Star Creates Some Doubt of Youth

Film Is Typically British; Local Plans Mature; Theater Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"LITTLE FRIEND.' Gaumont-British presents Nova Pilbeam in a screen adaptation of the novel by Ernest Lothar, with Matheson Lang, Lydia Sherwood, Jimmy Hanley, Arthur Margetson, Jean Cadell, Cecil Parker and Diana Colton. Directed by Berthold Viertel. Reviewed Wednesday afternoon at the Belasco Theater.

I am not reliably informed of the actual age of Nova Pilbeam, who appears in the role of this latest contribution of Gaumont-British to the delectation of screen audiences. I should say, however, that she is older than the camera makes her out.

There is a peculiarly adult attack on the domestic problem which this film presents that rather belies the notion that the star of the picture is a mere child. There are times when she looks to be 40 and then, on the other hand, there are times in the play's development when she looks to be 14. With this obvious flexibility in the matter of years on her side, it is needless to say that Nova Pilbeam gives a completely comprehensive performance.

"Little Friend," unfortunately, does not encompass anything in the way of novelty in the artificial and stilted fashion in which it presents the usual formula of triangle drama, dominated by a child who manages in a cleverly contrived courtroom scene to bring her father and mother back together again, despite the animal fascinations of a popular actor, who seems, for the time being, to have disrupted the home with an entire and all-embracing finality.

England's Shirley Temple.

The courtroom scene is the highlight of the picture. It is well staged, well-set and well acted and serves somewhat to prove further that Miss Pilbeam either is not so young as she is made to appear or that she is the Shirley Temple of England.

The film is characterized throughout its length by strictly British treatment that stamps it indelibly as a release made for the amusement of English rather than American audiences. In the perfection of her intonations, pronunciations and diction, Miss Pilbeam may perhaps best be bracketed with Freddie Bartholomew, star of 'David Copperfield," as one of the most proficient of the younger practitioners of the theater.

It may be that I am doing Nova Pilbeam a distinct injustice by assuming that she is older than the character in which she appears in this screen play. If so, I contend that the misapprehension as to age is in the nature of a compliment. She is a grand little actress whose emotionalisms, quite dominate the developments of a picture that is stolen from her adult associates by the apparently youthful star who occupies a figurative spotlight throughout the movement of a play that lacks as much in originality as it does in inspirational treatment.

Support and Subsidiaries.

Lydia Sherwood, as the mother; Matheson Lang, as the father, and Jean Cadell, as Miss Drew, the nurse, contribute the finest of a long list of helpful supplementary performances.

The bill is completed by a new issue of the Pathe News and a short-reel subject that depicts with almost too much realism the fact that life in the jungle and the wilds is a matter of battle rather than tolerance among the untamed denizens of a world of which we so-called civilians know little.

Mr. Edward de Selding Melcher really did it. I mean to say that when I came away from that 12:15 p. m. broadcast over WJSV yesterday, I stopped by the National Theater lobby and there, sure enough, was my friend Eddie selling ducats like nobody's business. When I inquired at what hour the Wednesday matinee performance might begin, Mr. Melcher replied in his best afternoon paper manner, "At 2:30 o'clock, sir." There were people in line, at the moment, upon whom this false courtesy was not lost. What Mr. Melcher wished to tell me would not at all do in type planned for home and fireside consumption. And do you think I am going to accept Steve Cochran's invitation to sell pasteboards for his Saturday matinee? I am not.

New Ones From Warners.

During the net three months, or the balance of the 1934-35 motion-picture season, screen fans can expect from Warner Brothers 18 of the most imoprtant pictures of the year, according to Jack L. Warner, vice president in charge of all production for Warner Brothers, Cosmopolitan and First National Pictures. The Earle and Metropolitan will present these films in Washington.

"Starting with 'Black Fury,' which stars Paul Muni and Karen Morley," states Mr. Warner, "we have either completed, in work or scheduled for early production 18 features that will be released between now and September 1. These pictures will include drama, musical comedy, romance and farce comedy, all with stellar casts.

"'Black Fury,' which was directed by Michael Curtiz, has been hailed by the entire critical press as the best picture drama in years," continued Mr. Warner.

"Another outstanding hit is 'Oil For the Lamps of China,' a Cosmopolitan production, made from the best-selling novel by Alice Tisdale Hobart and featuring Pat O'Brien and Josephine Hutchinson. Directed by Mervyn LeRoy, 'Oil For the Lamps of China' is a picture of epic proportions, dealing with the adventures of two courageous Americans in the interior of China.

"By far the most important motion picture ever made, in my judgment, and one that will have a far-reaching influence on future picture trends, is 'A Midsummer Night's Dream,' which Prof. Max Reinhardt and Wiliam Dieterle have completed for us. It is now in the cutting room. This picture more than fulfills our fondest expectations, and we are positive it will be acclaimed by the public when seen.

"Miss Glory" Stressed.

"A picture to which we are devoting exceptional care and attention because of its extreme importance is 'Page Miss Glory,' in which Marion Davies will make her debut as a Warner Bros.-Cosmopolitan star, under the direction of Mervyn LeRoy. Miss Davies, who is one of the most popular figures on the screen, will have ample opportunity to display her great talent for comedy and her all-around histrionic ability to the best advantage in 'Page Miss Glory.'

"An outstanding production already completed is 'In Caliente,' teaming Dolores Del Rio and Pat O'Brien in a sparkling, colorful musical comedy romance directed by Lloyd Bacon, with the dance numbers created and directed by Busby Berkeley.

Other productions listed by Mr. Warner include "Alibi Ike," starring Joe E. Brown with Olivia de Haviland; "Dr. Socrates," Paul Muni's next vehicle; Bette Davis in "The Girl from Tenth Avenue;" "Broadway Gondolier," with Dick Powell, Joan Blondell, Adolphe Menjou and many others; "The Goose and the Gander" and "Stranded," two films starring Kay Francis and George Brent; Joe E. Brown in "Broadway Joe," his first screen musical; "Going High Brow," "Dinky," "The Irish in Us," "The Case of the Lucky Legs" and "Serves You Right."

We are quoted at some length in the Hartford, Conn., Daily Times, for no good reason, by "MacHenry," a columnist who occasionally picks up items of prime importance—like the one in which I said Washington is one of the most important theatrical cities in the United States. And I still think it is—and so does Mr. MacHenry, praise be!

Box-Office Bargain.

Two subscription plans are being offered for the forthcoming summer season of the Roadside Theater, Washington's original barn theater, which opens June 17 with Dion Boucicault's "After Dark."

Popular prices again prevail; reserved seats will be 83 and 55 cents.

Season subscriptions for six plays may be obtained for $4.40 (including tax). A second plan, designed particularly for those who spend a month or so out of town, gives any four of the six plays, designated in advance, for $3.00 (tax included). The 55-cent seats are not included in the subscription offers.

Mail orders are now being filled by Richard Creyke, business manager, 3525 R street northwest.

"Goin' to Town" Note.

I'm just coming back!

So what, Mae West?

Minor and Miner's Gal in Films

New Offerings Will Usher In Stars of Note

Miss Barrymore Leads Lot; Oriental at the Gayety; Screen Has Quota.

Ethel Barrymore, one of the native theater's most distinguished stars, will inaugurate a new "guest star" policy at the National Theater on Monday night when she will appear in one of her most notable successes, "The Constant Wife," a vibrant and vigorous drama by W. Somerset Maugham, in which she toured for three seasons.

The subordinant roles will be played by the National Theater Players' usual roster—a complement of actors and actresses that rank with the best and place the National Theater Players a notch above the customary "stock company."

The story of "The Constant Wife" concerns the wife of a prominent London surgeon. She is a woman of exceptional charm and brilliance. She and her husband are happy. And then gossip begins to get in its sinister implications. Further to disclose the plot would be to ruin the suspense of audiences that will be anxious to see Miss Barrymore in the role she made famous.

There will, of course, be the usual matinees on Wednesday and Saturday and the established scale of "little season" prices at the National will not be advanced.

* * * *

Another of the new "gangster" films, approached from the new point of view of the Federal agents, who make crime a hazardous business in this country, will be disclosed on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater beginning tomorrow, when "Let 'em Have It," a Reliance production released through United Artists, will be the chief item of the film bill, with Richard Arlen and Virginia Bruce in the co-featured roles. There is a great deal of the scientific method by which the Department of Justice's agents run down crime revealed in this film—not enough, however, to deprive it of a quick, sure and devastating command of all the elements of melodrama that make for exciting and thrilling entertainment. The story back of the story on the screen is the sensational career of Dillinger. He is not named, but his presence is inescapable. If there had been no John Dillinger, there would have been no "Let 'em Have It," any more than there would have been a "G Men." The bill will be concluded by short sound subjects of the first rank.

"Black Fury," one of the most admirably concocted screen plays of the year, will be presented on the screen at the Earle Theater, beginning tomorrow, with Paul Muni in the stellar role. This is a subject that both literally and figuratively, presents the somber case of the under dog. It abounds in thrills and presents only a slightly distorted view of a situation that actually existed in a foreign coal field. The star is given splendid support by Karen Morley, J. Carroll Naish, Vince Barnett, Barton MacLane and many others of note. The stage portion of the entertainment will be headlined by Henny Meroff and his orchestra and a long list of contributing artists who add to the effectiveness of his revue.

* * * *

On the screen at Loew's Fox Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, the principal player will be that diminutive parcel of dynamite known, pictorially, as Shirley Temple, who will be seen in the title role of "Our Little Girl." Joel McCrea, Lyle Talbot, Erin O'Brien Moore, Jack Donahue, Gus Van and Poodles Hannaford are importantly cast in the supporting ensemble. On the stage the living bill will be headlined by Venita Gould, one of America's foremost impressionists, who brings to the theater a ponderable list of sterling impersonations that place her on a par with Cecilia Loftus, Elsie Janis, Ina Claire and others who have made their mark by the skill of their imitations of contemporary stars. Other vaudeville acts and a typical Phil Lampkin overture, combined with the Fox Movietone News, will complete the program.

"Laddie," the screen version of the Gene Stratton Porter novel of the same name, frequently before announced for Washington release, will be shown as the foremost feature of the bill at the Metropolitan Theater, beginning tomorrow. The prinsipal roles are played by John Beal, Gloria Stuart, Willard Robertson and Virginia Weidler, a juvenile actress, who here takes

Two Justices Fined For Fight Over Fees

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., May 16.—Trial magistrate Charles R. Warren has noted an appeal from a fine of $5 which was imposed on him for engaging in a fight with J. O. Faison, another justice, several days ago.

Faison also was fined. They engaged in a dispute over fees which Faison claimed were due him for issuing warrants.

Movie Boners

Hollywood, May 16.

THE picture critic in News-Week in his review of "Les Miserables" writes: "Fans who delight in finding flaws can have fun with 'Les Miserables.' Aside from the parts where the film strays noticeably from the text, several errors stand out. In a long scene between March and an old woman in the pouring rain, plenty of studio showers descend. But neither gets wet." The person who sent in this clipping is Gregg Toland. Mr. Toland is the cameraman who filmed this picture, and he writes: "Let me beat your boner fans to this one. They are quite right in stating that Mr. March and the old woman were out on a rainy night, and that neither got wet . . . But, they should notice that Mr. March is seated under a tree, which is visible in the fuller shot, and the tree, of course, shelters him. After all, when it's raining one gets some sort of protection."

But a tree is only a tree and not a very good umbrella, and some of that studio rain should have been turned on when March was under the tree so he could get wet.

In "Star at Midnight," claims Norman Reinhardt, Ralph Morgan, disguised as a woman, enters the room and speaks to William Powell. It is distinctly the undisguised voice of a woman speaking. Yet when Morgan is unmasked a minute later, they would have you believe that it was he who was speaking all the time.

So, Mr. Reinhardt doesn't believe what those advertisements used to preach: That it's fun to be fooled.

THE activities of the G Men and the doings of the Department of Justice are exploited in that fine exciting flicker, "G Men," but Ben Cohn believes that they've got an important factor all wrong and make the D. O. J. appear a bit foolish.

He refers to that sequence in which the expert finishes his calibrations and asks his assistant to go through the files for the print having that particular classification. The assistant reports that it is not in the files. Then, James Cagney suggests that they bring out the personal file of one Liggett, whom Cagney suspects as the trigger man. The fingerprint from the gun matches Liggett's.

Now, insists Cohn, all fingerprints are classified in one master file or there would be no point in keeping them. If the Department of Justice had Liggett's fingerprints in the first place, the assistant would have found them in the master file.

It would be interesting to hear from a genuine G man about this flicker. He could tell us the facts.

* * * *

A boner that practically every flicker pulls, when it has a New York jury sequence, is seen by Max Marans in Barbara Stanwyck's picture, "The Woman in Red." There is supposed to be a courtroom scene toward the end of the picture, and it shows a jury composed of both men and women. As the trial takes place in a town in Long Island, Says Mr. Marans, the director should know that in New York State there aren't any women on a jury. When a New York jury goes into the room to confer, you can hang up the shingle reading, "Men."

* * * *

WILLIAM POWELL is giving orders to Farina, who is dressed in a jockey's outfit, and telling him how to ride and win the race on Powell's horse, Mona, in the flicker, "Reckless." The horse doesn't win the race, but comes in second, and Harry Green—no relation to the movie actor—doesn't object to that, but he does object to the fact that the horse comes in second with a white jockey atop her. Mr. Green says that he didn't expect Farina, the actor, to ride the horse, but why didn't they substitute a colored jockey to do the riding. Anyway, this is what Harry Green claims he saw.

In "Clive of India," writes Maj. Arthur De Bles, the British flag carried in the battle is the present one, not that used prior to 1800, when the Cross of St. Patrick was added to it.

Clark Gable in "After Office Hours," phoned Constance Bennett, and she answers the telephone even though she was in another house at the time, says Lillian Emerson. A nice trick, even if you can't do it.

* * * *

George Arliss in "Cardinal Richelieu" asks Cesar Romero for the name of the girl he loves and, writes Ruth Dulerasky, Romero says he does not know it as he has only met her once. Yet when the girl he loves—Maureen O'Sullivan—walks into the room, he calls her by her name.

In "Rhumba," insists Ruth Roozef, the partner of George Raft faints just before the show stars. Instead of an understudy going on, the lady he loves—Carole Lombard—leaves the audience and rushes to the stage to do the dance with him. Now, if it were a Warner flicker, it would be the understudy who rushes on. Then a big Busby Berkley number would be on, and the understudy would do nothing and be the hit of the show. The trouble with those Warner musicals is that they really believe the show must go on.

Tigers, Aided by Nats' Six Errors, Coast to 7-to-2 Victory

Nine Fanned By Bridges' Pitching

Nats' Rally Mildly and Escape Shutout in 9th; 2,000 Watch.

By Shirley L. Povich.

SWINGING in the rain, tra la, the Nats hit a new low yesterday when they defeated themselves in a completely successful suicidal exhibition by the convincing score of 7 to 2.

The Detroit Tigers, who had the good fortune to be in town, got credit for the victory. The Nats started burrowing toward defeat in the early innings when they achieved their first four errors and they were not to be denied. They made it an even half-dozen by the end of the eighth and the Tigers had a 5-0 lead as unearned as a Kentucky colonelcy.

The 2,000 in the stands who braved the cold and the drizzles sat in on two record-breaking feats. The nine Nats who surrendered to Tommy Bridges, of the Tigers, on strikeouts lifted Bridges to a new season's record along those lines, and the six errors they contributed earned the Nats another season's record of dubious distinction.

Hadley Innocent Victim.

The innocent victim of it all was Bump Hadley, who pitched himself an eight-hit game despite the betrayals by his mates and who should have been locked in a scoreless duel with Bridges going into the ninth, when the Tigers scored their only earned runs.

Bridges was in possession of a four-hit shut-out going into the ninth when the Nats rallied Kuhel and Cecil Travis of the Nats runs, bu he was merely coasting after the Nats had presented him with the bulk of the Tigers' 5-0 lead. Whenever the Nats threatened, Bridges took a hitch in his belt and struck out a Nat or two. He fanned the side in the seventh.

In defeat, Johnny Stone, Joe Kuehl and Cecil Travis of the Nats were outstanding. In fact, they were men apart. They alone failed to contribute an error to the Detroit cause. The others—Buddy Myer, Cliff Bolton, Red Kress, Jake Powell, Heinie Manush and Hadley himself were all guilty of misplays.

Myer's Boot is Costly.

Capt. Buddy Myer led off with the first boot of the game and it inspired two Detroit runs in the second inning. Myer muffed Goslin's grounder and Rogell hit into a force play, but Gerald Walker drove Rogell to third with a single through a spot just vacated by Red Kress, who anticipated an attempted steal. Then the Nats began to double up on the errors. As Walker and Rogell did attempt a double theft, Cliff Bolton threw the ball into center field, and Rogell scored. Walker continued to third and came home standing up when Powell heaved the ball wide of Travis, into the Tigers' dugout. The recapitulation for the inning showed one Detroit hit and three errors.

Red Kress' two-base wild throw

Annapolis, Md., May 16.—The Naval Academy will be host to President Franklin D. Roosevelt on May 25, when the Adams Cup race will bring the Academy, Harvard and Pennsylvania Universities into competition.

Admiral David Foote Sellers, superintendent of the Academy, will entertain the President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Ruth Denies Washed-Up Stories

Reports of Retirement, Friction With Scribes, Fans Rankle Babe.

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, May 16.—The boys began nodding George Herman Ruth out of organized baseball again today, much to the digust of the Babe, who emphatically insisted the rumored retirement was based on nothing more than a bothersome head cold.

Obvously rankled by New York reports that he was on his final road trip as a ball player, the one time sultan of swat walked up from the train sheds at the St. Louis station tonight, proclaiming, "There's not a word of truth in the New York story. I have a cold but I'm feeling better and am in fine shape."

The 41-year-old Boston boy denied authorship of the sentence attributed to him in New York, "I'm all washed up," and countered with "I'm going to play tomorrow and keep right on playing as long as I have anything left."

Teammates Back Babe.

Ruth and his new teammates, the Boston Braves, open a series here tomorrow with the Cardinals. The teammates rallied to the Babe, who has made only four showings this season, and predicted that when the weather warms a little Ruth will strike something like his own stride.

"Where the New York writers got their information about the Boston fans 'riding me' I don't know," the Babe said.

"I've never heard an undue remark from a Boston fan. They always give me a good welcome and the writers, not only in Boston but all over the country, have been exceptionally kind to me. It seems to me that everyone is pulling for the Ol' Babe."

Ruth, however, evaded any direct comment on his future as a manager of the Boston Braves, a career he has been expected to launch next season. He insisted he had not given a thought to taking charge of the Braves while Bill McKechnie, the present pilot, is on the bridge. "You won't see me taking somebody's job away from him," he remarked.

Evades Managerial Question.

He would not say that he would not manage the Braves, but made it positive that he was not looking for McKechnie's job. "When my playing days are over it will be time enough to make public what my future will be," and the Babe turned sentimental.

But Ruth left himself a loophole in case he doesn't emerge from under the weather as rapidly as he would like. "I will say that I have not been myself by a whole lot so far this spring, and, unless I am able to shake the present cold that has severely handicapped me for several weeks, there is a possibility

Tamulis Star; Yanks Blank Tribe, 10-0

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 16.—The Yankees came home from the West today to a chilly reception from both the weather and 5,000 fans. They were red-hot themselves, though, as the young southpaw, Vito Tamulis, held the second-place Cleveland Indians helpless while the rest of the Yanks belted them around, 10 to 0.

The victory provided a nice welcome for Manager Joe McCarthy, who returned to the Yankee bench after a siege of influenza which put him out of action May 1, just before the Yanks started their Western trip. Heavily bundled up in a woolen vest and a windbreaker, McCarthy resumed active direction of the club. Art Fletcher had been acting manager.

Dickey Paces Attack.

Willis Hudlin, Thorn Lee and Clint Brown all looked alike to the Yankees, who have been struggling for base hits ever since the season started. Bill Dickey led the way with four, two of them doubles, another a triple, in the 15-hit assault. Ben Chapman got a homer and a double; Tony Lazzeri, Myril Hoag, and Earle Combs a couple of hits each, as the Yanks began to look themselves once more.

It was young Tamulis' third straight victory against no defeats.

Big Ab Wright, stuck in right field because Bruce Campbell hasn't been hitting, added a double and two singles to the homer and triple he got against Washington yesterday. Lou Berger, the young second baseman everybody feared couldn't hit, got two singles. Earl Averill got the rest of the Indians' hits, a double and single.

Stadium Control Given To Turner and Ahearn

By Bill McCormick.

THE fistic firm of Joe Turner and Goldie Ahearn yesterday was granted complete control of all boxing at Griffith Stadium for this summer, as all indications pointed toward the biggest outdoor season south of New York for the Capital.

In granting exclusive boxing rights at the ball park to the promoter and matchmaker who landed the Canzoneri-Klick bout and many other naturals for the coming season, Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington ball club, stressed the fact that only outstanding fights would be held.

"Turner and Ahearn will hold shows not oftener than twice a month," Griffith said. "Not that often unless they can book really important contests. There will be no bouts in the park this summer that are not of national importance or of exceptionally great local interest."

Not Open to All.

Prior to the new agreement between Griffith and the Turner-Ahearn combine, the Stadium was available to any promoter who could convince Griffith that he had a good boxing card and who would pay the necessary rental. Under the present arrangement, the ball park will not be rented to any promoter without the consent of the Turner organization. It is generally believed that Turner will not grant this permission, but will insist on staging all boxing bouts at the Stadium himself.

The first outdoor show to be presented by Turner and Ahearn will be a 10-round rematch between Buck Everett and Natie Brown scheduled for May 27. Everett defeated Brown in a recent thriller at the Auditorium, but many are of the opinion that he caught Natie at a time when he was not in the best of condition.

Everett, who has been in Gray,

Hagerstown's Turf 'Strike' Thwarted

Special Dispatch to The Post.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., May 16.—The ten-day spring racing meet of the Hagerstown Fair Association, scheduled to start next Tuesday, will be held, and the purses will not be increased from $300 to $400 as demanded by a group of horsemen in a petition presented to the fair association at a meeting this afternoon, General Manager Harold F. Bester announced tonight following a meeting. Earlier the horsemen had threatened to shift to Charles Town if their demands were not met.

As a precaution, both for the protection of property and for persons who might have shown sympathy with the stand of the association, three policemen were stationed at the Fair Grounds tonight, Bester announced.

Approved by Chairman.

Bester announced that the action the fair board had taken tonight had the approval of Jervis Spencer, jr., chairman of the Maryland Racing Commission, who was communicated with after this afternoon's meeting with the horsemen.

The Fair Association, which has a sizable debt contracted over a long period of years, is unable to increase the purses, said Bester. "When the dates for the Hagerstown spring meet were approved by

Duke Is Host At Southern Tourney

All Schools Represented by 148 Athletes in Conference Meet.

Widmyer, Guckeyson, Everett Among Stars Trying for Records.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

DURHAM, N. C., May 16.—One hundred and forty-eight athletes from the ten member institutions of the Southern Conference pound the cinders of Duke stadium track here tomorrow in the preliminaries of the thirteenth annual track and field meet of Dixie's major sports loop. Tomorrow's program gets under way at 2:30 o'clock, while Saturday's championship finals will start at 1:30 o'clock.

Signifying that a 100 per cent attendance has again been reached, flags of each of the conference schools will fly from the poles of Duke stadium. North Carolina's 35-strong squad is the largest and State's one member—Milan Zori—team is the smallest.

Seven Stars Watched.

The annual meet has increased in national importance rapidly in the past three years. Last year, for the first time, there were four performers being watched by the Nation's track experts. Tomorrow and Saturday, seven will be watched by those same experts.

Those "big shots" of the meet are Earl Widmyer and Bill Guckeyson of Maryland; Harry Williamson and Frank Abernethy of North Carolina; Grover Everett of Virginia; Milan Zori, of N. C. State, and Ed West of Duke.

Scoring Starts Saturday.

Trials will be staged tomorrow in the 100 and 220 yard dashes, the high and low hurdles, the 440 and 880 yard runs, the discus, javelin, broad jump and shot put. Eight runners will qualify in each of the dashes, ten in each of the field events and in the 440 and 880, and six each in the high and low hurdles.

While the scoring does not start until Saturday's finals, all records made in the trials tomorrow will be official and each team will be striving to send as many performers as possible into the championship rounds on Saturday.

The 1935 meet has attracted the largest number of entries in four years and track experts such as Coaches Bob Fetzer of North Carolina and Carl Voyles of Duke predict the meet to be the best in the history of the Southern organization.

The team championship promises to be the greatest on record, with North Carolina, Duke and Maryland in a three-way battle for top honors. Clemson is sending the 15-man team which won the South Carolina State title and the Tigers should be well up in the running.

Helped by recent rains, Duke Stadium track will be in the best of shape for the meet and should respond to the efforts of the crack individual to "dig out" some new records in the various events. Many

Little's Spectacular 71 Proves Readiness for British Amateur

By the Associated Press.

ST. ANNE'S-ON-THE-SEA, England, May 16.—Reaching the peak of his form again, just before they start shooting for keeps, W. Lawson Little, British and American amateur golf champion, gave England a painful vision of another Prestwick today by touring the Royal Lytham course, where the British amateur championship will be played next week, in a spectacular round of 71 today. Par for the short but tricky layout is 69.

Playing with the Scot, Jock McLean, the man everybody says Little will have to beat if he successfully defends his title, the husky American shot the day's best round despite two penalty strokes.

Although the club secretary claims the Royal Lytham course par is 69, Little's score under American rules figures one under perfect figures. Three of the course's "par four" holes measure well over 450 yards.

"It's a par 72 as far as I'm concerned," said Little.

Still not quite satisfied with his form, the Californian went around again this afternoon in 75 and then practiced an hour and a half.

The other members of the American contingent continued to find the course puzzling. Richard M. Chapman, of Greenwich, Conn., had a presentable 75, but Harvey Shaffer, of New York, soared to a 78, and Dan R. Topping, also of Greenwich, had to be content with an 80. The others went over that figure.

Another English Stake Taken by Lord Derby

Newmarket, Eng., May 16 (AP).—Lord Derby's Fairhaven won the Payne Stakes over the Derby, distance of a mile and a half here today. Fairhaven was a length and a half in front of Mrs. Corlette Glorney's Assignation. Marshall Field's J. R. Smith was third.

The winner started at 9 to 4, Assignation at 11 to 8 and J. R. Smith at 100 to 8.

Gentle Knight, Hanford Up, Winner of Rockingham Feature

Scores Over Polydorus In Debut

By the Associated Press.

ROCKINGHAM PARK, Salem, N. H., May 16.—Ol' Bill Flemming, the gentlemen who spent the best years of his life riding in a sulky, served notice on owners of running horses today that he intends to play as important a part in the running game as he did with trotters.

His 4-year-old bay horse, Gentle Knight, with Carl Hanford up, won the Concord Claiming Purse this afternoon, the feature race of the day's program, and won it with such ease as to indicate that a horseman is a horseman, whether he be connected with runners or trotters.

Victory No Fluke.

There was no fluke connected with the victory of the Flamming horse. He won the 6-furlong feature every yard of the way, beat back the surges of the Darb and Chinese Express and rammed his way down the home stretch, a winner all the way.

Percy M. Pike's Polydorus, with Johnny Longden up, finished second, 2½ lengths to the rear, and the best The Darb could do was finish in the show spot.

Gentle Knight paid $14.60, $7 and $4.10; Polydorus, $5 and $3.20, and The Darb a meager $3.10.

A crowd estimated at 7,500 enjoyed the races in balmy, summerlike weather, as a further indication that New England will have its wildest and wooliest horse racing season in history.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GLYNDON BELLE, $15.10, $6.60, $5.30; WIZARD, $3.90, $3.10; KOWTOW, $4.00.

GLYNDON BELLE, restrained early, moved around on the outside leaving the back stretch, went to the front without effort and held away through the stretch run. WIZARD, well placed all the way, closed with good energy. KOWTOW, sent into contention in the opening quarter-mile, held on well in the drive. TWENTY KARAT, hard hustled from the start, displayed early speed. She weakened in the closing drive. LOVE LOST, a prominent factor early, supplanted TWENTY KARAT from the command only to falter in the last three-sixteenths. JOE MAC made up some ground through the late stages. STARRY NIGHT had early speed, but ran out on the stretch turn and was eased through the final furlongs.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:50. Off at once. Winner, F. Coppa's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CAERLEON, $42.50, $17.80, $8.20; IDLE ALONG, $6.00, $4.20; ALWINTOUR, $3.80.

CAERLEON worked his way into contention steadily after leaving the back stretch, came to the outside for the run through the stretch and, closing in determined fashion, was up in the closing few strides. IDLE ALONG, reserved early, assumed a short lead in the stretch and fought it out gamely to the end. ALWINTOUR displayed good speed in pacemaking, withstood several bids from FRED ALMY and weakened in the last furlong. FRED ALMY, rated along in close attendance of the pace, was unable to improve his position when called upon. FLOWERY LADY moved up threateningly nearing the stretch and closed with good energy.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:23. Off at 3:25. Winner, B. B. Stable's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ZULU LAD, $10.80, $5.30, $4.10; STAROGAN, $5.90, $4.80; IMMUNE, $4.80.

ZULU LAD, under slight restraint early, was placed under vigorous handling all through the stretch and, brought to the outside, closed in courageous fashion. STAROGAN, a prominent factor throughout and in hand until straightened out in the stretch, fought it out gamely. IMMUNE displayed good speed for the first half mile though unable to keep pace when challenged. TODY CON, forwardly placed for the first half-mile, weakened slightly thereafter. CANCEL was never a serious threat, racing far back all the way.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:53. Off at 3:53½. Winner, P. M. Pike's ch. m. (8), by King Gorin—Parley. Trained by T. Horning. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:14 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MILD, $28.20, $11.60, $6.10; VEE EIGHT, $5.50, $3.60; CABOUSE, $5.10.

MILD, slow to settle into his best stride, found clear sailing when making her move on the outside in the last five-sixteenths, came with good speed through the stretch, and wore down VEE EIGHT inside the last sixteenth. VEE EIGHT, strained in close attendance of the pace for the first half-mile, drew into a good lead and, despite being placed under brisk handling, was unable to cope with the superior late speed of the winner. CABOUSE, in hand for the first half-mile, finished going gamely when placed under punishment in the last quarter-mile.

FIFTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. The Concord. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, ridden out. Went to post at 4:22. Off at 4:22½. Winner, Golden Rod Stable's b. c. (4), by Sir Gallahad III—Nimba. Trained by W. R. Flemming. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:46 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GENTLE KNIGHT, $14.60, $7.00, $4.10; POLYDORUS, $5.00, $3.20; THE DARB, $3.10.

GENTLE KNIGHT went to the front in the opening quarter-mile, continued to race along front while slightly restrained, and drew out through the final furlong. POLYDORUS moved up on the outside and continued determinedly to the end, was unable to keep pace, though offering a bold bid nearing the furlong pole. THE DARB moved up steadily rounding out of the back stretch, saved ground at the stretch turn, but was unable to reach the leading pair under pressure. CHINESE EMPRESS was well through the stretch. GOLDEN FATE, outrun for the first three furlongs, gave improved speed throughout the stretch to close some ground. CUTIE FACE faltered after a brief display of speed.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:51. Off at 4:52½. Winner, Mrs. P. A. Shaw's ch. f. (4), by Macaw—Guilfinn. Trained by C. Pollard. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48 2-5, 1:13 4-5, 1:41 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—YAP, $58.20, $22.40, $7.60; GENERAL LEJEUNE, $4.90, $3.10; ANNARITA, $3.30.

YAP had speed from the start, fought it out for the command with ADAMITE, went into a good lead when the latter began tiring, but was under punishment all the last furlong and was never threatened. GENERAL LEJEUNE, never far from the pace, went up gradually, challenged for the command nearing the stretch, but was not good enough for the winner. ANNARITA, in hand for six furlongs, came with rush in the final quarter-mile. PLAYFUL MARTHA closed some ground on the outside through the stretch. ST. OMER was unable to improve his position. ADAMITE showed speed briefly, but weakened.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:23. Off at 5:23. Winner, Miss A. Doris' b. m. (6), by Axenstein—Duncecap. Trained by H. L. Campbell. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:48 3-5, 1:13 4-5, 1:40 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOOCAP, $9.00, $4.10, $3.00; POPO, $3.10, $2.40; ZEMBLA, $3.70.

BOOCAP, under stout restraint for the first half-mile, went to the front without effort and drew out in the stretch run. POPO, prominently placed all the way, continued courageously to the end. ZEMBLA, as usual, trailed far back early, but came with a rush at the end and was up in the last stride to wear down ATMOSPHERE. The latter moved up fast on the inside entering the back stretch when JUDGE PEAK bore out. He was unable to maintain his advantage and was unable to improve his position. JAMES BOY dropped back soon after the start and was unable to enter into serious contention. JUDGE PEAK had early speed, but quit.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:53. Off at 5:56. Winner, W. A. Jones' ch. g. (4), by Canter—Wrackellette. Trained by G. L. Hamilton. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:25, 0:48 4-5, 1:14 2-5, 1:41 2-5, 1:48 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STEPBROTHER, $41.30, $17.20, $8.00; PASS, $4.10, $2.80; FOREIGN LADY, $4.70.

STEPBROTHER improved his position steadily, wore down PASS when reaching the stretch and continued determinedly to the end. PASS took command in the run to the first turn, was rated along under slight restraint and, despite fighting it out courageously to the end, was unable to withstand the bid of the winner. FOREIGN LADY was a forward factor all the way. BUNGALOW made up some ground. WAR TIDE, in closest attendance of the pace for the first five furlongs, weakened after leaving the back stretch. MATHIAS, well placed for the first half-mile, faltered thereafter. OUR PAL was outrun throughout.

Miss Claytor and Mrs. McGinty Clash Today in Post Golf Finals

Chevy Chase Star Plays 42 Holes

By Dave Herman.

MISS LOUISE CLAYTOR, of Chevy Chase Club, who kept in trim for her golfing wars this winter by playing squash, played 42 holes of golf yesterday at Congressional Country Club, and at the end of this marathon journey was rewarded with a place in the finals of The Washington Post match play handicap tournament.

Her flaming red hair waving in the gentle breezes that swept the lengthy course all day Miss Claytor, an eight handicap player, defeated Mrs. Betty Meckley, Indian Spring star, and former District champion, 2 and 1, in 36 holes in her morning match, and in the afternoon semifinals eliminated the tourney sensation, Mrs. Will Masten, of Washington Golf and Country Club, 3 ad 2.

This morning at 9:35 Miss Claytor, one of Chevy Chase's best young golfers, will meet Mrs. George B. McGinty, of Columbia, an 18 handicap player, for The Post championship won last season by Mrs. Roland Mackenzie.

Mrs. McGinty, whose golf career is not quite three years old, negotiated the "suicide rounds" successfully by conquering Mrs. Howard Simons, of Manor, 12 handicap, 5 and 4, and Mrs. J. J. McCarthy, of Congressional, 16 handicap, 3 and 2.

Reaching the consolations were Mrs. Mackenzie and Mrs. F. G. Awalt, of Congressional, who will clash at 9:30. Mrs. Mackenzie won from Mrs. C. P. Clark, of Army-Navy, and Mrs. E. M. Amick, of Columbia, and Mrs. Awalt from Mrs. Gil Hahn, Woodmont, and Miss Susan Hacker, of Chevy Chase.

Forty-two holes of golf were enough to sap the strength of any masculine golf star, much less a woman, but not Miss Louise Claytor. This set a District feminine record for one day of competitive golf, and is believed to be close to a national mark inasmuch as Miss Claytor had to travel eight extra holes in her morning conquest of Mrs. Meckley.

The match between Miss Claytor and Mrs. Meckley, who had to spot her opponent four strokes for the first 18 and seven for the 36, easily was best in the tournament. An analysis shows that Miss Claytor took advantage of these strokes on six of the seven holes allotted her.

Mrs. Meckley staged a great comeback after being 3 down to Miss Claytor at the turn. The Indian Spring star lost the tenth to become 4 down, but unleashed a barrage of pars, scoring a 4 for a win on the eleventh, and a 3 on the twelfth. She halved the thirteenth in five with an allotted stroke for Miss Claytor, parred the short fourteenth for a win, won the fifteenth and sixteenth to go 1 up, and lost the seventeenth to a par 4. They halved the eighteenth.

On the extra nine, Mrs. Meckley managed to win but one hole, the twenty-second, that in par. Miss Claytor took the nineteenth with her handicap stroke, the twenty-third with her handicap stroke after both had scored 5s, won the twenty-fifth to a 5, and the twenty-sixth, where both got 6s and Miss Claytor was alloted a stroke.

Mrs. Meckley covered the first 18 in 45—39—84. She was only 2 over par on the back nine.

Miss Claytor didn't show any signs of tiring after that grueling morning match. She gave away 9 strokes to Mrs. Masten, took a 2-up lead at the turn, and won the fifteenth and sixteenth in 5s to salt away the verdict. Mrs. Masten eliminated Mrs. Jack Scott, Congressional, 1 up, in a surprise morning victory.

Mrs. Eugene Meyer, wife of the publisher of The Washington Post, will present the trophy and be guest of honor at the dinner-celebration at 1 p. m. at Congressional today.

License Is Awarded Deep Run Horse Show

Richmond, May 16 (AP).—Licensed today by the American Horse Show Association, the Deep Run Hunt Club completed preparatory arrangements for its fifteenth annual horse show, May 24 and 25, featuring two night performances under giant floodlights.

Announcement that the club had been awarded the American Horse Show license was made by Dr. E. T. Trice, chairman of the show committee, who said the entry list would close Saturday night, with a goodly number of entries already received.

Stevinson and Lunn Beaten In Tourney

Dettweiler, Greene, Otell, Sutherland Survive at Chevy Chase.

TWO favorites, Dick Lunn, of Chevy Chase, a former winner, and Miller B. Stevinson, of Columbia, who set the pace in the qualifying round with his 73, were abruptly eliminated in the Chevy Chase Invitation Golf Tournament yesterday.

Neither got past the morning match, Lunn falling before a clubmate, W. Beverly Mason, jr., last year's finalist, 4 and 3, and the veteran Stevinson before Johnny Brawner, also of Chevy Chase, 6 and 5.

Both Mason and Brawner, however, felt the sting of defeat in their afternoon battles, and into the semifinals marched Billy Dettweiler, 17-year-old Congressional star; Maj. Dick Sutherland, of Army and Navy; Dr. Larry S. Otell, of Congressional, and Hickman Greene, the little Manor flash.

Dettweiler, clicking off a 74, put out Mason, 2 and 1, with a closing rush, and the Army siege gun, Sutherland, delivered the knockout blow to Brawner in a stirring 19-hole match—the only overtime duel of the championship flight.

Otell Downs Overton.

Otell also had to summon to his aid some of his old-time cunning to eliminate the Baltimore threat, Spencer Overton, 1 up, and Greene blasted out a victory over Craig McKee, of Indian Spring, 2 and 1.

At 10 this morning, Dettweiler tackles Maj. Sutherland and five minutes later Otell takes on Greene. The finals will start at 2 p. m.

of White's grounder in the third, the Nats' fourth error, was offset by a double play, but the Tigers boosted their lead to 3 to 0 in the seventh with the aid of a wild throw by Hadley. With Walker on first, Hadley heaved Owens' bunt against the right-field boxes, and all hands were safe with Walker on third. A walk to Bridges filled the bases, but Kress' throw on White's grounder nipped Walker at home. Owen, however, scored from third on Cochrane's fly.

Manush Makes One.

The Nats had another error left in their system for the eighth, however. Greenberg walked and Goslin singled sharply to left. Heinie Manush failed to bend low enough, however, and the ball trickled through his legs and rolled to the fence as Greenberg galloped home.

All of this time Bridges was toying with the Nats despite five bases on balls. He struck out Buddy Myer three times and Red Kress twice. Jake Powell, with two singles, had accounted for half of the Nats' hits during the first eight inings, but when a hit meant a run the Nats didn't have it.

The game went legitimate in the ninth when each side scored a pair of deserved runs, but it only broke the monotony.

Old Tom Zachary Shuts Out Pirates

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, May 16.—Tom Zachary, the canny Brooklyn left-hander, got the better of Waite Hoyt in an overtime mound duel between a pair of veterans today, and the second-place Brooklyn Dodgers emerged with a 13-inning 2-to-0 triumph over the Pirates.

The two old timers, both of whom once pitched for the New York Yankees, put on a great display of elbowing over the long route. The Pirates had a 12-to-9 edge in the hitting, but after weathering trouble in the first inning Zachary didn't allow the Buccos to put together two hits in one inning until the twelfth. His deceptive slants had the Pirate plasterers, who slammed out 20 runs against the Phillies yesterday, lunging and groaning without effect all afternoon.

Hoyt was even better until an error by Arky Vaughan started the Stengel Clan off on its winning rally in the thirteenth.

ASHAWAY FISHING LINES

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

LEST I be reminded that rodents are the first to desert a sinking ship, I make haste to repeat that my faith in the Nats as a pennant threat was something less than abiding from the outset. Ahem, and now then: The Nats apparently do not have what it takes to win ball games with the necessary frequency.

POVICH.

I am throwing that pathetic exhibition of yesterday, when the boys came through nobly for the Tigers with six errors, out of the reckoning. The Nats aren't that kind of a ball club. They don't figure to lose games that way. Defensively, Bucky Harris' team qualifies as a serious pennant contender. If every other phase of their play measured up to their defense there would be no excuse for this piece.

But, unhappily, the club's hitting and pitching have been sadly deficient. At this writing, the Nats bear a marked resemblance to the futility of Joe Cronin's team that finished seventh last year. Bucky Harris' pitching staff, no great shucks as pitching staffs go, has had a rough road made no easier by the failure of the club to hit consistently. In only two games this season has a Washington pitcher been able to coast:

Four shut-outs among their 12 defeats are no flattering commentary on the Nats' punch at the plate. And it was a team that figured to hit. Such as Heinie Manush, Buddy Myer, Cliff Bolton, Cecil Travis, Johnny Stone and Joe Kuhel figured to remove Bucky Harris' hitting worries, but at this writing not one of the lot can claim a .300 percentage. In their last three games the Nats have averaged 4 2-3 hits.

Getting down to cases, the Nats are handicapped by a regular shortstop who is hitting .188; a catcher not too nimble around the plate or on the base paths, who is batting .284, and a pitching staff that numbers only three worthwhile risks. Red Kress, who has lately relieved Lyn Lary at the shortstop position, is whacking the ball for the highly unimpressive average of .192.

It is not difficult to absolve Bucky Harris of any blame that may be attached to the Nats' lowly estate. With the material he has at hand, Harris has given a 100 per cent performance. Not a tactical error can be charged against him in these first 23 games of the season. His timing of pitching reinforcements and his choices have been uncannily correct.

His three regular pitchers, Earl Whitehill, Bobby Burke and Bump Hadley, have provided Harris with a brand of hurling that would find the Nats near the top of the league had the team been hitting. In every case except one, where Harris started a fourth pitcher out of sheer necessity, the Nats have been beaten. Monte Weaver, Ed Linke and Walter Stewart all failed to come through.

One of these bright days, a desperate Bucky Harris is going to give young Henry Coppola a starting assignment, despite his brief experience. Coppola may hold the answer to Harris' prayers for a fourth pitcher, or Ed Linke may soon justify Harris' hopes, but at this writing, the Nats are operating with virtually a three-man pitching staff.

UP in his stucco office overlooking the turnstiles there is another party to the Nats' woes. Clark Griffith has not seen fit to separate himself from more than $20,000 of the 250 grand he received from the Red Sox in the Joe Cronin deal last summer, despite Harris' obvious need of help. Since the season started, Griffith has made one deal, an outright swap involving no cash, that brought untried Belve Bean to the Nats in exchange for a fading veteran pitcher.

At a luncheon club last fall when Bucky Harris was feted here, Griffith magnanimously said he would not hold Harris responsible for any lack of success by the Nats during the 1935 season. He shouldn't. Harris took over from Joe Cronin a seventh-place ball club, minus the league's best shortstop, and has seen the club reinforced only by the acquisition of Bump Hadley.

Methinks Griffith is passing up a swell opportunity. In their first swing through every city in the league the Nats discovered that the league was not so tough; that any respectable ball club might win the pennant. Their own failures have been due to downright lack of a batting punch and under-manned pitching staff. They still have the nucleus of a ball club capable of winning the pennant with some help in the form of another pitcher and a bit more power at the plate.

Griffith repeats that he is willing to buy players. And then he points out that there are none who will sell. Mebbe so, mebbe so.

Ind., visiting his mother, will return to Washington today to train for the contest. Brown has been training very strenuously for the bout, but has been greatly hampered by lack of sparring partners.

Gallagher On Shelf.

Marty Gallagher, who is conditioned by Brown's trainer, Jim McNamara, is on the shelf with a strained shoulder and has not been able to work with Natie. So serious is the paucity of sparmates that McNamara yesterday issued an S O S call for heavyweight or light-heavyweight sparring partners, with the request that all interested in being punched around by Brown in the gymnasium call Decatur 1671 this morning.

The lid was clamped down tight on speculators yesterday as tickets for the Canzoneri-Klick bout, June 10, moved briskly from the Shrine ticket office, Joe Turner's and Goldie Ahearn's.

"Every request for more than a nominal number of tickets is being carefully investigated," Promoter Turner said yesterday. "We have sold numerous large blocks of tickets, but only to responsible organizations or business men. Most of the business men who are buying between 10 and 20 tickets are regular customers whose usual order is for two to four tickets."

Speculators Blocked.

A block of 100 ringside seats was sold to the Metropolitan Club, a downtown hotel purchased 60, Jimmy Lake, 42; Senator Pat Harrison, 10; Representative Withrow, 10; Pat O'Connor, 25, and many other sales for 10 and 20 seats were recorded.

"Our regular customers will not be victimized by scalpers if this fight should sell out at the last minute," Turner commented. "We'd rather not have all the tickets sold than to dispose of them to speculators. We want our regular customers well taken care of—and we want the new customers completely satisfied—so they'll become regular customers."

The possibility that Jack Dempsey, the Old Man Mauler, would not referee the lightweight contest, grew when the former heavyweight champion through his manager, Max Waxman, refused to appear as third man in the ring for less than the $1,500 that was promised him.

Dempsey was signed at this figure by a member of the Shrine committee before Canzoneri regained his lightweight championship. Turner and Ahearn had nothing to do with signing the erstwhile champion, as promoters of the show were the only ones with authority to do so.

It now is generally felt that Dempsey's presence in the ring is not needed to help swell the gate. A meeting to decide whether or not Dempsey will be used will be held soon.

Nice Appoints Norris To Racing Commission

Annapolis, Md., May 16 (AP).—Gov. Harry W. Nice announced today that George R. Norris, Dundalk business man and well-known figure in racing circles, will become a member of the Maryland Racing Commission next July.

Norris will be the Republican member of the racing commission and the Democrats will hold the majority until terms of Chairman Jervis Spencer, jr., and Edwin M. Arfield expire in 1937.

College Teams Leave Town In Droves

Maryland-Georgetown Ball Game Only Important Event Here.

THE University of Maryland's track squad, 13 strong, yesterday was off to the races—off to the Southern Conference games, while the baseball and lacrosse teams remained at home for two important skirmishes tomorrow. Maryland plays Johns Hopkins in lacrosse at Baltimore, while its aseball forces are meeting Georgetown in a return game at the Hilltop.

Off for distant fields, too, were George Washington's baseball squad, which meets Wake Forest today and Elon tomorrow; Georgetown's golfers who are headed for Boston and matches wtih Harvard and Dartmouth, and the Hilltop trackmen who run against West Virginia tomorrow.

Hopkins has triumphed over the Terp trackmen in their last four matches and holds a decisive margin in their lengthy series. Tomorrow's battle appears to be a toss-up and is certain to be one of the best of the season.

Maryland rules a distinct favorite over Georgetown in baseball, although the Hilarious Hilltoppers are capable of springing an upset.

The Fair Association never gave any indication since the filing of the size of the purses that it would be able to increase them for the meet, General Manager Bester said.

Sixty-two Horse Men Sign.

Petitions signed by 62 horse men demanding an increase from $300 to $400 for purses for each race were handed fair officials at this afternoon's meeting. Bester said he and other officials would make a canvass tomorrow morning for stables already on the grounds to find how many intended not to race their horses and that thesewould be ordered to vacate the grounds by tomorrow night. Because of the great demand for stable space, no trouble was anticipated in obtaining plenty of horses. He atlso has been assured that over 100 horses already here will remain and will race for the $300 purses.

Crane Gets U. R. Coaching Berth

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., May 16.—Appointment of Russell J. Crane, former star athlete at the University of Illinois and at present assistant coach at Mississippi A. & M., to the place of assistant coach at the University of Richmond, was announced today. He will assume his duties here September 1.

In announcing Crane's acceptance of the job, Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite said, "he will have a four-fold job. First of all, he will be line coach. He will be in charge of certain required physical education work. He will coach freshman baseball, and in all probability he will be boxing coach."

Crane, who graduated from the University of Illinois School of Physical Education in 1930 and who has been at Mississippi A. & M. since then, played varsity guard with the Illini and was conference heavyweight wrestling champion of the Big Ten.

"I consider him one of the three best linemen ever turned out by Illinois," Coach Robert Zuppke wrote University of Richmond authorities in a letter of recommendation.

In addition to his record as a Big Ten and all-Western guard, Crane was an Illinois heavyweight champion in boxing. He probably will take over Paddy Mills' job of tutoring the Spider ringmen here.

Askey's Pigeons Ahead In Lonaconing Event

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lonaconing, Md., May 16.—John Askey, Castle Hill, local pigeon fancier, was the winner of first and second places in the first race of the old bird series being conducted by the East End Flying Club of this place. Francis Meyers was the third-place winner.

The race, a 70-mile affair, was flown from West Union, W. Va., the time on the race being very slow as compared with the time made in last year's event. The next race of the series will be flown Sunday, May 19, from Grafton, W. Va., a distance of 100 miles.

Inconsistent Tech and Roosevelt Nines Battle Today in Series

Rivals Risk Their Title Chances

By John R. Vosburgh.

EITHER Tech or Roosevelt is to be escorted out of the inter-high baseball race this afternoon, but latest reports predict stubborn resistance on the part of both before departure is made from the Eastern High field. Each school has won one game and lost one in the series. With both teams as inconsistent as Washington weather in the springtime, the result of today's fray can be nicely summed up in a big question mark.

Roosevelt yesterday extended an invitation to Tech to play the game on Roosevelt's smooth new field instead of on the Eastern diamond, which is as full of faults as the average examination paper. Offering a level, lawn-like infield and a much longer outfield than does the Eastern diamond, the Roosevelt stadium is a strong contrast to the Lincoln Park scraggly infield and abbreviated right field. Tech declined the invitation.

Foxley Predicts Win.

Coach Foxley, now past the Eastern hurdle over which Tech tripped into defeat, envisions a tie with Eastern for the title, using the Ruff Riders as a stepping stone to this end.

The Ruff Riders, on the other hand, consider their defeat at the hands of Western the big upset of the series, and predictions are current in the Roosevelt camp that the Riders will sweep on to the title as cleanly as they turned back Central, once the favorite to take the title, 11 to 3, in the series opener.

Foxley will throw Bill Liggett, his No. 1 pitcher, against the Ruff Riders. Coach Don Brown of the team from the Northwest will retort by rolling out Frank ("Barrel") Baroni Roosevelt's rotund strike-out ace, who fanned 12 Western batters in less than seven innings.

Roosevelt Underdog.

On the basis of comparative scores, Tech reigns the favorite, having trounced Western, 14 to 7, while Roosevelt bowed to the Georgetowners, 13 to 6. Roosevelt, however, pounded the mound corps of the Maryland Freshmen for 14 hits, though being nosed out, 11 to 10, while Tech fell before the Freshmen by a wide margin.

The Ruff Riders have shown themselves the harder-hitting team, having accumulated 22 hits in their two series games, in contrast to Tech's 14 in two games. Liggett, George Hahn, Cotton Crawford and Whitey France comprise the heavy artillery for Tech, but the Ruff Riders can counter with an even more formidable array, including Frank Bailey, George Coakley, Joe Bovello and Baroni.

of the present marks will be bettered, officials believe.

The performances of each individual in the meet will be broadcast to the spectators by the Duke stadium loud-speaking system and not at any time will more than one event be in progress. Magnified measuring rules will enable the crowd to see the distances and heights in each of the field events. Lanes of each of the runners will be broadcast before each race.

Co-ed sponsors have been selected for each of the teams and they will be introduced at Saturday's finals. Entertainment has been planned for the visiting teams and officials.

The time schedule for tomorrow's preliminaries: 2:30, javelin and shot-put; 3, 120-yard high hurdles; 3:15, 100-yard dash; 3:30, 440-yard run; 3:45, 220-yard low hurdles and discus; 4, 220-yard dash; 4:30, 880-yard run and broad jump.

North Carolina's 35-man team tops the list of entries, with Duke second with 33 and Virginia third with 24.

Sarazen Held at 6-1 In 'Book' on U. S. Open

By Alan Gould

Associated Press Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, May 16.—To the surprise of nobody, stocky Gene Sarazen, the "double eagle kid," is a prime favorite in the future books to regain the United States open golf championship this June at Oakmont.

Sarazen is "six, three, two and even," according to the prices posted today by Jack Doyle, veteran Broadway commissioner and a close follower of the golfing wars since Francis Ouimet licked Ted Ray and Harry Vardon at Brookline 22 years ago.

In other words a dollar will get you six, if you think Gene will whip the big international field on a course that is quite generally regarded as the Frankenstein of American links. Not since the retirement of Bob Jones has any golfer other than Sarazen himself been paid the compliment of such a short price in an open tournament.

Dutra, Wood at 8 to 1.

The defending champion, Olin Dutra, is bracketed with blond Craig Wood, runner-up to Sarazen in the Augusta National Invitation Event this spring, as second choice at 8 to 1 in Doyle's book. Henry Picard, who led the winter's money winners, is quoted at 10 to 1 against, with Paul Runyan, the National P. G. A. titleholder, 12 to 1, and Ky Laffoon, 15 to 1.

These six dominate the field, in Doyle's opinion. Here are his quotations on them, across the board:

Gene Sarazen	6	3	2	1	0	0
Olin Dutra	8	3	2	1	1	0
Craig Wood	8	4	3	2	1	0
Henry Picard	10	5	3	2	1	0
Paul Runyan	12	6	4	3	1	0
Ky Laffoon	15	8	5	3	2	1

Ten other professionals are quoted as 20-to-1 shots in Doyle's book. This list includes Harry Cooper, who was runner-up to Tommy Armour the last time the open was held at Oakmont. But Armour is rated no better than 30 to 1 now, eight years after his only conquest in the American championship.

Cruickshank Is 20 to 1.

Other 20-to-1 shots are Wiffy Cox, Bobby Cruickshank, Johnny Revolta, Horton Smith, Leo Diegel, Harold McSpaden, Denny Shute and Byron Nelson. Mangrum and Nelson, products of Texas courses who have affiliations now in California and New Jersey, respectively, are newcomers to the top flight. Nelson's price already has been cut from 50 to 1.

Four former champions, Armour, Walter Hagen, Bill Burke and Willie Macfarlane, are quoted at 30 to 1, along with Sid Brews, the South African challenger. Macdonald Smith, Ralph Guhldahl, Mortie Dutra, Jimmie Hines, Tom Creavy, Al Espinosa, Jimmie Thomson and Victor Ghezzi.

Not a single amateur among some 25 who have qualified for the tournament, including Omaha's Johnny Goodman, 1933 winner, is rated better than a 50-to-1 shot.

"I am 41 years old and realize that I can't get around as actively as I did a few years ago, but nevertheless, I have had no aches nor felt any real fatigue since the spring training. I suffered an attack of influenza early this spring and the present cold is the follow-up.

"One result is that my eyes have been giving me a good deal of trouble. They water considerably and my failure to hit up to my past record undoubtedly is due to this ailment. If I can break this cold I believe I can carry on without any trouble."

'C' Club Meet Records Are Threatened

By John R. Vosburgh.

FLAUNTING an illustrated, glossy-paper program that would do credit to the Penn Relays or the National Intercollegiates, the Central "C" Club yesterday brought out in striking black and white—or rather, in shining blue and white, which are the school colors—a big-league booklet proclaiming its seventeenth annual track meet in Central stadium on Saturday.

Revived on a bigger and better scale than ever and including within its glass-like pages a new airplane vista of the school and stadium, the edition marks the last word in the printer's art, even as Saturday's big classic marks the last word in schoolboy track and field meets for this or any other section in the East.

Tech Again Favored.

It will be Tech High's small army of 30 entries against the field so far as the team championship is concerned and the best bet at this moment is that Tech will win the event for the fourth time in its history. The 24-point margin by which it took first place last year, leading John Marshall, of Richmond, the runners-up, 45½ to 21, will be lacking Saturday, however.

Foremost among the teams certain to put the Techmen on the spot are Newport News High, recent winner of the Virginia State interscholastics; Staunton Military, Virginia State champion; Episcopal High, runner-up to Staunton, and John Marshall, runner-up for the high school title of the State. Staunton was third last year.

If you are looking for some boys fairly sure to win a pair of first places, watch Bill Hopkins, John Marshall sprinter; Monroe Emmerich, Tech hurdler, and Flick Hoxton, Episcopal 440 and 880 yard ace.

Hopkins Set Record.

Hopkins, who set a new meet record last year of 22.2 seconds for the 220, is the favorite to repeat in that event and he is a 10-second man in the century. Emmerich is one of the few men entered considered good enough to knock off a record. He has done 15.8 for the 120-yard high hurdles in contrast to the 15.9 meet record held since 1926 by Harry Flippen, of Episcopal. Hoxton is favored to win the 440 and possibly the half-mile.

In addition to the 220 mark, the only other record near danger will be the 220-yard low hurdles, which Emmerich has already run in 25.8 seconds, in comparison with the 9-year-old record of 25.9, held by Harry Flippen, of Episcopal. Bill Bledsoe, of Fork Union Military, is the only entrant felt strong enough ti imperil his 180-foot-8-inch record set last year in the javelin throw, but Tech's mile and half-mile relay teams will put the records they set last year in those events to the toughest kind of a test.

Union Tradesmen Boycott Colts Nine

Claim Richmond Club Used Scab Labor on Park.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 16.—H. M. Monahan, spokesman for the Central Trades and Labor Council, said today that Richmond labor has boycotted the Richmond Colts Piedmont League Baseball Team because of the employment of non-union labor by the Colts management.

Eddie Mooers, owner of the baseball club, asserted that "The labor people are just trying to revive an old issue in an effort to obtain money unfairly," said, "If the union people don't want to attend our baseball games, that's quite all right. I doubt if there are more than 400 of them anyhow."

Mooers said when he attempted to reconcile the differences between himself and the union organization, he was informed the boycott would be removed if he gave the union $500.

Old Line Freshmen Beat Eastern Nine

University of Maryland's freshman baseball nine registered its sixth consecutive victory by overcoming the strong Eastern High team, leader in the Washington public high school championship race, 8 to 6, yesterday at College Park. The Old Line yearlings now have defeated all the Washington high school nines except Central, which it faces next Wednesday.

The freshmen hopped on George Tucker, Eastern hurler. Joe Sullivan finished the last two innings without being scored on.

Stock Trading Buoyant With Heavy Volume

Inflation Sentiment Lifts Market to Top Since Last July.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 16.—The growing pressure of inflation sentiment blew the lid off the stock market today and prices boiled upward to the highest levels since last July. The movement appeared to have been touched off in part by reports current during the first hour or so of trading that while the President would stick to his plan to veto the Patman bonus the Administration would not exert itself to keep the measure from being passed over the veto.

Even the emphatic word from the White House later in the day, however, that the bill would die of veto trouble if the President could manage it, failed to prevent the market from progressing steadily and gradually higher in later dealings, and broadening out as it rose.

Some leaders in practically all divisions, with the exception of the utility group, pushed ahead as much as 1 to 3 points or so by closing time, with smaller gains general.

With the Associated Press average for 60 stocks up .7 of a point at 42.5, the general market level was the best since July 14, 1934. The previous peak for the current year was 41.8 made last Saturday, which surpassed the highs of early January. Turnover in the stock exchange, at 2,419,010 shares, bettered any since July 26, 1934, when volume was 3,337,620 shares.

Pit Prices Soar On Increased Trader Buying

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 16.—Increased speculative demand ascribed largely to stock-market upturns and to revival of inflation talk led to a brisk advance of grain values today.

Wheat jumped 2 cents a bushel maximum, and corn 2½ cents. Greater relative strength shown by the corn market was chiefly due to planting delays suggesting curtailment of corn acreage, together with likelihood of magnified crop hazards later.

Closing quotations were strong at virtually the day's top, wheat, 1⅛@1⅞ above yesterday's finish, July, 93⅛@94, corn, 1⅞@2½ up, July, 82⅛@83, oats, ½@1¼ advanced, and provisions showing a rise of 10 to 22 cents.

Apprehension about corn planting delays was due to persistent rains and to forecasts of additional moisture making field work difficult.

Provisions rose with hog values and with grains, as well as because of a greater decrease of Chicago provision stocks the past two weeks than was looked for.

Employment Up 65% At Mesta Steel Plant

Pittsburgh, May 16.—As the result of several large orders received this year for steel mill equipment, Mesta Machine Co. of Pittsburgh, announced today that employment at its West Homestead plant had increased to 2,575 men on May 1, as compared with 1,561 on the same date last year, a gain of nearly 65 per cent. The company has started work on two major steel mill contracts for Bethlehem and National Steel.

Int. Nickel Net Is $4,917,627 In 1st Quarter

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 16.—International Nickel Co. of Canada, Ltd., reported a net profit of $4,917,627 for the first three months of 1935, compared with a net of $5,049,276 for the same period in 1934. Earnings per common share, after allowing for preferred dividends, were 30 cents in 1935 and 31 cents in 1934.

The Caterpillar Tractor Co. today reported sales at $3,958,094, with a net profit of $665,227. Net sales for the first four months of the year were $11,561,539, which produced earnings of 92 cents a share on 1,882,240 shares outstanding from the period.

The report said the company hopes during the next year to pay off accumulated preferred dividends amounting to $15.75 a share and to resume payments on common stock.

U. S. Oil Supremacy Shows Steady Decline

New York, May 16 (AP).—Urging conservation of oil reserves, the Lamp, published by the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey asserts that for many years this country's margin of supremacy as a producer has been declining. In 1934, it says, the United States contributed a little more than 59 per cent of world output, the lowest share in 28 years.

At one time in 1923, says the company, American fields produced 71.8 per cent of the world total.

Term Settlement System Proposed as Economy Measure by Some Exchange Houses, But Strong Opposition by Banks, Others Makes Adoption Unlikely.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, May 16.—One proposal that has been advanced by the "New Dealers" among the members of the New York Stock Exchange is the inauguration of a term settlement system, similar to that used on the London Stock Exchange and on a number of the exchanges on the continent of Europe. However, so strong is the opposition voiced to this proposal by banks, as well as other members of the exchange, that it is doubted seriously now that an attempt will be made in the near future to have the board of governors vote upon it.

Under a term settlement system, transactions in securities are settled not by the close of the second following business day, which is the case now, but they remain open until a scheduled "settlement day." In London, this settlement occurs fortnightly, while on some of the continental bourses settlements are made only once monthly. As a result, speculators do not have to pay for their purchases, or arrange delivery against short sales, until the settlement day. If they sell or cover in the interim, they merely receive the profit or pay the loss. Of course, where cash settlement is specified, this can be done under such a system.

The term settlement system has been advocated in this country in the past by bankers such as Gates W. McGarrah, former head of the Bank for International Settlements, and Paul M. Warburg. They favored it primarily as a means of curtailing the volume of bank loans made or the purpose of financing security speculation, hoping thus to avoid the disturbing effect upon banking and business conditions of a security market boom like that of 1928-29.

Proposed Now Solely As Economy Measure.

The latest movement in favor of the introduction of a term settlement system on the New York Stock Exchange is based upon an entirely different argument, however. As a matter of fact, it is generally felt that the margin provisions of the securities exchange act and the power of the Federal Reserve Board to limit security loans to a stated percentage of a bank's capital and surplus, contained in the banking act of 1933, already provide adequate means of curbing excessive security loan expansion.

Those stock exchange members who favor the term settlement system, and have urged the special committee on commissions of the exchange to recommend it, want it as a means of reducing their operating costs. Until September, 1933, the stock exchange required the settlement of floor transactions before the close of the next following business day. As a means of evening out the clerical and bookkeeping work in brokerage houses and of reducing the amount of overtime work required of employes, in view of the provisions of the stock exchange code for special compensation for such work, the stock exchange then adopted the present system of settlement by the close of the second business day following the transaction.

It is reasoned that through a fortnightly or monthly settlement, the routine work of a brokerage house office could be further spread out, thus leading to an additional reduction in costs. Even with the present average volume of trading of about 1,250,000 shares for a five-hour session, most brokerage houses find it very difficult to make a profit. Thence the agitation for increases in commissions charged the public and reductions in the commissions paid floor brokers, which continues under the surface for the time being while the election of new officials of the exchange has been going on, but which will be brought to the surface soon with the publication of the report of the special committee on commissions. The term settlement proposal has been revived as another remedy for the situation created by the relatively small turnover, through reducing the operating expenses of commission houses.

Banks Lead Opposition To Term Settlement Plan.

New York banks strongly oppose the term settlement proposal because it will tend to reduce the volume of business they do in connection with stock exchange activity. Through the years, and at considerable expense to themselves, the Wall street banks have developed an extensive organization for the making of brokers' loans, the handling of security transfers, etc. A term settlement system will reduce permanently the already severely curtailed demand for such accommodation.

Both bankers and many members of the exchange express opposition to the term settlement idea also because they believe it may break down with any sharp expansion in turnover. It is stated that markets having the term settlement system have a much smaller average volume of trading than does New York. Postponement of settlement of the bulk of security transactions until the end of the fortnight or month would bring a huge accumulation of work for the settlement days. The need for a larger staff at that time may more than offset the economies in operation that will be possible in the period between settlement days. Hence, these opponents say that the economies will be more apparent than real, and that especially at first an increase rather than a decline in expenses will occur.

Other objections are voiced against the plan. Thus, it is pointed out that postponement of settlement may enable a financially insolvent member of the exchange to continue in business, thus endangering the solvency of other members. Also, some question is raised whether the Securities and Exchange Commission would favor the idea.

These objections, and above all the very decided opposition from the banks, have caused the special committee on commissions to refrain from taking any stand on the term settlement proposal, even though it is reported favored by several influential commission house members of the exchange.

Bank Clearings Up 23% Here; Off Elsewhere

$17,797,122 Was Total Last Week; $14,457,283 a Year Ago.

By Karl von Lewinski.

In the face of a sharp decline in national bank clearings during the past week the Washington Clearing House yesterday reported an increase of 23 per cent in check debits for the week ended Wednesday, May 15, compared with the same week a year ago.

The total of $17,797,122 that was cleared through local banks in the week compared with $14,457,283 that passed through in the same period of 1934.

Advices received from Dun & Bradstreet in New York yesterday indicated that the clearings of the 22 largest cities in the same time had fallen off 5.3 per cent from last year, in contrast with a gain of 21 per cent in the previous week.

Aggregate debits for the 22 cities were $4,724,753,000, during the past week while in the same week of 1934, $4,991,490,000 was cleared.

Below Preceding Week.

Despite the gain in turnover scored in Washington, the total for the past week failed by more than $2,000,000, or 10 per cent, to equal the record of the previous week when $19,922,763 was cleared.

One of the largest percentage declines was recorded in New York, where the total slumped 10.3 per cent to a sum of $3,013,025,000 in the week. The aggregate for centers outside of New York made a slightly better showing with a drop of but 4.8 per cent for a total of $1,711,728,000.

Most noteworthy in the decline was the fact that during the 2 preceding weeks, clearings in the Nation were successively at the peak for many months past. Extent of the loss may best be indicated by last week's drop of $1,518,164,000 below the first week of May, whereas for the same two weeks of 1934 the decline was only $165,611,000, termed a normal reduction.

Bond Club Outing.

The guest list for the annual outing of the Washington Bond Club on May 24 has been closed, President James Parker Nolan announced yesterday. To date 130 reservations have been received for the event scheduled to take place at the Burning Tree Country Club.

Registrations for the Bond Club Stock Exchange, which features the distribution of a new Ford, also have been closed, Syndicate Manager Carl R. Kurtz reported. Interest in the exchange which will apportion more than $1,000 worth of prizes has been unusually heavy this year.

The program for the meeting includes golf and horse-shoe pitching tournaments. At the dinner following the outing, T. Baker Robinson, chairman of the nominating committee, will propose officers for the coming year. As nominations will not be opposed, the following are expected to be named: James H. Lemon, president; Carl R. Kurtz, vice president; T. C. Montgomery, secretary-treasurer; L. Clark Brown and Chauncey G. Parker, jr., board of governors.

Seaboard Air Line.

Local holders of receivers' and equipment trust certificates and of underlying bonds of the Seaboard Air Line Railway Co. have been asked for deposit of their securities under a plan recently worked out to care for defaulted obligations of the company and at the same time cut the annual burden of fixed charges.

The proposal, approved by the United States District Courts for the Eastern District of Virginia and the Southern District of Florida, has been outlined for the holders in a letter signed by the receivers, L. R. Powell, jr., and H. W. Anderson.

The gist of the plan is that outstanding receivers' certificates and equipment trusts will be exchanged for new receivers' certificates, maturing in 1945, and certain underlying bonds will receive half the regular rate of interest until 1939.

Life Insurance Week.

Life Insurance Week moved forward rapidly at the half-way mark yesterday with more than 73 per cent of the quota off 1,000 applications already received.

About 400 local life underwriters are participating in the week's campaign to better acquaint the public with the benefits of life insurance.

Official recognition of the drive was extended to D. A. Linton, chairman of the national campaign, by Daniel C. Roper, United States Secretary of Commerce, yesterday.

In a telegram containing the official's well wishes for the successful conclusion of the week, he lauded the "immeasurable contributions that have been made to the economic and social welfare of the Nation by the institution of life insurance."

In the local campaign which has been divided into teams by Chairman Winthrop Batcheldor, group No. 25, captained by F. H. Stricklin, was in the lead with a total of 55 applications. The group led by Roy Hughes stood second with 38½, while Robert T. Nichols and his team are in runner-up position with 35 policies applied for.

First place among the individual producing agents for the first three days of the week was won yesterday by Maj. Guy Withers with 16 applications, second place by Sidney Simon, with 14 applications, and third by Ellis Silverstone, with 12 applications.

Air-Conditioning Sales Tenfold 1934 Quarter

Detroit, May 16.—Kelvinator Corporation reported today that its sales of air-conditioning equipment for the first four months of the year are more than ten times greater than those for the same period of 1934.

"We note a number of installations where other factors besides temperature control are present, such as noise elimination and air purification," said Vice President H. W. Burritt.

Member Bank Balances Rise $64,000,000

Total Is 4.8 Billions or 2 Billions Over Legal Requirements.

By the Associated Press.

Member bank reserve balances resumed their upward climb during the week ended May 15, the weekly condition statement of the Federal Reserve Bank disclosed, rising $64,000,000 for the period, to total $4,822,000,000. This total is $1,128,000,000 in excess of the comparable date last year, and is calculated to be more than $2,000,000,000 in excess of legal requirements.

Monetary gold stocks rose $9,000,000 during the week and total Reserve bank credit increased $7,000,000 during the same period. The condition statement said:

"The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended May 15, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,485,000,000, an increase of $14,000,000 compared with the preceding week, and of $3,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

"On May 15 total Reserve bank credit amounted to $2,473,000,000, an increase of $7,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with an increase of $64,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and a decrease of $2,000,000 in Treasury and national bank currency, offset in part by an increase of $9,000,000 in monetary gold stock and by decreases of $2,000,000 in money in circulation, $37,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks and $12,000,000 in non-member deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts."

Bonds Stage Brisk Upturn Led by Rails

Secondary Issues Most in Demand; Federals Are Steady.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 16.—Led by the so-called secondary rails and scattered issues of a more or less speculative rating, the bond market enjoyed one of its best sessions of the year today.

While the upturn in the lower-priced groups was attributed largely to a revival of inflationary psychology, the prime investment low-yield loans did not indicate that they were particularly disturbed by this left turn in market thought. As a matter of fact, bonds in the higher brackets showed only small fractional changes at the close and U. S. Government securities were not especially unsettled.

The second-grade groups took their cut from stocks, which surged forward following rumors from Washington that, while the President would veto the Patman fiat money bonus bill, some Administration leaders would not be averse to passage of the measure over the official disapproval of the Chief Executive. A statement was issued from the White House later, however, to the effect that it was sincerely desired that the expected veto be sustaind.

Today's transfers of all bonds amounted to $16,720,000, par value, the largest day's turnover since March 11, last. The Associated Press rail average advanced eight-tenths of a point.

Cotton Again At 12c Level

Rally Carries March Contracts to 12.04; May Lower.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 16.—Twelve-cent cotton appeared here today for the first time since March 11 on commission house buying promoted by the strength of stocks. Demand was not active, however, and final prices were 2 points net lower to 5 higher.

The rally carried March contracts up to 12.04 or 7 points net higher, but current May deliveries were relatively heavy owing to issuance of notices against 2,800 bales at the opening. That month declined to a net loss of 12 points early in the day while other positions eased 3 to 5 points.

Traders were still cautious in following the advance beyond the 12-cent level, and a fair volume of profit-taking developed at the new highs for the current movement.

Food Index Is Lower But Above Last Year

New York, May 16 (AP).—The Dun & Bradstreet weekly food index declined 1 cent to $2.61 for the week ended May 14, bringing the current figure to within 3 cents of the 1935 low established on January 1.

It also marks a drop of 10 cents in the past month, but the figure remains well above the $2.09 index for the corresponding week of last year.

South Dakota Sells $3,000,000 Bond Issue

Pierre, S. Dak., May 16 (AP).—The South Dakota Rural Credit Board yesterday sold a $3,000,000 issue of refunding bonds to a banking syndicate at par with a coupon interest rate of 4½ per cent plus a $3,000 premium and accured interest from May 1, when the bonds are dated.

Funds derived from the sale will be used to retire 5 and 5½ per cent bonds maturing July 1. The issue was purchased by a syndicate headed by Edward B. Smith & Co., of New York.

Bill Puts Bank Into Politics, Muir Charges

Cleveland, Ohio, May 16.—Title two of the proposed banking legislation would make it possible for the present Administration and any others following it to obtain complete control of the Federal Reserve Board within one week, Malcolm Muir, president of the McGraw-Hill Publishing Co., declared here in attacking the pending banking law proposals that would establish political control over credits, speaking before the annual convention of the National Metal Trades Association. "It is my firm conviction," Mr. Muir declared, "that this is the most portentous piece of legislation offered with a reasonable possibility of enactment within the memory of anyone now living."

Directing his attack principally at title two of the proposed act, Mr. Muir said: "It is title two that gives bankers, business men and economists grave concern. For this part of the act would deliver to this Administration and to every subsequent administration that shall have its headquarters at the White House, complete control over our banking system.

"This means not only the regulation of currency, which is the proper function of the National Administration, but the management of credit which is the proper function of a non-political body. And the proposed law gives the Federal Reserve Board a particular mandate to so manage credit and currency as to regulate the business of the country in such a fashion as the Administration may deem advisable or expedient.

"Unsatisfactory as this often is, compare it with what the new bill proposes. The new bill provides for the appointment of the members of the Reserve Board by the President to serve for 12 years as at present and it empowers the President to appoint, without approval of Congress, any one of the members of the Federal Reserve Board to act as governor, to serve at the pleasure of the President.

"But here is the catch. If the governor is deposed by the President, he automatically is dropped as a member of the board. Thus, by appointing a new governor of the board each day and dismissing him the next, the President could reconstitute the entire board within one week. All semblance of independence or of an impartial board would immediately pass out of the picture. This political domination would extend throughout the Federal Reserve system and the district Federal Reserve banks."

Business Notes.

The board of directors of Frank R. Jelleff, Inc., has announced that at its meeting this week, following the annual meeting of stockholders, Miss Margaret Gollan, who has long been in the employ of the store, was elected a vice president.

Miss Gollan is the active ready-to-wear merchandise manager and assistant to the president, Frank R. Jelleff.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—A cheerful tone prevailed on the stock exchange today and prices were firm. Oil shares were the most active on the good Shell dividend, while British funds and industrial issues were supported on better trade returns. Gold mining shares and home rails eased as transatlantic issues showed a good tendency. The market closed firm.

Paris—A general advance, which left only rentes sagging, prevailed in an active session on the bourse today. International French industrials, rubber and metal shares all showed appreciable advances, which were partially strengthened by the end of the Franco-Russian conversations. The market closed moderately active.

Berlin—After a firm opening dullness developed on the boerse today due to the lack of orders. The closing was quiet.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

In London the dollar gave ground at 4.88 5-16 to the pound sterling, while the British unit continued to advance in New York at 4.88¼, up ⅛ of a cent.

The dollar was firmer in Paris at the equivalent of 6.588 cents for the French franc, but later in New York the franc was unchanged at 6.59.

The Dutch guilder responded to Wednesday's reduction in the Bank of the Netherlands discount rate with a lift of .06 of a cent to 67.80 cents in American dealings. The Swiss franc, however, was .01 of a cent lower at 32.33 cents.

U. S. Treasury Receipts.

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips.

Painless Radio Entertainment.

Radio is to go nonrepellant. One of the big networks has decided that the medical lecture is not the apex of polite fireside entertainment.

* * * *

Deodorant depilatory and laxative programs are to be silenced or rigidly restricted and even those bad-breath talks are to be toned down.

* * * *

As a step further in the job of making the radio more endurable the nonmedical commercials will also be preshrunk, a limit of 10 per cent of the program time being placed on advertising ballyhoo.

* * * *

All of which comes as grand news to the Great Unpitied Audience.

* * * *

Those commercials had become so long that a great many people had sold their radios and taken to reading the billboards instead.

* * * *

After June 30 all advertising talks on Columbia network will be brief, the theory being that a radio audience can be made conscious of an advertised product without being driven mad or put to sleep.

* * * *

Things had reached a stage where tuning in on the rdaio had all the charm of attending a salesmen's convention. To listen to the air programs had come to mean a jolly evening of implicit instructions in how to pen essays on cigar wrappers and solve puzzles on the tops of cough drop boxes.

* * * *

* * * *

Columbia announces that it will also do something about the children's hour. Thanks to the programs developed during the past two years, the kiddies have been going around with their hair on end most of the time.

* * * *

The old-time dime novel may have been a bad influence, but it was a Hans Christian Andersen fairy book compared to the current radio set-up for nursery entertainment.

* * * *

Giving Junior his Bedtime Murder has been quite the caper over our national networks. The gangster movies gave the children a crime course two or three times a year, but the radio gave it to the little darlings every afternoon and evening.

* * * *

It now looks as if the radio people had begun to realize they have children of their own.

* * * *

On with the good work. Maybe the radio audience will come back and forgive everything.

And Some Go Astray.

"The acknowledged destiny of a pig is sausage or ham or bacon or pork."—President Roosevelt. You'd be surprised, Franklin, to know how many wind up as automobilists, market manipulators and lobbyists.

Elmer Twitchell insists that the orchestra, fading out just as Mr. Morgenthau took the air, played "Silver Threads Among the Gold."

Well, Barbara Hutton has introduced the streamline, one-piece divorce-wedding.

Mineral Studies To Feature Hike On Goose Creek

Wanderbird Trip to Take In Old Quarry Near Leesburg.

By Robert Shosteck.

The great variety of minerals to be found in the famous trap rock quarry will be one of the attractions of Sunday's Wanderbird trip along Goose Creek, near Leesburg, Va. This quarry, from which material for railroad beds has been taken for many decades, is still being operated by the Washington & Old Dominion Railway.

Among the more interesting minerals to be found are mountain leather, a showy rock incrusted with asbestos; prehnite, a pea-green crystalline stone, and zeolite, a rock containing aluminum and silica. A visit is also planned to the old Edward's Ferry, on the Potomac, at the end of the Goose Creek gorge.

Readers of The Washington Post and club members planning to go on this 8-mile hike will meet in front of The Post Building at 9 a. m. for the bus trip to Goose Creek Tavern, the starting point. Round-trip fare for this 33-mile ride will be 70 cents. Reservations must be made at National 4200 by midnight Saturday.

Leaving the buses at the tavern, the group will follow the trail along the west bank of Goose Creek for 2 miles to Edwards Ferry. The gorge is very scenic and is of botanical interest because of the variety of flowers to be found. The old ferry landing dates back to pre-Civil War days.

Retracing their steps to the tavern, the hikers will follow the trial along the east bank of Goose Creek for 2 miles to Trap Rock Quarry. Dr. Ulke, who is leading this trip, will direct the collection of minerals and explain the origin and use of many of the rocks. The zeolite is of particular value as a water softener. In regions where hard water abounds, the city water supply is filtered through a bed of zeolitic rock, which removes lime salts and thus saves a great amount of soap.

In the neighboring woods, fox squirrels, wild turkeys and chipmunks are still found, according to hunters and naturalists. The hikers will inspect the complicated rock-crushing machinery and then cross the high bridge over the creek to the rolling pastures on the west side. We follow an interesting trail over the low hills and along the river bank to the tavern, where refreshments may be obtained. The buses should reach Washington by 7 p. m.

The Wildflower Preservation Society and the Department of Agriculture Hiking Club will hold a joint outing to Bull Run Mountains, Va. Mr. Thomas will lead this 6-mile trip along the mountain ridge to the top of the Bull Run peak. The advance scouting party reports redbud, dogwood, azalea, lupine and showy orchis now in flower. The group will meet at Fourteenth street and Constitution avenue at 8:15 a. m. and the bus fare will be about $1.50. Reservations must be made by this evening with Mr. Ricker at Cleveland 2488.

Bull Run Mountains will also be the goal of the Red Triangle hikers who meet Sunday at 9:45 at Seventeenth street and New York avenue. Their plans include a swim in Broad Run in the weather permits. Dallas Talbert will lead this trip. The cost will be but 35 cents.

The program of the Biological Society for Saturday's meeting at the Cosmos Club includes an exhibit and lecture on the breeding and culture of tropical fish, and an illustrated talk on interesting flies found in Washington by Mr. Alan Stone, of the National Museum. These lectures are free and open to the public.

Dr. Titus Ulke will give an illustrated talk on the "Scenic Canadian Rockies" as part of the program of next Friday's National Park Service campfire party at Pierce Mill in Rock Creek Park. The lecture will start at 8 p. m.

Slipped on Ice Cream, Is Awarded $10,000

A jury in the District Supreme Court yesterday awarded Lilla T. Capers a verdict for $10,000 for injuries she received when she slipped and fell in an apartment building controlled by Washington Properties, Inc.

Through the law firm of Frost, Myers & Towers, she claimed the manager of the apartment permitted a quantity of cream to accumulate on a composition floor. As she walked over the floor, she said, the slippery substance caused her to fall. Her arm was broken and she was otherwise injured. Justice Jennings Bailey heard the case.

Dr. Berry to Present Oberammergau Play

Under auspices of the Young People's Council of the National City Christian Church, Dr. Ira P. Berry will give a dramatic and illustrated description of the Passion Play of Oberammergau in the Vermont Social Hall today at 8 p. m.

Dr. Berry and his assistants will impersonate various characters in the cast of the great German religious spectacle. Dr. Berry has studied with the actors in Oberammergau, and has given his presentation in more than 2,000 American churches.

United Jewish Appeal Records $3,200 Gifts

New impetus was given the United Jewish Appeal yesterday with the addition of $3,200 in contributions collected during the past two days.

More than $15,000 have been realized so far, with the campaign scheduled to last another two weeks. Isadore Hershfield, drive chairman, reported yesterday at a luncheon meeting in the Jewish Community Center that collections were running 33 per cent better than at this time last year.

The Federal Diary

Trade-Mark Registered U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

EVIDENCE came to light yesterday afternoon that bitter foes of Section 213 (marriage clause) of the economy act are looking to the new efficiency rating system for loopholes to escape enforcement.

BAKER.

Most flagrant of this evidence was found at Internal Revenue, where section chiefs are reported to have assured married couples they would be given higher efficiency ratings than single employes, or employes whose husband or wives are not with the Government. The latter group, of course, includes employes who are heads of families.

A typical example of the injustices and discriminations prevalent in enforcing Section 213 in most of the Government offices is in the Income Tax Unit, Internal Revenue. Here, it was learned on good authority, a man and his wife, whose combined salaries total more than $7,500 a year, have been promised excellent efficiency ratings to insure their retaining their jobs in the event of reductoins in personnel in the future. The same couple, we were told, have outside incomes in addition to their Federal salaries. The wife is said to be operating a lucrative candy and cake business and the husband is a minister and devotes considerable time in occupying the pulpit of a church in a nearby suburb. The couple is said to be childless and otherwise free of dependents.

From dozens of cases in the same bureau we find, at random, the case of a $1,620 a year stenographer being compelled to resign in order for her husband to retain his $80 a month job at Navy Yard, on which his professional career hinges.

Indignant employes in various offices are planning to take steps to bring about a congressional investigation of the entire section 213 enforcement and evasion since the efficiency rating phase has arisen.

While the two major employe federations have officially and emphatically gone on record as opposed to section 213, it is known that such a stand does not by any means reflect the attitude of a large majority of their members.

Tenschert Photo.

CLARENCE ALBRIGHT, of Accounts and Collections, Internal Revenue, sang last night at the card party and dance given by Lodge No. 47, A. F. G. E., at the Wardman Park Hotel. Mr. Albright is a tenor and appears frequently on employe programs.

AAA got back to normal yesterday afternoon after being in the throes of the first cash pay day. Employes are looking forward to June 1 with mingled joy and dread, hoping that the pay system will be functioning smoothly by then.

George V. Newton Returns.

Reinstated as deputy commissioner, George V. Newton is renewing old contacts at Internal Revenue. According to the office of information, Mr. Newton was appointed at Baltimore and has been assigned to Washington. He has been representing taxpayers in connection with cases before the bureau.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C follows your name in this column call in person on the Federal Diary editor today between 4:30 and 6 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Venita Gould, Texas Rangers and other acts; screen, Shirley Temple and Joel McCrea in "Our Little Girl"); or to P, Loew's Palace (second week of Frederic March and Charles Laughton in "Les Miserables"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy in "Naughty Marietta").

Will not Congressmen kindly perceive
That we clerks need their 30 days leave;
That we can not go home,
See our fair land or roam
In the half time that we now receive?

Mrs. J. L. O'Connell (F), Register's Office, Treasury.

The College of Charleston (S. C.), the oldest municipal college in America, awarded 20 honorary degrees of doctor of laws Tuesday to distinguished Americans, five of them Government men. They are:

Robert Worth Bingham, Ambassador to the Court of St. James'; James Francis Byrnes, Senator from South Carolina; Ferdinand Augustus Silcox, chief forester of the United States; Gen. Charles Pelot Summerall, U. S. A., retired, and Willis Van Deventer, associate justice, U. S. Supreme Court.

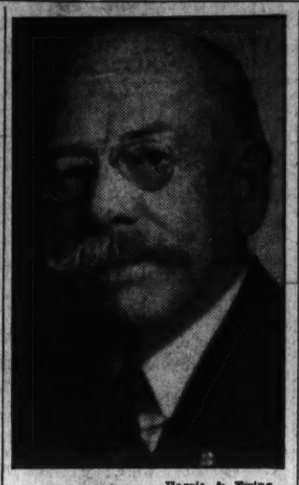
Gerald R. Cooley (P), Accounts Unit Internal Revenue, today celebrates two anniversaries—his twentieth year with the Government and his birthday.

COMPLETING the most successful spring tournament ever held by the Coast and Geodetic Survey Golf Association, the winners are announced as follows:

Main event, E. E. Zuck (F), consolation, F. S. Borden (C); dubs, H. G. Dorsey, jr., and cream puffs, A. A. Varela.

Mr. Dorsey is the 1934 champion and will defend his title in the cup tournament, beginning May 23. Only four matches of the 65 were defaulted on account of illness or inability to play in the week allowed for each match.

Incidentally, Oliver Hackleton (C), holed out a spoon shot for an eagle two on the 366-yard seventh hole of F course at East Potomac last Sunday. Playing with him were several members of the Survey.



Harris & Ewing.

JOHN W. GINDER, of Procurement Division, Treasury, again heads the D. C. Federation of Federal Employes Unions, N. F. F. E., being installed as president with other federation officers at a dinner meeting last night at the Y. W. C. A.

Labor Parley Opens Monday.

Forty organized labor organizations in Washington will be represented at the Maryland-District of Columbia State Federation of Labor convention at Salisbury, Md., John Locher, president of the Central Labor Union, said yesterday. The annual joint meeting will open Monday and continue through Wednesday. Gov. Harry Nice, of Maryland, will speak Tuesday.

French Show Tonight.

A French play, "Separation," by Charasson, will be presented by members of the teaching staff at George Washington University at 8:15 o'clock tonight in the parish hall of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. Presented by the Franco-American young people's group in the church, the presentation is open to those who understand the French language.
